British Ask Law For War on Sea; U-Boats Curbed

Reich Promises To Restrict Craft

3 Major Powers Asked to Join in Backing Washington Pact.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 25.—Great Britain, on the heels of Germany's sweeping promise never again to engage in unrestricted submarine warfare, today made ready to discuss naval issues with France, Italy and Russia.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin informed the House of Commons that the three had been invited to send delegations to London, but dodged questions as to whether all the invitations had been accepted.

A short time before, Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, stirred the legislators to cheers with the announcement that the Reich had given her pledge to adhere to the rules and regulations regarding submarine warfare in Part IV of the Washington Treaty, regardless of the attitude of other powers.

Passengers Safeguarded.

(Part IV of the treaty provides that warships, "whether surface vessel or submarine boat," may not attack a merchant vessel "without first having placed her passengers, crew and ship's papers in a place of safety," except "in case of persistent refusal to stop on being duly summoned, or of active resistance to visit or search.")

Baldwin, asserting his government was pushing efforts for settlement of Europe's naval problems, said plans for further bilateral discussions similar to those which resulted in the 100-35 naval ratio between Britain and Germany had not been completed.

France, Italy Not Bound.

Sir Bolton told the Commons the Reich had agreed to observe the Washington treaty's restrictions on submarine warfare "irrespective of whether they are adhered to by other powers."

While Great Britain, Japan, the United States, France and Italy signed the Washington treaty, he pointed out, only the first three are "juridically bound" by it "because France and Italy did not ratify it."

Some caustic comment followed, Aneurin Bevan, Labor party member, asking whether any warring nation on the verge of defeat would abide by treaty provisions if that meant losing the war.

"That would be the policy of despair," Sir Bolton retorted, while the house cheered. "That would mean no treaty could be made with anybody; that would mean a return to jungle war."

Bevan replied that the world's nations "are under jungle rule now," while William James Thorne, Labor member, observed: "Germany gave an undertaking not to violate Belgium, but she did."

Arms Loan Denied.

Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, in effect denied reports that British arms firms had lent Germany "millions sterling to enable her to purchase British armaments."

Walter S. Liddall, Conservative, referred to the reports and asked whether there was any truth in them.

Runciman said his statement in reply to another question—that no licenses had been issued during the last 12 months for exports of arms to Germany—would suffice as an answer to Liddall.

That drew fire from David Kirkwood, Laborite, who charged Britain all along had been exporting valuable metals to Germany to enable the Reich to manufacture arms.

The speaker intervened, and the Labor member finally sat down shouting that his question "did not suit the government."

Paris, June 25 (AP).—A stronger French fleet as an answer to Adolf Hitler's proposed big navy today was approved in the Chamber of Deputies' naval committee, after it heard Naval Minister Francois

Buyers' Strike Feared As Meat Prices Soar

Protests against rising meat prices are deluging the Department of Agriculture and causing fear of a buyers' strike, the Associated Press said yesterday.

AAA officials were quoted as saying they were looking toward a continued rise in meat prices until autumn, and said there was little they could do about it.

In a report to Secretary Wallace, Administrator C. C. Davis said cattle and hog prices would be higher this year than in 1934, due to the production control program and the drought.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, stated: "Prices will continue to rise unless the consumers buck up their sales resistance through a consumers' strike or their inability to buy meat.

Lawyer Guilty Of Concealing Dillinger's Pal

Chicago Verdict Held Gain for U. S. in Drive Upon 'Attorney-Criminal.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 25.—Louis P. Piquette—target No. 1 in the Government's efforts to exterminate "lawyer-criminals"—was speedily convicted today of harboring Homer Van Meter, machine gunner of the Dillinger mob.

A Federal court jury deliberated a little more than an hour before reaching a verdict against the gray-haired barrister the prosecution had called the "mouthpiece" of the notorious gang.

Judge Philip L. Sullivan deferred passing sentence until arguments on a motion for a new trial are heard Thursday.

Facing a maximum prison term of two years and a fine of $10,000, Piquette received the verdict without a trace of emotion.

He kissed his wife, then asserted: "I'm going to fight this out to the end."

There was no demonstration—in keeping with the jurist's order.

Prosecution Elated.

The prosecution's elation was expressed by Assistant United States Attorney General Brien McMahon.

"The move to eliminate the lawyer-criminal from society has received great impetus by this verdict," he said.

Piquette, still flushed from the fighting finish he had made in a personal plea for "vindication," walked slowly from the courtroom. He was permitted to remain free on bond pending a decision on his counsel's efforts to obtain a new trial.

The jury was given the case against John Dillinger's attorney at 1:23 p. m. It found him guilty at 3:40, after spending an hour at lunch. Three ballots were reported to have been taken.

Blames Dillinger.

Piquett was the first member of the bar to be convicted of violation of a 1934 law designed to penalize persons who extend extra-legal aid to public enemies. McMahon predicted the law will be a powerful factor in the anti-crime drive. Several physicians and other persons already have been imprisoned for harboring the Dillinger mobsters.

The jurors retired with the prosecution's appellation—"master criminal"—ringing in their ears. They also had heard the defendant argue his innocence of charges of harboring the notorious Van Meter in an impassioned closing plea.

Italy Seeking 'Slavery' End In Abyssinia

Mussolini Informs Eden He Will Safeguard British Interests.

Says Aim in Africa Is to 'Promote Work of Civilization.'

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, June 25.—A high government official tonight declared that Italy's "mission" in East Africa is to impose a "harmonious regime" in Abyssinia.

The official simultaneously said Italy had offered full safeguards to British rights in Abyssinia in the pursuit of this far-reaching campaign.

These significant revelations on Italy's Abyssinian program were made by Alessandro Lessona, undersecretary for colonies and right-hand man for Premier Benito Mussolini in African affairs.

Lessona said in an exclusive interview that Italy likewise would safeguard interests of any other powers while proceeding with her task of "promoting the work of civilization," especially in abolishing slavery from Ethiopia.

Two-Day Conference Ends.

The interview followed conclusion of a two-day conference between Mussolini and Anthony Eden, the British statesman, during which they reached a thorough understanding of their government's positions on the Abyssinian issue.

Mussolini and Eden frankly revealed their attitudes on numerous issues in Africa and Europe in an effort to retain the united front established among the former allied powers—Italy, Britain and France.

Their communiques were vague, but Lessona was permitted to speak frankly and openly on Rome's policies shortly after the parley ended.

"We consider our mission in Ethiopia is sincerely and definitely to abolish slavery," Lessona said, "and to substitute oppression by Abyssinian soldiers on the people of the Galla, Sidama and Somali regions by a harmonious regime of order and civil progress.

"We shall give to Abyssinia herself an opportunity to participate in modern civilization and the organization of a society according to the most developed peoples—this is the mission of Italy.

"Italy fully intends to safeguard British rights in Abyssinia. Every one should be pleased at the forthcoming abolition of danger from a disorganized, slave-ridden Ethiopia."

Observers understood that Eden made "substantial concessions" in regard to the Italian program in Abyssinia on condition that Italy abandon her reservations concerning the new Anglo-German naval agreement. Italy was reported, however, to have withheld any formal decisions on this "deal."

A Frank Interview.

Meanwhile, Rome's warlike preparations will be continued according to schedule.

Lesonna's interview even overshadowed the official communique on the Eden-Mussolini talks in its frankness of expression on Italy's ambitions in Abyssinia.

It is now believed Mussolini was in a position to show Eden, as Lessona's statement indicated, that Italy always has safeguarded British interests according to the letter and spirit of past-signed agreements.

Lessona said that other States should be pleased at Italy's determination to rid Abyssinia of alleged slavery, adding: "Such solidarity is in any event assured, especially in the case of Britain, by definite agreements . . .

"These agreements cover definite respective spheres of influence in Ethiopia. Likewise, the question of Lake Tsana has been settled by the agreement signed between Premier Mussolini and former Ambassador Graham in 1925."

Religious Rioting Breaks Out Again in Edinburgh Streets

By the Associated Press.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 25.—Religious rioting broke out again in Edinburgh tonight when thousands of Protestants attempted to break up an organized procession of the Blessed Sacrament by members of the Roman Catholic community.

The procession was in connection with the Eucharistic Congress being held here.

Main streets adjoining the grounds of St. Andrew's priory were jammed with Protestants and the rioting spread so quickly that 300 police, including mounted officers, were called out to handle the situation.

Cries of "No Popery" and "Down with the Pope" were hurled at the Catholics as they arrived at the priory. The crowd continued shouting during the service.

A similar riot yesterday, in which police charged some 3,000 Protestants who hurled bottles and stones at Catholic women and priests, today resulted in conviction of seven men of creating a breach of the peace. They were fined £10 ($50) each, failing payment of which they were to serve one month in jail.

A number of arrests were made tonight as police fought to restore order.

As the crowds became uglier in their attitude, officials of the Protestant Actions Society appealed to all Protestants to assist police in restoring order.

A Catholic priest and layman were mobbed when they attempted to board a street car. Police intervened to rescue them. Similar incidents occurred all over the area near the priory.

During the service Archbishop MacDonald advised Catholics to remove their congress badges as a precaution when leaving the grounds. It was estimated 10,000 Catholics were present at the open-air procession.

Louis Floors Carnera, Michigan Wins at Golf

Joe Louis, the hard-hitting Detroit Negro, continued his meteoric rise in the fistic firmament by knocking out Primo Carnera in the sixth round of their scheduled 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium, New York, last night. By his victory Louis clearly and definitely established himself as a top-flight heavyweight and one of the outstanding contenders for the crown which Jimmy Braddock lifted from Max Baer a little over a week ago.

In the national intercollegiate golf tournament in progress at Congressional Country Club, three men tied for the medal. Michigan, the favorite, won the team trophy, two of its players, Charles Koscis and Woodrow Malloy, tying with Lewis Johnson, of the College of Charleston, S. C., for medal honors.

Cutting Estate Of $4,000,000 Shared by 183

3 Relatives to Get Balance After Gifts Totaling $1,600,000.

Twelve sheets of Senate stationery, covered with the sometimes sprawling and sometimes cramped handwriting of the late Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, yesterday spread his estate of nearly $4,000,000 among 183 friends and relatives.

Filed for probate in the office of the District register of wills, the last will and testament of the Senator who was killed on May 6 in an airplane accident listed more than $1,000,000 in cash bequests and left the bulk of the estate to his two sisters and a niece.

One hundred and eighty friends and former employes of the late Senator are named in alphabetical order, some when the will was originally written in 1925 and some inserted in their proper places when it was rewritten on December 20, 1934. The names were tabulated in column form.

The unusual document, which is almost barren of legal phraseology, disposes of exactly $1,106,000 in cash bequests and names as principal beneficiaries Mrs. Justine B. Ward, who lives abroad, and Mrs. Olivia James, of New York, sisters, and Iris Origo, niece, who also lives abroad.

91 to Get $1,000 Each.

To 91 friends in New Mexico and to Patrick Duffy, butler in his Washington home, the Senator left bequests of $1,000 each. The largest single bequest was to Senator Cutting's old friend, Jesus M. Baca, of Santa Fe, N. Mex., to whom he left his newspaper, the Santa Fe New Mexican, and $150,000. Baca was closely associated with Cutting in matters of veterans' welfare.

The will named Senator Cutting's mother, Mrs. Olivia M. Cutting, of Oakdale, N. Y., and Baca as executors. No specific bequest was made to his mother, and friends yesterday suggested that his mother's own independent wealth undoubtedly accounted for the omission.

Besides the 91 persons receiving $1,000 each, the will provides that 50 are to receive $2,500, 18 are to get $5,000, 10 are to receive $10,000, 8 are to get $25,000, 3 are to receive $50,000, 2 are to get $100,000, and 2 are to receive $150,000.

The Senator left legacies to every person employed in his Washington office. Three persons with Washington addresses are listed, these being Callie Hull, a personal friend, who is bequeathed $10,000; Florence A. Droney, who gets $2,500, and Patrick Duffy, butler, $1,000. Florence Droney was stenographer in Senator Cutting's Washington office. His secretary, Edgar Puryear, was bequeathed $25,000.

Employes Get Large Sums.

Three members of his newspaper organization were remembered. E. Dana Johnson, editor, and J. C. McConvery, manager, were bequeathed $25,000 each, and Brian O'Dunne, staff member, $100,000.

The Senator's interest in his adopted State of New Mexico, which has a large Spanish-American population, was shown in his bequest of $150,000 to the Spanish-American Normal School, at El Rito, N. Mex.

H. Phelps Putnam, of Boston, Mass.; Frederick M. Bishop and Gordon Gardner, both of London, England, are remembered with $25,000 each.

The probate petition cites that Senator Cutting left property in New Mexico, Washington, D. C., and New York State and that he had residences in Santa Fe and in Washington. The estimated value of the real property is given as $378,260 and the value of the personal property is estimated at $3,600,000. Debts are estimated at $55,000.

The will, witnessed by Reed Hol-

Gen. Johnson Heads Relief For N. Y. City

By Felix Bruner.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator and one of the severest critics of the work relief program, was named Works Progress director for the City of New York yesterday.

Johnson will return to the Government service as a subordinate to Harry L. Hopkins, boss of the Works Administration, but in a position that will involve supervision of expenditures estimated at $5,000,000 a week.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Hopkins while Johnson was lunching at the White House with President Roosevelt. It came simultaneously with publication of one of Johnson's syndicated newspaper columns in which he said in reference to the works program

"It may all be good practical horse sense, but it looks like $4,000,000,000 worth of boon-doggling to me."

Calls It "Leaf Raking."

In another paragraph of the column he said "The new 'works relief' is not public works. It is in part a new, if more ambitious, kind of leaf raking."

Immediately after his appointment Johnson boarded an airplane for New York to attend the Louis-Carnera fight. He said he would assume his new duties today.

Johnson will take charge of relief work in the city where "boondoggling" was first used as a term describing what critics of the relief program believe to be useless work done by persons on Government relief. Johnson himself described the New York situation, which has been under more or less continual fire, as "full of dynamite."

Emerging from the President's office after the luncheon, his face a fiery red, the general pushed through a group of newspapermen to a couch in the lobby. He pulled from a pocket of his coat, as he sat down, a much-folded and soiled slip of paper on which were written the "stipulations" under which he took the job.

"I didn't want to take the job," he said. "I couldn't afford to. I've got to make a living. But I agreed to give part of my time to it."

Then he read the "stipulations."

The first was that he was to receive no salary, but that he was to recieve $25 per day to cover expenses.

The works law requires that all employes receiving $5,000 a year or more must be confirmed by the Senate. Under the arrangement by which the general is employed confirmation will not be necessary.

May Retire October 1.

Stipulation No. 2 was his employment should end October 1, unless Johnson, Hopkins and the President should agree that his services should continue. Johnson explained that he did not want "any stories that I have been eased out, like when I left the NRA."

The third requirement was that Johnson is to devote a minimum of four days a week to the new job, "or as much more time as I feel is necessary," but that he should be free to attend to his personal affairs when he was not working for the Government. He said he expected to continue writing his newspaper column.

Johnson also stipulated that he should consult freely with Mayor LaGuardia of New York, but that he should be responsible to no one but Hopkins and President Roosevelt.

The next requirement provided that he should select his own associates and that he should be able to "hire and fire," subject only to approval of Hopkins.

His first selection was Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who will serve as his assistant, devoting as much time as possible to the relief work while retaining his Labor Department position.

City to Get $326,000,000.

Johnson said he first learned of the New York job when he was called by telephone from Washington while he was in Indianapolis last week. He said both Hopkins and LaGuardia had talked to him and urged him to accept the appointment. He said the President persuaded him to take it yesterday.

Immediately after announcing the appointment, Hopkins telegraphed to Lester W. Herzog, works progress administrator for New York State, telling him that Johnson would take over the work in the city and that Herzog would supervise it in the rest of the State.

The job which Johnson will take over is one of the biggest in the works program with the exception of that of Hopkins himself. More than 1,500,000 people are on relief in the greater city and it will be up to Johnson to put them to work within the $1,143 per man per year limination set by the President.

Monthly expenditures in the city have been running more than $20,000,000 and Johnson said he understood that ultimately New York City would receive $320,000,000 from the works funds. The recent investigation in New York indicated that relief was being administered large-

First Part of Program For Taxes on Wealth Goes to Senate Today

The Tentative Tax Schedules

Tentative rates for increased income taxes, inheritance levies and graduated corporation taxes discussed yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee in order to effectuate President Roosevelt's new revenue program were revealed as follows:

Surtax on Incomes.*

On incomes in excess of $1,000,000 but not in excess of $1,500,000	60 per cent
On incomes in excess of $1,500,000 but not in excess of $2,000,000	63 per cent
On incomes in excess of $2,000,000 but not in excess of $3,000,000	66 per cent
On incomes in excess of $3,000,000 but not in excess of $5,000,000	70 per cent
On incomes in excess of $5,000,000 but not in excess of $10,000,000	75 per cent
On incomes in excess of $10,000,000	80 per cent

*These taxes are in addition to the existing normal tax of 4 per cent, which remains unchanged. Surtax rates on incomes of less than $1,000,000 remain unchanged. The surtax rate now for incomes in excess of $1,000,000 is 59 per cent.

Corporation Taxes.*

On net income not in excess of $2,000	10 per cent
On net income in excess of $2,000 but not more than $5,000.	11 per cent
On net income in excess of $5,000 but not in excess of $15,000	12 per cent
On net income in excess of $15,000 but not in excess of $40,000	13 per cent
On net income in excess of $40,000 but not in excess of $100,000	14 per cent
On net income in excess of $100,000 but not in excess of $300,000	15 per cent
On net income in excess of $300,000 but not in excess of $1,000,000	16 per cent
On net income in excess of $1,000,000 but not in excess of $20,000,000	17 per cent
On net income in excess of $20,000,000	17½ per cent

*All corporation income is now subject to a Federal tax of 13¾ per cent, with a penalty of 2 per cent additional for filing consolidated returns. Whether this latter tax will be continued has not yet been decided by the Finance Committee.

Tax Inheritance.

On net inheritances of $300,000 or more but not in excess of $500,000	4 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $500,000 but not in excess of $750,000	7 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $750,000 but not in excess of $1,000,000	10 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $1,000,000 but not in excess of $2,000,000	20 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $2,000,000 but not in excess of $3,000,000	30 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $3,000,000 but not in excess of $4,000,000	40 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $4,000,000 but not in excess of $5,000,000	50 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $5,000,000 but not in excess of $7,000,000	60 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $7,000,000 but not in excess of $10,000,000	70 per cent
On net inheritances in excess of $10,000,000	75 per cent

*These levies on inheritances—that is the specific bequest received from the estate of a deceased person—are in addition to existing Federal estate taxes which range from a tax of 1 per cent on net estates of $10,000 to 60 per cent of estates in excess of $10,000,000.

Gift Taxes.

In addition to existing gift taxes, designed to prevent loopholes in the present estate levies and which must be paid by donors, it is proposed to enact a second schedule of gift taxes to be paid by recipients of gifts, which roughly will equal three-fourths of the rates in the inheritance tax schedule; rates under consideration range from 3 per cent on gifts of $300,000 to 60 per cent on gifts in excess of $10,000,000.

Senators Vote To Keep FDIC Another Year

House Threatens Rejection as Glass Denies Move to Shelve Eccles Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

Moving swiftly to allay banking fears, the Senate yesterday without a record vote approved a joint resolution extending for one year the temporary bank deposit insurance law, fully guaranteeing deposits up to $5,000.

Action followed assurances from Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, that the extension in no sense is part of an effort to sidetrack the Eccles bank bill, which carries deposit insurance features along with sweeping bank-law revision.

Opposition immediately developed in the House from Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the House Banking Committee. Steagall predicted the House will not adopt the resolution "in its present form."

More than ordinary significance was attached to Seagall's remarks, in view of a White House conference yesterday between the Alabaman and the President. Later, it is known, Chairman Leo T. Crowley, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, interceded with Steagall for passage of the joint resolution in some form.

An executive session of the House Banking Committee has been called for this morning and presumption is the resolution will be considered at that time.

Temporary provisions of the present deposit-insurance plan expire Sunday night, and, unless intervening action is taken, a permanent plan, stepping up deposit guaranties on a graduated scale and levying onerous assessments on member banks automatically goes into effect.

To relieve banks of this heavy burden pending ironing out of Eccles banking bill differences, the full Senate Banking Committee yesterday approved a joint resolution extending the present plan one year from June 30, 1935. The Senate acted a few hours later.

Despite the fact that the House must act before Sunday night or the permanent law will at once go into effect, Chairman Steagall said he will oppose the resolution in

President Loses on Issue of "Death Sentence" to Units.

Sped by a House rule permitting eight hours debate on utility holding company legislation, but denying the President a roll call vote on the one issue of "death sentence" for "unnecessary" holding units, the Wheeler-Rayburn bill will start through the House today.

Two or three "aye" and "no" votes on holding company eliminations are allowed under the rules committee edict. But in each case broader issues are involved that may permit members to escape flatly going on record for or against the "death sentence."

The President was known to be in favor of a second motion to recommit the bill on the elimination question alone. This was denied him by the committee. Private polls of the House have shown a substantial maority of members opposing the "death" section approved by the Senate and insisted on by the President himself.

A barrage of opposition to proposed wiping out of "unnecessary" holding units was laid down last night, as the House prepared to consider the bill.

Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, who late yesterday obtained permission to file a supplemental minority report, made a radio attack on the measure's stringent provisions.

"My first objection," said Pettingill, "is that to punish the guilty we harm the innocent, and do so unnecessarily. Certainly the investors who have put the savings of thrift into the industry are not crooks and ought not to be punished for what the crooks have done. We ought not to burn the barn to kill the rats."

The Indianan said 20,000,000 persons depend in part for their livelihood on the earnings of the utility industry. The Senate bill, carrying the "death sentence" section, "puts in jeopardy the entire investment in the industry," he said.

"I call your further attention," said Pettingill, "that under the Senate bill every operating company in the Nation, 10 per cent of whose stock is owned by another com-

Harrison Plans to Tack Levy on Big Incomes to Excise Measure.

Incipient Revolt Quieted by Leaders

Other Items in Roosevelt Program to Come Up in Rapid Order.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Quieting, at least temporarily, an incipient revolt among their followers, Senate leaders yesterday determined to press ahead today with amendments embodying President Roosevelt's share-the-wealth proposals as a rider to the pending resolution extending nuisance taxes which expire Sunday midnight.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee, after a two-hour meeting of that group, said he would call up the nuisance tax resolution when the Senate convenes today and would offer at once an amendment increasing tax rates on incomes over $1,000,000.

While the Senate is debating this proposal, the most innocuous of the three-point tax program, the Finance Committee will complete its consideration of proposed inheritance taxes and establishment of graduated corporation taxes, based on size of net income, Harrison said.

Others to Follow.

The plan is to have the Finance Committee send to the Senate the proposed amendments, one by one, as rapidly as the committee completes consideration of them. Thus at the same time the Senate will be engaged in debating proposals already considered by the committee.

The Finance Committee will meet at 10 o'clock today to commence consideration of the amendments and it is expected that by noon the first proposal will be ready for the Senate. The test of the unusual procedure being followed will come then. If the Senate promptly disposes of the first amendment, prospects will be good for final passage by Saturday night.

In making public the tentative rates of taxation being considered by the Finance Committee, Senator Harrison estimated that the program would add $340,000,000 annually to the Treasury. Of this sum $200,000,000 is expected to come from the proposed inheritance taxes, $100,000,000 from new graduated corporation taxes and $40,000,000 from increased levies on incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

Harrison early in the day and again last night after the Finance Committee met made it clear that his objective is to drive the President's program to enactment as a part of the resolution extending nuisance taxes which produce $500,000,000 annually and which automatically expire Sunday midnight.

Agrees to Brief Hearings.

Consequently, he said the committee could not permit lengthy hearings. In fact, early in the day he was opposed to any hearings at all, but at the Finance Committee meeting he agreed to "brief" hearings in order to appease those objecting to the speed with which the program was being handled.

In announcing that "brief" hearings would be held, Harrison emphasized the word "brief" and he subsequently made it clear that such hearings would be nothing more than a gesture at what he called "fairness."

"There will be no extended hearings," he emphatically asserted. "Not more than two days will be available for hearings. If anyone wishes to be heard, let them come in and if they get here before we report out the amendments, we'll hear them briefly. None has asked for a hearing so far."

Indeed, Harrison indicated that the Finance Committee already was virtually agreed on the proposed income and corporation taxes, but that dissension existed over the inheritance tax proposals. These, he said, may attract outside opposition, as well as causing difficulty to the committee, since provisions for

NRA Officials Told to Avoid Code Pressure

Ordered Not to Encourage Industries to Enter Voluntary Pacts.

NRA officials were instructed yesterday to refrain from "actively encouraging" industries to submit formal applications for voluntary agreements to take the place of the old codes.

The order, signed by Prentiss L. Coonley, director of the Division of Business Cooperation, declared that "at the present time no definite and final program relative to procedure for the scope of such voluntary agreements has been formulated."

Discussion of proposed procedure between the Federal Trade Commission and NRA officials continued. A statement following the conference said the scope of permissible action under the new act and problems of compliance were considered. A committee of two representatives of each organization will be appointed to continue the study.

Warns of Premature Action.

"NRA must avoid premature action which will necessitate retracing steps to conform to a subsequent revised policy," the Coonley order said. "If a structure of voluntary agreements is to be built up, it must be built solidly and without undue burden of time, energy and cost upon industry. Therefore, NRA must have its own program clearly developed before it can encourage industry to proceed along any definite lines.

"A number of industries may insist that they must enter into voluntary agreements now or not at all because the forces of disruption in their industry are already at work. While we do not underestimate the seriousness of delay, it would be a much more serious blunder to enter into voluntary agreements before we are reasonably sure of our ground. We repeat that the possibility of developing a program of voluntary co-operation must not be handicapped and perhaps destroyed by action so rapid and unconsidered as to lead to continual and confusing revision."

Coonley said the order does not imply that the submission of agreements should be discouraged. He instructed NRA officials to advise representatives of industries who have agreements they wish approved that the NRA is not yet in a position to act on such agreements, that until further notice a simple and inexpensive presentation will be adequate, and that the information most useful at this time is an indication of the problems which industry feels can be treated effectively through voluntary agreements.

To Expedite Decision.

"The foregoing," the order concludes, "represents merely a statement of our immediate position. We feel sure that a genuinely constructive program will be evolved in the immediate future. Every effort will be made to expedite final decision."

While NRA officials were discussing, among other things, labor provisions in proposed agreements, House and Senate conferees reached an understanding on the Wagner labor disputes bill, designed to supplant labor sections of the old NRA law.

The conferees agreed to elimination of a House amendment limiting units for collective bargaining to employes of individual employer. Opponents of the amendment contended it would prevent agreements between labor organizations and entire industries. The conferees also struck out an amendment repeating the constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press. They retained the amendment providing that the labor board may determine whether the unit for collective bargaining should be a single employer, a craft or a trade unit.

The bill will go to the Senate and then to the House for final action.

Between You and Me

The Farm Tenant Bill; $13,000,000,000 Outlay Possible; Middle Incomes Tough To Tax.

By Raymond Clapper

No matter how fast Congress shoves up the taxes, it is a safe bet that at the same time ways can be found to spend the money even more rapidly than it comes in.

Even while Congress was stewing over whether to press the new tax program now, the Senate pushed through and sent to the House a remarkable bill which devises a new way for the Government to distribute $1,000,000,000 as a starter—three times as much as the new tax plan would raise annually.

This plan, which is all set to roll through the House, is for the Government to buy farms for tenant farmers. The bill doesn't put it quite that badly. It proposes to advance Government money to farmers who want to buy farms. Nothing down and about a dollar a week for life. The lucky farmer has 60 years in which to pay back the Government—almost as long as the European war debtors were given. A young man of 30 would be 90 when he paid off. He gets the money for not more than 4½ per cent and probably for somewhat less depending upon what rates the Government must pay to borrow it.

The Government will let him rock along the first three years without paying a cent. It will provide him with farm implements, live stock and other appurtenances.

There are perhaps 2,266,000 tenant farmers in the country so only a fraction of them will be able to get in on the first billion-dollar melon. But you can safely count upon the Senators and Representatives of the disappointed ones coming in later to enlarge the fund.

How much it will take is a guess. The bill says that the Government must provide them with a farm of average value. The average value of a farm over the whole country is $7,614. It is $19,274 in Nebraska, $15,455 in South Dakota, $12,919 in Wyoming, $10,947 in Colorado, but only $1,952 in Alabama, and about the same in other Southern States. Average it at $5,000 and the total advance would be some $13,000,000,000. More than the war debts and about as risky in the main.

This plan is the brain-child of Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, and is in a sense a sequel to his compulsory cotton control law. Cotton landlords, compelled to cut acreage, turned tenants out and kept the benefit payments. That being the case, the Government has to buy farms for them. On the other side of the picture are many banks, insurance companies and other investors who have foreclosed farms on their hands. Tenants are working many of them. You might ask why these institutions do not sell the farms to the tenants. The answer is simple. They are hard-headed business men and would rather sell their farms to the Government and let the Government take the risk of carrying tenants who have not been able to make a go at agriculture.

Senator Adams, of Colorado, opposing the bill, hinted at what may come out of this venture: "If we say that it is the obligation of the Federal Government to provide a farm for every tenant and finance him, I have in my State, as every other Senator has, men who will say, 'I want a home;' and there will be an equal demand on the Federal Government to provide him with a home. I have in my State young men working in foundries and factories who would like to have a factory or a manufacturing plant of their own. I do not know how we are going to draw the line and say we will finance the farm tenant, but we will not finance the man who desires a home, who desires to operate a factory, who desires to own a store."

Increasing taxes on 46 millionaire incomes is going to be relatively easy. That is only 46 votes. The tough job politically will come when we try to do what the British did—go after the mass of middle class incomes. We haven't started on that painful budget balancing task.

Here are four revealing columns of figures. Column (1) is the net taxable income. Column (2) is the combined U. S. and New York State tax which shows about the heaviest income tax load carried by residents of any State. Column (4), the comparison or ratio of the American to the British tax.

(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)
$1,100	$0	$2	——
2,500	0	157	——
10,000	749	1,620	46.2
20,000	2,566	4,729	54.3
100,000	34,069	45,279	75.2
500,000	279,764	294,779	94.9

On a $3,000 net salary, a Briton pays 30 times what an American pays to his Federal Government. At $10,000 he pays almost four times as much. We begin to get hard toward the top.

By curious coincidence, Senator LaFollette, who last week was the first in Congress to attempt to put Mr. Roosevelt's redistribution of wealth program into law, now finds himself the recipient of $50,000 inheritance from the late Senator Cutting, millionaire Progressive. The Senator's will, containing 183 bequests, is in itself an instance of voluntary redistribution of wealth.

Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, in a big-hearted mood talking about a fellow member of the House Military Affairs Committee:

"I have no personal criticism to make of Mr. McLean. There seems to be some controversy as to whether or not he was a utility attorney, and I in no way desire to cast any reflection on him. I must regard his motives as being of the highest. However, I must say quite conscientiously that Mr. McLean has not been entirely without partisanship, and although I still insist that I do not desire to cast any aspersions on him, he nevertheless, as an inquisitor in the TVA hearings, converted the House Committee into a more or less police court and made his questions in a rather brutal way, and gave the witnesses little chance to be heard."

Apparently Mr. McLean is lucky that Representative Maverick didn't choose, while he was at it, to cast some aspersions also.

Senator Vandenberg, speaking of the President's tax plan, asks if it is fair to take up Senator Huey Long's plan when he's the only one who has had a chance to study it. And a Southern Democrat observes that Mr. Roosevelt has beat Bilbo to the promise to out-Huey Huey.

Factories Join Miners' Fight On Guffey Bill

Claim Measure Will Raise Price of Coal and Harm Unions.

By the Associated Press.

The National Association of Manufacturers and the Progressive Miners of America joined the fight yesterday against enactment of the Guffey coal stabilization bill.

James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, told a Ways and Means subcommittee that not only was the measure to set up a "Little NRA" for the bituminous industry "plainly unconstitutional," but its approval would increase the cost of coal without any protection for the industry's patrons.

Coal prices, he said, would be increased by the bill's tax provisions, its marketing provisions, and by creation of a "labor monopoly" which would "result in continual wage agitation and wage increases without regard to their economic justification."

William Keck, president, and George W. Dowell, counsel for the Progressive Miners of America, contended that several of the bill's labor provisions would harm their union of 35,000 Illinois miners.

Dowell further charged that the coal reserve provision might be used to drive progressive miners away from their jobs by closing the mines worked by the progressives.

Meantime, a commmittee of Appalachian producers and the United Mine Workers continued without immediate success their negotiations toward new wage and hour contracts to succeeed those expiring next Sunday midnight.

The miners demand a 30-hour week and a 10 per cent pay increase. The operators offer to extend present wages and hours until next April 1. The committee was to report to the full conference of miners and operators Thursday night.

Emery suggested as a substitute for the Guffey bill that the coal industry proceed with the organization of sales agencies, such as Appalachian Coals, Inc., under way when the NRA started.

Ellenbogen Bill Gets Airing Today

Old Age Pension Measure Also on Slate.

A sub-committee of the Senate District Committee will hold a public hearing at 3 p. m. today on the Ellenbogen unemployment insurance measure and the old-age pension bill, both of which have passed the House.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, is chairman of the sub-committee and author of the old-age pension bill introduced in the Senate. It is probable, however, that he will accept the Norton bill as adopted by the House.

Most of the hearing doubtless will deal with the Ellenbogen bill, as it contains several provisions which have aroused objections.

One of these provides that an employer whose pay roll fluctuates shall be penalized by paying a higher tax. As originally drafted, the bill contained a provision that employers whose employment rolls are stable should pay less than 3 per cent, but this was stricken out in the House.

Dishonored Check Costs Bank $27,500

Judgment Granted Firm Which Had Funds.

The George H. Price Co., Inc., of 1427 I street northwest, was given a verdict for $27,500 in the District Supreme Court yesterday against Cary Hardee, as receiver of the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., because the Merchants Bank & Trust Co., which was absorbed by the Federal, dishonored a check when the company had sufficient funds to meet it.

The Price Co., Attorney Foster Wood said, had a deposit of about $1,000. It sent out a check for $1,787.59 and before the check got back to the bank, a deposit of other checks was sent in to cover it. The deposited checks had not been cleared when the other check came in, and the bank refused to honor it, the attorney charged.

Wood said the company had lost an account through which it made an annual profit of $25,000 through the refusal of the Merchants Bank to honor the check.

Keys Brothers Within 48 Hours of Record

Meridian, Miss., June 25 (AP).—Less than two days separated Fred and Al Keys, brothers, from a new world's endurance flight record tonight.

The brothers were beset with troubles which they dismissed as "negligible," including Al's bad tooth and a punctured tire.

At 3:32 p. m. the "Ole Miss" completed the 507th hour in the air since taking off June 4 in an effort to shatter the current record of 553 hours 41 minutes and 30 seconds set by the Hunter brothers in Chicago in 1930.

Senate Votes FDIC Extension; Glass Denies Blow at Bank Bill

his own House Banking Committee.

He took the position that provisions of the permanent plan would not be unduly burdensome.

Cites Eccles Bill Approval.

"The House has already approved the Eccles bank bill," he told reporters, "so if provisions of the permanent insurance law become effective July 1 the sin will not be on our doorstep."

Efforts to press through the joint resolution will be renewed today, however. In one authoritative quarter it was predicted the House will move for a 30 to 60 day extension of existing deposit insurance features, rather than the one year asked by the Senate. This would force the resolution into conference, possibly leading to a compromise between the two plans.

When the resolution was called up yesterday in the full Senate Banking Committee, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, backed by Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, asked for a three-month extension. Their amendment, however, was defeated by the committee, 11 to 7.

La Follette Objects to Plan.

But when the resolution was called up in the Senate, under unanimous consent, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progresive), of Wisconsin, objected. La Follette favored the shorter extension proposed by Byrnes.

Later, following assurances from Glass and Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, that the Eccles bill will be reported "in a short time," La Follette withdrew his objection.

Glass, on the floor, criticized newspaper reports intimating that the joint resolution was a move to prevent present session enactment of the Eccles bank bill.

Off the floor, the Virginian told newspapermen that such reports are "just utterly without foundation."

He said:

Going on With Title 2.

"We are going on with Title 2, and I am confident that in a little while, although I can not be definite as to the day and the hour, that we shall report the full bill with all titles to the main committee.

"We are already close to an agreement on Title 2. The reason the joint resolution has been prepared is that 14,277 banks are in a state of consternation over the matter. They want to know whether to remain in the insurance system or to withdraw from it. The joint resolution is designed to give assurance to them that in any event the present deposit insurance law will continue."

If the joint resolution fails of adoption by Sunday night, banks covered by the FDIC insurance fund would be subject to immediate assessments of one-quarter of 1 per cent of their total deposit liabilities, in payment for Class A FDIC stock. This would amount to approximately $160,000,000, with an additional $160,000,000 assessment subject to the call of FDIC directors. That may force a number of banks to withdraw from the insurance plan. In some quarters, it is claimed, it might result in the ultimate destruction of FDIC.

Provides New Scale July 1.

At the same time, a new scale of deposit insurance coverage would go into effect July 1, providing 100 per cent insurance for individual deposits up to $10,000; 75 per cent, up to $50,000, and 50 per cent on the excess above that amount.

Insurance features of the Eccles bank bill, which would supersede provisions of either the temporary or permanent insurance plans, continue 100 per cent coverage of deposits up to $5,000 only. Bank assessments would be limited to one-twelfth of 1 per cent annually in the Senate bill; one-eighth of 1 per cent in the House measure.

The Glass Banking sub-committee last night was reported "not far apart" on provisions of controversial Title 2 of the Eccles measure, increasing Federal Reserve Board control over credit and banking. Opponents of central bank tendencies of the legislation are seeking modification of proposed increased powers for the board to regulate the flow of credit through open market operations, deposit reserve requirements and discount rates.

2% Maximum Rate Set for N. Y. Deposits.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Establishment of a maximum annual interest rate of 2 per cent to be paid by banks, trust companies and private banks to depositors was announced tonight from the office of the New York State superintendent of banking.

The new regulation was adopted by the State banking board June 21 and will become effective October 1.

It also was announced that "by the same regulation the maximum dividend rate which may be paid by savings banks after October 1, 1935, is likewise fixed at 2 per cent, subject to the power of the board to make exceptions in proper cases."

The action was taken, it was stated, "in the best interests of sound banking throughout the State."

Authorities declared the new ruling would assure uniformity of interest rates between State institutions and national banks since under the national bank act the national institutions are not permitted to pay interest at a rate in excess of the rate permitted to State institutions.

"The action of the board is in accord with similar action which has been taken in some other States and with voluntary reductions which have been announced by numerous banks in this and other States," it was declared.

Doug, Jr., Actress, Barred by Casino

Monte Carlo, June 25 (AP).—Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Laura La Plante, who have been filming scenes here, were refused entrance to the gambling rooms of the Casino today because "they are salaried employes working in the principality of Monaco."

Fairbanks is understood to have protested, but the passport clerk stationed at the Casino was obdurate, saying "rules are rules and cannot be broken."

Creighton Calls Aid to Business Greatest in U. S.

Federal Reserve Official Tells Chairmen About Situation Abroad.

Much more is being dope to aid small business men in this country than anywhere else in the world, Albert M. Creighton, chairman of the industrial advisory committees of the 12 Federal Reserve districts, said yesterday Creighton, who recently returned from abroad, spoke at a meeting of the chairmen.

Creighton said that in Europe, and particularly in England, there have been numerous complaints during the depression by business men and industrialists that it was not possible for them to obtain loans at the banks. He said, however, that many of these claims were exaggerated and that a large percentage of the applicants really wanted to start new businesses or were found to be unsatisfactory credit risks.

There is a much larger fund available for loans to industry in the United States than in any other country, Creighton said. He expressed belief the Reserve banks and the RFC under present legislation can provide for any sound and reasonable demand for credit to industry.

Since $280,000,000 was made available through Reserve banks for loans to industry, there have been received 6,571 loan applications totaling $260,373,000; the advisory committees have approved 1,798 loan, totaling 100,751,000; the Federal Reserve banks have approved 1,636 loans, totaling $38,301,000, advances made totaled $31,447,000, with commitments of $30,404,000.

'The Radiant Christ' Painting Exhibited

On View This Week at Epiphany Parish Hall.

An oil painting of "The Radiant Christ" is on exhibition at Epiphany Parish Hall, 1317 G street northwest.

Done by an American artist who chooses to be anonymous, the picture marks a new departure from the age-old conventional conception of the "Man of Sorrows." The Christ is shown walking in the Valley of Palestine, carrying a baby and holding a smiling child by the hand.

The painting will be on display through the week. After July 1, it will be taken to the San Diego Exposition by W. J. Moore, of Washington Cathedral. There is no admission fee.

Bill to Abolish 'Hidden Bars' Passes Senate

Measure Now Goes to Roosevelt; Smoke Control Also Voted.

The "hidden bar" bill passed the Senate yesterday with six other District bills, three of which have been adopted by the House.

The "hidden bar" bill, which now goes to the President, merely permits on-sale liquor dealers to mix drinks in the open instead of behind curtain, partitions, or doors as at present. Its enforcement will depend upon public patronage rather than District authority.

One of the other measures passed was the Copeland smoke control bill, which was substituted for three other measures drafted by District officials. Modeled after the New York City statute, it prohibits the emission of dense smoke in any building or fire engine, mobile or stationary, and holds everyone associated with the boiler or property liable to prosecution.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, said yesterday she would suggest the Senate bill be substituted for the bills pigeonholed by a sub-committee, so it might be voted on in the House before adjournment.

The House District Committee will hold a special meeting tomorrow to clear its calendar before the next District day.

Another bill which goes to the White House as a result of Senate approval is the restriction on exemption from street paving assessments to not prior to 1885.

The bill which the House passed Monday over a filibuster by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, also was adopted by the Senate. It repeals a law of 1878 requiring District Commissioners and other city employes who do not handle money to obtain bonds.

As the Senate passed its own bill, however, either the House or the Senate will have to pass the measure again before the bill goes to the White House. Except for the designation, the bills are identical.

The Senate passed the bill asked by the Pennsylvania Railway so it might eliminate the sub-station at Seventh and C streets southwest. This measure, which awaits the House action, requires the railway to erect a waiting station level with the tracks.

Two minor bills adopted by the Senate authorize the G. A. R. to use public parks and buildings during the 1936 encampment and permit the issuance of a healing arts license to R. A. Cox.

Because of a technicality, the needy blind pension bill, which passed the Senate Monday, was withdrawn by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, because it does not conform in a minor particular with the national social security legislation.

Whereas, the District bill says a person whose blindness occurred outside Washington must live here five years before being eligible to a pension, the national bill states the residence must be five years out of the preceding nine.

Moore Heads Virginia Postmasters' League

Widow of Edison Chum Slain, Home Ransacked

Norwalk, Ohio, June 25 (AP).—Mrs. Katherine Wilde, 65, widow of Charles Wilde, boyhood chum of the late Thomas A. Edison, was found dead in her home today. The coroner gave a tentative verdict of murder.

Coroner J. D. Bradish said he thought at first Mrs. Wilde died a natural death, but bruises on her neck and back discovered later led him to believe she was attacked by an intruder. The home was ransacked by a person who evidently gained entrance through a side window. A purse containing money, however, was found undisturbed in a dresser drawer.

3 of D.C. Among 11 U.S. Women Bowing at Third Jubilee Court

Emlen Davies, Marianna Dunn, Cynthia Davis Curtsey to Queen Mary; Arabian Prince's Royal Robes Add to Splendor of Scene.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 25.—Eleven American women curtseyed before Queen Mary at the brilliant third court of the jubilee year in Buckingham Palace tonight. The Queen, wearing a gown of opalescent paillettes with matching train which shimmered under the lights of the white-and-gold ballroom, sat alone on a golden throne on a large crimson dais. King George remained at Sandringham recuperating from an attack of catarrh.

For the first time the Duke of Kent, resplendent in a blue and gold uniform, led his mother in the royal procession along the crimson-carpeted corridors to the court throne.

Kent was deputized for his brother, the Duke of York, who was to have substituted for his father, but who was abed with a slight chill.

Prince of Wales Absent.

After the Queen, wearing pearls and diamonds in her corsage and in her hair, took her seat on the throne, the royal circle grouped about her. It included the Duchess of York, Lord Carnegie and Lady Maud Carnegie, Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone and the Earl of Athlone and Maj. Henry and Lady May Bell Smith. The Prince of Wales was absent, as was the Duchess of Kent, who has canceled all engagements.

Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the United States Ambassador, presented the 11 Americans, who included Helen Jacobs, the tennis player. The atmosphere of the third court was somewhat less formal than the first two and picture frocks were worn by the younger presentees.

One of the most picturesque guests was the Emil Saud, crown prince of Saudi, Arabia, who was clad in full royal robes. When he entered the ballroom he was conducted by court officials to a place on the royal dais. In all, about 800 guests were present.

Buffet Supper Served.

A string band of Welsh guards played as the debutantes and matrons made their curtsies before the throne. They had an easier time than those who, presented at the first two courts, had to curtsey twice, once before the king, once before the queen.

A buffet supper was served in the state rooms after the presentations.

Besides Miss Jacobs, those presented were Mrs. Henry E. Bedford, New York; Miss Huldah Warfield Cheek, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Emlen Knight Davies, Miss Marianna Dunn and Miss Cynthia Davis Washington; Miss Nancy Symington, Lutherville, Md.; Miss Priscilla Taylor, West Chester, Pa.; Miss Leta Clews, Miss Jane Watson and Miss France Lorillard Ronald, New York.

Mrs. Bingham wore a lime green taffeta gown with hand-painted gold and silver flowers.

Gowns of the others included:

Miss Jacobs—A gown of heavy parchment satin, cut rather severely along classic lines; a high bodice slightly gathered onto a cord, a similar effect being shown in the low back; train of the same satin turned back with silver lame which is matched by the swathed waist belt; white silver slippers and white ostrich feather fan.

Miss Symington—A cream tulle gown trimmed with rose point lace and beads; train of matching material and trimming, and with very short sleeves.

Miss Davies—A gown of silver-white brocade on long, simple, classical lines; train lined and edged with silver; silver slippers; diamond bandeau and a formal bouquet of white orchids and gardenias.

Miss Ronalds and Miss Davis did not announce in advance the gowns they would wear.

Missing 2 Years, Boy Found Dead

By the Associated Press.

Sanford, Me., June 25.—In a Springvale sandpit the body of Roland Poole, 10, who disappeared nearly two years ago, was found today. It was identified by the child's father, Walter Poole, after he examined bits of clothing.

Chief of Police Ernest Chadbourne said clues which he would not reveal caused him to believe the child had been killed. When the boy disappeared, August 31, 1933, searchers held the theory that he had been struck by an auto and that the frightened driver had taken the body away.

The actual cause of death was not known, Chadbourne said.

The body, partly uncovered, was found in the pit by six boys. Workmen had recently been removing sand there.

Ban Is Placed On Combining Liquor Sales

D. C. Frowns on Plan to Offer Lawn Furniture to Induce Buying.

Combination sales of liquor and lawn furniture or other things was banned by the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the District Commissioners yesterday.

Lord & Thomas, national advertising agency, in a letter to the beverage board, asked if such combination sales were legal. The letter indicated a liquor dealer was contemplating a national campaign with lawn furniture as an added attraction to buyers of their product.

Such sales, the board said in a memorandum to the Commissioners, signed by George W. Offutt, chairman, are "exceedingly vicious."

"There should be no urge of any kind other than a natural appetite for a purchase of liquor," the board added.

E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, told the Commissioners they had ample authority to prohibit such combination sales. Roland M. Brennan, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, forwarded the Commissioners' indorsement to the Beverage Board with a request that a specific regulation be drafted.

Off-sale liquor permit of Stanley Louis Sonneborn, 2506 Fourteenth street northwest, was revoked by the Beverage Control Board yesterday.

Sonneborn conducts a tobacco and news business, too. Revocation of his license by the board followed a raid by police. They said bets were taken over the telephone at the store. Although the police failed to arrest Mr. Sonneborn or file any formal gambling charge against him, Isaac Gans, member of the Beverage Board, said its members felt sufficient evidence had been found by police.

Cab Injures Boy, 15.

Injured yesterday when police said he walked into the side of a taxi while crossing the street near North Capitol and H streets northwest, Eugene Johnson, 15, of 328 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital with severe head lacerations.

Militia Ruling Tacoma to Halt Riots in Strike

Tear Gas Hurled, 26 Held in Lumber Town; Long Out of Refuse Row.

The Labor Situation.

National Guardsmen were "in control of the city" in Tacoma, Wash., to prevent further outbreaks in the crisis arising from the lumber strike.

The majority of New Orleans garbage collectors were at work yesterday. In Washington Huey Long told the Senate he was "washing his hands" of any part in the row.

Power was restored in Clearfield, Ky., in darkness Monday night after a row at the Lee-Clay Products Co.

In Cleveland, a baked goods shortage was becoming acute as the Bakery Drivers' Union continued its strike.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 25.—A statement, "National Guard forces are in control of the city," was issued tonight by Brig. Gen. Carlos A. Penington, after troop reinforcements arrived to prevent further disorders in the crisis arising from the lumber strike.

Troopers hurled tear gas bombs to drive back strikers and their sympathizers from the vicinity of the Eleventh Street Bridge, main artery to the city's lumber mill section.

The soldiers arrested 12 men and lodged them in the "bull pen" in the armory as military prisoners.

Gen. Penington's signed statement declaring the city was under control of the guardsmen also requested the "citizens of Tacoma to co-operate with the military authorities in keeping all streets from becoming congested in the main business district."

Police Arrest 14 Others.

Fourteen other men were arrested by police and lodged in the city jail on charges of disorderly conduct.

The city was divided into zones, with patrols of guardsmen and State policemen assigned to each area. Protected routes were established so mill workers could travel safely between their homes and the plants.

The situation was described as an emergency in a joint statement issued by Gen. Penington and William Cole, chief of the State patrol. The order instructed officers to prevent picketing.

When the Guard was ordered here Sunday night the soldiers were instructed merely to co-operate with the State patrol, but Gen. Penington's statement revealed the troopers were in supreme command in the crisis.

Mill operators announced about 700 men had returned to their jobs. Gov. Clarence D. Martin had promised them protection.

New Garbage Strike Fails in New Orleans.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, June 25.—Heeding pleas of Mayor Walmsley's city officials, most of New Orleans' garbage men cleaned up the city today as Senator Huey P. Long told the Senate at Washington he was "washing his hands" of any part in the garbage row.

A second walkout of the refuse gatherers was called by leaders of the collectors, but more than half of the 240 wagon drivers and helpers were on the job. Officials said "the city was cleaned up as usual."

The garbage men quit their jobs last Friday because the city, in financial straits, was unable to pay them. The FERA stepped in and paid them relief wages in the interest of health.

Today the collectors decided to strike for full payment of their back wages, a six-day work week and time and a half for holidays. Officials predicted the refusal of more than 100 drivers and helpers to join their comrades would result in the complete collapse of the strike shortly.

Long vs. Walmsley Fight.

The strikers are chapters in the long fight between the mayor and Long for control of the municipal government.

Long told the Senate the Federal Government "ought to get out" of Louisiana. He read news dispatches telling of the financial difficulties of New Orleans "because of a political battle" between Walmsley and Long.

"In other words," the Senator said, "they spend all their money fighting me and can't pay their garbage collectors."

Walmsley yesterday charged the Senator "inspired" the strike. This was followed several hours later by an offer by Long, through a New Orleans lieutenant, to pay back salaries owed city employes from State funds if Walmsley resigned.

"Hell, no," was the mayor's answer.

The first inkling of violence in the strike cropped out late in the day as drivers of two wagons reported they were stopped by several carloads of striking workers and warned to return to the stables.

100 Bills Are Voted By Senate in 3 Hours

By the Associated Press.

In another burst of speed, such as it infrequently exhibits, the Senate yesterday passed almost 100 bills within about three hours. Most of them were of minor importance.

Reading Clerk John Crockett struggled through some pretty tough names, but he almost gave up near the end when he came to a bill title that included the names of the Purgatoire and Apishapa rivers.

He made a stab at the first and added "and Something Else River," without even trying the second.

Planes Lock Wings; 2 Army Cadets Dead

Crash While in Formation With 16 Other Ships.

By the Associated Press.

Selfridge Field, Mich., June 25.—Flying Cadets Willis M. Darnell, 22, and Robert C. Streater, 24, were killed today when the pursuit planes they were flying in formation with 16 other planes of the Ninty-sixth Pursuit Squadron, Army Air Corps, locked wings and crashed into a marsh.

The formation was pulling up out of a power dive and was at an altitude of about 500 feet when the accident occurred. The two machines plunged a short distance from the field from which they had taken off 15 minutes before on a training flight.

The pilots apparently cut off the ignition, since the wreckage did not burn, but neither was able to jump.

Darnell, whose home was in Little Rock, Ark., had been stationed at the field since January. Streater's home was in Minneapolis, Minn. He had been at the field since March, when he was transferred here from Hamilton Field, San Francisco. Both were graduates of the Army Flying School, Kelly Field, Tex.

Indianan Gets 14 Years For Murder Attempt

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—A Criminal Court jury today convicted Arthur Emblen, of Gary, Ind., of assault with intent to kill Eli Daiches, advertising agency executive, and he was sentenced to serve 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary.

Daiches was slain, and Irving Weitzman, bakery president whom the State charged with conspiracy to commit murder in an alleged plot to collect life insurance, was convicted by a jury and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Towns Request Buses Replace Trolley Lines

Transit Firm Also Seeks Maryland Permission on Routes from D. C.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—Two public hearings were held by the State Public Service Commission today on applications by the Capital Transit Co. for authority to substitute bus service for street car lines in the vicinity of Washington.

The company, a Washington concern, seeks to eliminate the car line from the District of Columbia boundary in each case, to Chevy Chase, Kensington and Garrett Park on one route and to Rockville on the other.

Although several persons representing various civic organizations testified, only one voiced opposition to the plan. He was George H. Lamar, a Rockville attorney.

The mayor of Rockville, Douglas M. Blanford, and the town counsel, F. Bernard Welsh, asked that the changes be permitted but requested the commission to make it contingent on the transit company removing the street car tracks and paving the right of way with concrete.

Maj. L. L. Dye, of Kensington, representing the chamber of commerce of that town and the Montgomery County Civic Federation, declared his organizations' approval of the plan.

According to W. B. Bennett, assistant to the president of the transit company, who was the company's only witness in each case, the changes would become effective, if permission is granted, about September 1. He said transfer terminals would be erected at the District Line so that passengers could transfer from the bus services to Washington street car lines under cover from the weather.

The bus service, Bennett said, would be equal in frequency to the present trolley schedules.

Empty Grenade Mailed Roosevelt as Bonus Plea

Tulsa, Okla., June 25 (AP).—The empty shell of a hand grenade addressed to President Roosevelt, and inscribed "we won the war—I come for the bonus," was taken from the mails today.

The grenade was harmless, George Hill, postoffice inspector, said, adding that Jesse Callison, Tulsa, said he mailed the shell to call the President's attention to the bonus issue.

No charges will be filed.

President Signs Bill Providing A Bigger Navy

Senate Votes Measure to Raise Officer Total by 1,032.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the $460,000,000 naval supply bill providing for a bigger navy and the Senate quickly passed a measure providing for 1,032 more naval officers to man the added ships.

The naval supply bill, one of the biggest peace-time appropriations for that department in the history of the country, provided $100,000,000 for shipbuilding, including $20,000,000 for beginning 24 new war vessels and the balance to apply to ships already on the ways.

Besides the increased sea power, the bill carried $52,000,000 for naval aviation, of which enough is set aside to build 553 new aircraft of various design, 282 as replacements and 273 additional craft.

66 Vessels On the Ways.

Altogether, according to Navy Department figures, it now has 66 vessels on the ways, about half of them financed by $275,000,000 public works money made available in 1933 and 1934.

Passage of the bill authorizing more officers in the Navy was accompanied by little debate beyond a brief explanation. It has already passed the House, but minor Senate amendments will require additional House action.

A report on the measure said "the primary purpose is to build up the line officer strength of the Navy to meet the essential demands of the treaty Navy now authorized and in the process of construction."

By increasing the allowable officer strength from 4 per cent to 4¾ per cent of the enlisted strength, the bill permitted the commissioned ranks of the Navy to climb from 5,499 to 6,531, on the basis of 137,485 men in the ranks.

To Ask Bids Immediately.

Navy officials said plans were ready for the 24 new vessels, the first stage in the 72-ship program designed to bring the fleet to treaty strength by 1942. Department chiefs indicated they would advertise for bids shortly after the appropriation becomes available July 1.

With quotas filled on additional battle ships and heavy cruisers until expiration of the Washington treaty on December 31, 1936, the vessels authorized are:

One aircraft carrier, 2 light cruisers, 15 destroyers and 6 submarines.

The additional officers are to be provided by increasing the number of midshipmen each Representative or Senator may have at the Naval Academy from three to four.

Mysterious Blast Kills 3 Brothers

Indiana Boys Held Victims of Buried Dynamite.

By the Associated Press.

Elkhart, Ind., June 25.—A mysterious explosion killed three brothers near their home here this afternoon as they inspected an object they were believed to have found on a dump.

Charles Canen, 14, and Laverne Canen, 13, were killed outright. Wayne Canen, 8, died tonight in a hospital. The boys were sons of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Canen.

Police and Coroner Eugene Holdeman were unable to determine the nature of the explosive. The blast shook the neighborhood and was heard for half a mile.

Several residents advanced the theory that the boys may have unearthed a dynamite bomb, one of a series said to have been buried on the interurban right of way 28 years ago by an irate citizen now dead.

Phone Case Plea Is Due Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—Richard F. Cleveland, former general counsel to the State public service commission, said today the petition asking a re-argument on the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. rate case will be filed Thursday with the clerk of the United States Supreme Court.

J. Purdon Wright, present general counsel, was out of town today. In his absence, Cleveland said the petition is in the hands of a printer and would be ready for filing Thursday. The Supreme Court, at its last session, handed down an opinion which found the method of arriving at a valuation for the telephone company by the public service commission to be faulty. This action nullified an order by the commission for a reduction of $850,000 in the annual net income of the company in intrastate business. Wright has requested Cleveland, whom he succeeded this month, to continue to act in the rate case. The petition will come up before the October term of the high court.

Oyster Fund Appeals Sent Congress Members

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., June 25.—Following a campaign which was launched two weeks ago to obtain Government funds to plant oyster shells and seed oysters to rehabilitate the oyster industry, leading business houses of Crisfield and the Crisfield Chamber of Commerce have wired appeals to Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe, and Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, asking their assistance in obtaining the funds immediately.

Representatives of Crisfield's business houses said if necessary they would send a delegation to Washington.

pany, may be compulsorily reorganized or dissolved, at the whim or discretion of a Federal bureau. This fact has not received the attention it deserves. The sentence of death lies over the operating as well as the holding companies of the Nation."

Chairman Sam Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which modified the Senate's "death sentence" proviso, yesterday filed an explanatory report with the House. Accompanying this was a minor report by Representative Edward C. Eicher (Democrat), of Iowa, charging the bill carried unconstitutional delegation of power, "departs radically from the policy recommended by the President and fails completely to meet the issues presented by the unregulated growth of the utility holding company."

He claimed the Senate's elimination proposals were emasculated by giving the Securities and Exchange Commission permissive powers to simplify the holding company structure.

Pressure Cited.

"Moreover," he said, "if the Congress has not the courage to state a definite policy in regard to the break-up of these huge concentrations of economic power, no administrative commission can fairly be expected to resist the pressure which would inevitably be brought against it to prevent carrying out of any effective and consistent policy."

Although a canvass of House sentiment indicated a majority of the membership privately opposed to the "death sentence" section, an amendment to that end will be offered in the House. Administration advocates of the section were reported to believe the "death sentence" might gain approval if members were forced to go on record, through an "aye" and "no" ballot.

Under the rule, however, the first roll call test will have to come on a motion to vote down the entire House bill, leaving the Senate measure, to which it is attached, standing alone. Failing that, advocates of complete elimination of holding units might seek a roll call on a motion to instruct House conferees to insist on the "death sentence." The only other recourse to put members on roll call record might be resorted to if the bill comes back from conference without the Senate provision. Rules committeemen pointed out that a move then may be made to recommit the bill to conference.

But, nowhere in the rule is there provision for a straight out roll call vote on the "death sentence" issue, before the bill goes to conference. The President asked that two motions to recommit be provided for this purpose. The committee allowed for only one. That will be be made by the Republican minority, opposed to the "death sentence."

loman, of Santa Fe, and J. D. Atwood, of Roswell, N. Mex., was filed by Attorney Huston Thompson and was admitted to probate and record by Judge O. R. Luhring. Bond for the executors was set at $60,000 each. Theodore Cogswell, register of wills, was ordered by the court to take the original to New York for admission to probate and record there and return the original here for keeping tonight.

Senator Cutting, who was unmarried, comes from a family of old New York stock which had varied interests and wide holdings. His father, the late W. Bayard Cutting, was widely known as a railroad financier. Like his son, he was known for philanthropies and is credited with being responsible for the building of some of the first model tenements in New York.

In New Mexico, Baca, largest beneficiary under the will, declined to comment on the bequests. As one of the executors he told the Associated Press that he has "lots of work to do." He plans to go immediately to New York for filing the will there and will then return at once to Santa Fe.

Rule of Chahar Settled, Tokyo Dispatches Say

Advices Indicate Clash at Manchukuo Border Is Localized.

By the United Press.

Tokyo, June 26 (Wednesday).—A Peiping dispatch of the Nippon Dempo News Agency today reported that a tentative settlement of the Chahar Province question had been reached by Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, Japanese military intelligence chief in North China, and a representative of Gen. Sung Che-Yuan, former governor of the Chinese province.

The dispatch indicated that the latest Chahar incident—an alleged attack on Manchukuo border patrols by Chinese at Tsushihkou—will be localized.

Hsinking, Manchukuo, June 26 (Wednesday). — Japan rushed troops to the Chahar Province frontier west of Manchukuo today to reinforce Manchukuo border patrols reportedly attacked by Chinese troops at the town of Tsuchihkou.

The Kwantung (Japanese) army headquarters in Hsinking, Manchukuo capital, disptatched a detachment of crack troops to the spot, fearing further trouble.

Japanese sources reported that 500 Chinese troops under the banner of Gen. Sung Che-Yuan, former governor of Chahar Province, whose ouster Tokyo has demanded, attacked the Manchukuo border police at Tsushihkou at 11 a. m. Monday.

Military Is Threatening.

Advices said the Manchukuo patrol returned the fire and hurried their own reinforcements to the trouble zone.

However, the Japanese command said Manchukuo patrols at that vicinity were outnumbered, and needed the aid of regular Japanese forces stationed in Manchukuo for such emergencies.

The Kwantung army headquarters in Hsinking issued a statement asserting it had no desire to make the Tsushihkou clash a "serious situation," the Nippon Dempo News Agency (Independent Japanese) reported.

However, the Japanese military said they had advices that Gen. Sung's main force has invaded Manchukuo, crossing the border during the raid, adding:

"In the event this is true, they are digging their own grave."

The Japanese said the border police involved in the attack totaled 80 men, of whom half were Japanese.

The Chahar situation had been considered virtually settled because Gen. Sung's principal staff members at present are in Tientsin conferring with the Japanese military there on terms of amicably settling resentment arising from the Chinese detention of four Japanese military intelligence officers in the vicinity of Kalgan recently.

It was believed in Hsinking that the Tsushihkou incident therefore involved "irregulars" from Chahar.

City Engineer Robbed Of $900 After Crash

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 25.—When his automobile crashed into a tree today, John R. Radford, city engineer, suffered severe head injuries, cuts about his face, possible rib fractures—and the loss of $900.

When he regained consciousness, he said, his empty purse was lying on the seat beside him, the contents apparently stolen by a passerby who stopped to render aid and then changed his mind.

A friend said it was not unusual for Radford to carry large sums of money.

Survey Brings Drive Against 'Road Hogs'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 25.—"Hogging the highways" in the future will be summarily dealt with by the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol of Franklin County. The drive in this section was started yesterday when G. V. Ratliff, of Greendale, Va., was apprehended on a charge of operating a motor truck on the left side of the road. Ratliff was brought before Magistrate S. J. Zarger, of Montgomery Township, and posted bond for a hearing.

Orders to tolerate no more road crowding followed a survey by the department that indicated more accidents were caused by this type of driver than any other.

Funeral Services Today For Charles G. Warden

Funeral services for Charles G. Warden, 74, of 3214 S street northwest, former president of Tyler and Rutherford realty company, will be held this noon at his residence. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Warden died in Memorial Hospital at Winchester, Va., Monday of injuries suffered when he fell while walking on the grounds near his summer home, at Bluemont, Va.

Surviving Mr. Warden are his wife, Mrs. Pattie Compton Warden, and a son, Bruce Warden.

Amendments Put Off Vote On Ship Subsidy

All but 3 of 29 Proposals for Merchant Marine Battered Down.

By the Associated Press.

A steady stream of time-eating amendments forced the House into adjournment early last night without a vote on the Administration bill to subsidize construction and operation of the American merchant marine.

Twenty-nine amendments were offered before the House got halfway through the measure. All but three were battered down. One of those accepted, by Representative Citron (Democrat), Connecticut, provided that prevailing wage rates must be paid labor on ship construction subsidized under the bill.

Another by Representative Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, would make acceptance of a gratuity by a member of the Federal Maritime Authority, which the measure would create, cause for dismissal. That was the only victory the Iowan scored in 16 attempts to revise the bill.

Rampseck's Plan Approved.

The House also approved a change suggested by Representative Rampseck (Democrat, Georgia, that would let the Maritime Authority require that companies receiving operating subsidies use American materials and equipment.

Meanwhile, a storm of opposition defeated an attempt by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, co-author with Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, of the subsidy bill, to bring the measure up in the Senate.

Copeland said he hoped to get the bill up "later."

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, branded the measure in its present form "an invitation to graft and corruption," declaring it was "inconceivable" that the bill could be approved by the President.

Wants More Merchant Ships.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, interrupted the opposition blasts by proposing a resolution to have foreign nations pay part of their debts to United States with merchant ships of a speed, type and design "desirable and necessary for the United States to possess."

The North Dakotan did not propose immediate consideration of his measure, and it only momentarily stopped the denunciation of the subsidy program by Senators Wheeler, McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee; Long (Democrat), Louisiana, and Bone (Democrat), Washington, on the Democratic side, and Vandenberg, of Michigan, on the Republican side.

Senator Scholl (Republican), Minnesota, denounced New Deal policies as responsible for lax development of the merchant marine and the laying up of the Leviathan.

Equally stiff opposition confronted the measure on the House floor.

From members of the Merchant Marine Committee that wrote the measure, however, came arguments that the bill would carry the New Deal to American sea transportation by putting it in a position to cope with foreign competition.

Man Is Indicted In Girl's Death At Staunton, Va

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., June 25.—George W. Clark, 39, Staunton garment plant mechanic, today was indicted by a special grand jury in the death of Mrs. Frances Stanley Sutton, 19. It is probable Clark will face a jury during the regular term of court opening early in July.

The State maintains Mrs. Sutton died May 22 as a result of an attempted illegal operation. At a preliminary hearing in police court a month ago Coroner T. M. Parkins testified Clark denied having any part in the affair other than to have rented a room for Mrs. Sutton.

Also indicted today was Robert D. Harman, 22, for the death in September, 1933, of Roy Britt, 26, who was found senseless at the fairgrounds at an exhibition. He died without regaining consciousness.

After an investigation in which Harman's name never was mentioned, Harman surendered to police about two months ago. Police quoted him as stating that Britt leaped on the running board of his automobile, that he beat off an attack and ran over Britt with his car, then dragged the body between the tents.

J. C. Lucas, charged with perjury in connection with statements made when he offered himself as bondsman for Ernest Quick, held on an arson charge, also was indicted today.

Arrests in Baltimore For Drunkenness Drop

The lowest figure of all was reached last year, the first full year after repeal. It was 73,711 against 5,778 in 1928. Total arrests dropped from 110,219 in 1928 to 99,743 last year.

Truck Overturns; Driver Hurt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 25.—Apparently losing control of his truck, A. G. Hertzog, 68, of Biglerville, Adams County, suffered lacerations about the head when the car he was operating overturned on a steep hill north of here. Brought to the Waynesboro Hospital, Hertzog was given emergency treatment and taken to his home.

Lawyer Guilty Of Harboring Dillinger Aid

for his widely sought client, Dillinger, contended:

"I didn't provide for Van Meter. Dillinger did.

"I'm not a lily white criminal lawyer. I've represented a lot of criminals. That's my business. The men who killed Garfield and Lincoln and Anton Cermak had lawyers to represent them."

Now talking in scarcely audible tones; then pounding a table to emphasize his remarks, he said:

"I have not murdered or robbed widows or banks. I represented Dillinger and through that fact Van Meter came into the case."

Piquette claimed it was not he who hid the outlaws in a west side home last summer while they were being hunted from coast to coast. Placing the blame on his former assistant, Arthur O'Leary, he cried:

"This is the greatest frame-up since the crucifixion. I demand vindication."

Assistant United States Attorney Austin Hall told the jurors:

"He is a master criminal. Disregard his appeals. He is dangerous."

Demanding swift conviction, the prosecutor described organized crime as an octopus with the far-reaching tentacles moved by lawyer-criminals.

Judge Sullivan closed the dramatic session by instructing the jurors they must be convinced of Piquette's active participation in the plot to find him guilty.

Piquette, short, stocky, near his fiftieth year, was indicted shortly after the Government and the American Bar Association moved to rid the profession of those suspected of rendering unethical aid to denizens of the underworld.

Resorted to Drugs.

The story of how Dillinger and Van Meter—once depicted as the most vicious virtuosos of the machine gun—actually skulked in terror of the Justice Department's "Shoot to kill" order was divulged for the first time at Piquette's two trials. Van Meter resorted to drugs to maintain his faltering bravado.

Piquette admitted he had met Dillinger within the shadows of a Chicago police station shortly after the gangster had startled the Nation by his wooden gun escape from the Crown Point, Ind., lockup. But, Piquette, said, their relations were of the confidential nature common to attorneys and clients. He did not place Van Meter in this category.

Testimony brought out the outlaws were quartered in the James Probasco home. There Drs. Wilhelm Loeser and Harold Cassidy submitted them to operations for revamping their features and obliterating their finger tips.

The surgeons and O'Leary, who pleaded guilty and appeared as prosecution witnesses, testified Piquette arranged the surgery, went to the makeshift hospital and handled the $10,000 fee. Piquette contended he received only $3,000 from Dillinger as a retainer and placed the onus for all arrangements on O'Leary. He said he had planned Dillinger's surrender—with a film concern to pay for exclusive pictures of the event.

It was established that the gangsters were highly incensed at the surgical job. It failed to shield them from the law. Both were shot to death later.

Senate Voids Proposed Rise In Mail Rates

Substitute for House Air Postal Law Proposal Adopted.

By the Associated Press.

A substitute for a House bill making changes in the air-mail law was passed yesterday by the Senate, providing for elimination of a proposed 20 per cent increase in mail rates and a limitation of $17,500 on salaries of contracting air-line officials.

The substitute, passed without a record vote, was returned to the House for action on the changes.

The House provision for a boost of 20 per cent in rates was eliminated on the recommendation of the Postoffice Committee, which held the increase should not be allowed until the Postmaster General and Interstate Commerce Commission have examined the books of the air-mail contractors, as already authorized by Congress.

The bill would direct the Commerce Commission to examine the books at least once a year.

Another provision, designed to allow the United Air Lines and American Airways to continue to carry mail over their respective Pacific and Atlantic coastal routes, as well as their transcontinental lines, would:

Permit the present routes from Seattle to San Diego and from Boston to Miami to be designated as secondary routes, with the southern transcontinental route from Boston to Los Angeles via New York and Washington designated as a primary route.

Under present law, no contractor may hold more than one primary route contract. Coastal routes have been regarded as primary.

Other provisions of the bill would authorize the Postmaster General to award contracts for three years instead of one as at present and for 32,000 instead of 29,000 miles and to authorize line extension for 200 instead of 100 miles.

AAA Worker Found Dead in His Bathtub

Walter S. Markham, 41, of the 1700 block of I street northwest, was found dead yesterday afternoon lying face downward in a bathtub half-filled with water.

Markham, who came from Bradford, Pa., had been employed in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Coroner A. MacDonald Magruder had the body sent to the morgue and ordered an autopsy.

Trolley-Engine Collision Story Told in Court

Motorman Is Accused of Failing to Give Right of Way to Firemen.

George H. Williams, street car motorman, appeared in Traffic Court yesterday on charges of failing to yield the right of way to fire apparatus. Four firemen were injured when their speeding engine collided with his street car at Eleventh and V streets northwest, May 8.

After nearly two hours of testimony, Judge Ralph Given continued proceedings until today. Fireman Percy Graves, driver of the truck and one of those injured, testified his siren was sounding and that he vainly attempted to avoid the crash.

He said first warning of the impending accident came when Sergt. George E. Swords, also hurt, yelled to him to "Step on it!"

Graves said he turned and saw the street car "right on top of the engine." After the impact, Judge Given was told, the fire apparatus careened onto the sidewalk and overturned. Several firemen, all attached to No. 9 Engine Company, were hurled into the street.

The others injured were Private Raymond Creel, 30, and Private Clyde Smith, 30. Swords and Creel were confined to Emergency Hospital for several weeks.

Baptists Lash At War Games In the Pacific

Dry Leader at Convention of Church Assails 'Demonstrations.'

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 25. Two thousand Northern Baptists ended their annual convention here tonight with sharp criticism of the American Navy's recent maneuvers in Pacific waters ringing in their ears.

The criticism was hurled by Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, Evanston, Ill., national president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The dry leader's address brought frequent cheers as she made indirect attacks upon governmental regulation of production and directly struck at religious intolerance, repeal, liquor and militarism.

With Militant Report.

Her address was coupled with the militant report of the convention's committee on exemption from military service of Baptist conscientious objectors.

"What sort of a sign of the times is it when a great navy sails toward the shores of a nation already on edge toward other powers, and there demonstrates its feats of strength?" Mrs. Smith asked.

"When the world suffers for food and school doors are closed, yet fabulous sums are appropriated for armies and navies, and exposes of munitions makers chill the heart as their cold calculations of profits from war are revealed."

William D. Upshaw, Atlanta, Ga., Prohibition Party candidate for the Presidency in 1932, urged Baptists to support a national dry movement to fight the liquor traffic and promote total abstinence.

Signed by Dr. Frank W. Padelford, New York City, executive secretary of the Baptist Board of Education, the military report, adopted by the convention, stated the United States Supreme Court decision last fall upholding rights of States to require students in State institutions to take military training had closed an avenue which Baptists had chosen for use in fighting compulsory military training.

Two Courses Offered.

Two courses were suggested to Baptists to follow: Persuasion of trustees of State institutions against military training and pressure upon State Legislatures for antimilitary legislation.

"Neither of these courses offer very much hope at the present time," the report charged vigorously, "in view of the very marked and accelerated zeal for militarism spreading through the United States, encouraged by the Administration and Congress as well as stimulated by the American Legion and the Army and Navy Departments."

The closing program included the presentation of the new convention president, Dr. J. H. Franklin, president of Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., succeeding Dr. Avery A. Shaw, president of Denison University, Granville, Ohio. The 1936 convention will be held in St. Louis.

Dancers to Apper At Sylvan Theater

Gardiner Group to Present Program Tomorrow.

Assisted by members of the Washington Composers' Club as accompanists, the Lisa Gardiner Dancers will present a program tomorrow night at the Sylvan Theater. The opening number, danced by the entire group, will be a mazurka by Delibes, which will be followed by two works written by Henry S. Gregor, "In the Temple of Shiva," danced by Jeanne Densmore, and "The Voice in the Desert," danced by Leila Gurley, Anne Vucinovich, Lora Wills, Jeanne Milette, Jeanne Densmore and Barbara Worrell.

Alice Louise Hunter will be seen in a scarf dance, Mary Day in "Diana" to music by Rakhmaninov, Marjorie Megee in a Chopin waltz and Miss Gardiner in Mary Howe's "Habanera." LaSalle Spier's amusing pantomime, "Afternoon of a Four," will be danced by Georgia Hiden, Marjorie Magee, Christine Stewart and Alice Louise Hunter.

Gregor's "Etude in the Form of a Virginia Reel' will be given by six dancers. Other numbers on the program are Edward C. Potter's "The Lotus Eaters," Dean Shure's "Temptation," Mary Howe's "Jota Aragonese," and a "Caucasian Dance," by Dvorak.

The dance program will be preceded by a half-hour concert by the U. S. Marine Band, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson, starting at 8 o'clock. The band will also play during two interludes.

Court Thronged For 'Trial' of Film

N. Y. Jury Views 'Ecstasy,' Banned Foreign Picture.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—A crowd so large that one juror almost failed to get into the room gathered in the Federal building today when Federal Judge John C. Knox and a jury viewed the Czechoslovakian film "Ecstasy," to see whether it is indecent. The hearing was adjourned until tomorrow after the film was shown.

The Government is proceeding against the film under section 305 of the tariff act of 1930, which prohibits importation of obscene and immoral objects.

Imported last November, the film was seized by customs authorities. Recently the picture was seen by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and later the Secretary pronounced it indecent.

Samuel Cummins, general manager of Eureka Productions, was the importer. His attorney called the picture "as beautiful as any ever filmed" and "a lesson of life, which is different from obscenity."

ly by "professional" social workers and there were many charges of duplication and waste.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt sent Hopkins' name to the Senate for confirmation. A list which is expected to include most of the State works progress directors is expected to be sent to the Senate soon.

While Hopkins was perfecting his organization, Secretary Ickes was preparing to move on a housing program which will require expenditure of $249,000,000 of works money.

Ickes announced that President Roosevelt had approved allotment of this sum and that he had asked the President to approve 24 projects in 21 cities. He declined to reveal location of the proposed projects, but he revealed that they were being studied by Hopkins preliminary to presidential approval.

The first 24 projects, Ickes said, will cost about $91,000,000. The entire program calls for 72 projects in 60 cities. The new program will bring the total to be spent for housing to $282,000,000, a total of $33,000,000 already having been spent or allocated from old works funds.

Included in the $249,000,000 is $110,000,000 transferred from housing funds to the FERA before the new works money became available.

Bill Would Tax Rich Heiresses Who Marry Foreign Noblemen

Figures Under Bill Introduced Show It Would Have Cost Barbara Hutton $8,750,000 to Wed Foreigners.

By the United Press.

Representative Raymond J. Cannon, Wisconsin Democrat, attempted yesterday to invoke the taxing power of the Federal Government to make American heiresses think twice before marrying foreign noblemen.

He refrained from naming names, but statisticians immediately got to work and figured out that, under the bill introduced by Cannon, it would have cost Miss Barbara Hutton $8,750,000 to become, in quick succession, the Princess Mdivani and Countess Reventlow.

It figures out this way: Cannon's bill would slap a 25 per cent marriage tax on all fortunes over $500,000. The princess-countess is supposed to have a nest egg of $20,000,000. On her first marriage she would have paid a tax of $5,000,000, leaving her to struggle along the best way she could with $15,000,000. After her trip to Reno and her remarriage, she would have had to part with another $3,750,000.

Doris Duke, another recent bride, would not be affected by the Cannon bill, because she married an American.

In a statement accompanying his bill, Cannon revealed he had thought over this matter for some time and had considered taking more drastic measures. His first idea was to offer a bill that would forbid marriages of rich Americans to foreign nobility.

"Or the bill might have provided," Cannon said, "that the United States Government would take charge of its citizens just as the Canadian government has taken charge of the Dionne babies. But I found this would not be within the Federal power. It was found that the only way to prevent, or make such marriages difficult, was by means of the taxing power of Congress."

Then Cannon went into a discussion of foreign noblemen in general.

"These marriages have created public scandel (the spelling is Cannon's) because many of these noblemen have taken large parts of the fortunes which they have obtained by marriage out of the country.

"This bill is especially timely because, since we cannot get back the money which we gave to these foreign governments during the war, we should by all means prevent any more of our money, either public or private, from being taken away from us by them."

The bill was referred to the House Ways and Means Committee, whose members seemed skeptical about whether it would ever become the law of the land.

British Public to See Famous Robot Planes

By the United Press.

London, June 25.—The British public on Saturday will see the so-called "robot planes" in use for gunnery practice by the Royal Air Force, the government revealed today.

The exhibition, part of the policy of making the public "air-minded," culminates months of secret tests of the planes and practice in shooting at them while speeding 120 miles an hour, at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

The ships are controllable up to 10 miles, flying without crews, the ground anti-aircraft gunners were understood to have scored a very low percentage of hits.

Episcopal Workers Attend Conference

100 Delegates Register for Church Parley.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., June 25.—More than 100 representatives of Protestant Episcopal churches in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, New York and the District of Columbia are registered at the Blue Mountain Conference of the church which opened last night at Penn Hall School for Girls.

Part-time registrations are expected to increase the enrollment to 300 before the conference ends July 5. The conference program is built along religious education lines. Group studies are held during the day with assembly sessions at night.

Among those attending are Miss Olive Meacham, missionary to Liberia; Miss Claire Ogden, head of the Home for Children in Panama; Miss Ruth Mantz, of the Church Hospital in Manila; Miss Grace I. Walsh, who has been engaged in tuberculosis survey work uunder the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration; Capt. George Wiese of Grace House on the Mountain, St. Paul, Va.; Sister Sherman, of near Leesburg, Va., and the Rev. Edward Sanders, of Hankow, China.

Betting Places To Defer Test Of New Statute

Rehearing Sought, Hagerstown Establishments Decide to Stay Closed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 25.—Pending a rehearing which will be sought by counsel for Harry D. Miggins, whose petition for a permanent injunction to restrain the State's attorney and sheriff from interfering with the operation of bookmaking establishments was dismissed yesterday by Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloane, none of the bookmaking places will reopen, it was learned today.

One establishment was prepared to reopen today in order to test further the constiutionality of the Washington County anti-bookmaking law passed by the 1935 General Assembly, but these plans were dropped.

Counsel for Miggins announced that several new points of law would be introduced at the rehearing at which it will be held that the General Assembly repealed and re-enacted the wrong section of the State gaming law, a section that was declared by the Court of Appeals three years ago unconstitutional.

A rehearing failing to change the statute of the law, counsel for bookmakers indicated an effort may be made to carry the case to the Court of Appeals again by violating the law for one day and then appealing a conviction, as was done three years ago when a local bookmaker was arrested and convicted in the local court. The conviction was appealed and the Court of Appeals reversed the verdict and held the act unconstitutional insofar as it applied to operating bookmaking establishments in Washington, Cecil and Anne Arundel counties.

The last General Assembly sought to remedy this condition by repealing and re-enacting the statute.

Senate to Get First New Tax As Rider Today

their administration must be drafted.

These developments were revealed at 6 p. m. after a day of widespread confusion, acrimonious debate and threats of reprisals on Capitol Hill. Although the plan to attempt passage of the President's tax program by Saturday night was decided on at the White House Monday night, several prominent House leaders and some in the Senate professed to be incredulous as late as yesterday afternoon.

McNary Flays Plan.

In the Senate, the Republican floor leader, Charles L. McNary, angrily denounced the plan, while Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, a member of the Finance Committee, threatened to filibuster against such procedure to force its abandonment by preventing renewal of the nuisance taxes before Sunday.

Undaunted, the leaders, however, set to' work to appease their followings. Vice President Garner and Sesate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson pleaded for almost two hours with Democratic members of the Finance Committee to suoport the plan and uphold the President's hand.

Their pleas appeared successful, because as that meeting adjourned Harrison asserted "it is the expression of tne majority members of the committee, without reference to rates, that they ought to carry out the policies as suggested by the President at this time by adding them to the pending tax resolution."

The House insurgents, including many stanch Administration supporters, however, remained sullen and resentful. Speaker Byrns pleaded with Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee to co-operate with the procedure by drafting and sending to the House a new joint resolution, which would extend the nuisance taxes temporarily for 30 or 60 days and thus relieve the Senate of the pressure it is under to save these taxes.

Move Possible.

His pleas failed to move the committee, although at the end of the day it was reported that after waiting a day or two the Ways and Means Committee may draft such a resolution.

In addition to those who attacked the tax program for the unprecedented speed with which it was being handled, several of the left-wingers contended it did not go far enough. They want a $1,000,000,000 tax bill—not one providing $340,000,000.

One of these was Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who asserted that "this thing is rapidly becomig a farce." He added that on Monday in passing the Bankhead farm tenant bill the Senate "had voted to spend three times $340,000,000."

Another objector in this class was Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, foremost advocate of "share-the-wealth." He contended the pending proposals would produce but "a dime for the Treasury every time we went in the hole $1." He said he proposed to offer his own tax plan, contending that "the President's bill as finally sent to the Senate is a fraud as a redistribution-of-wealth proposal—it is not even a delusion."

Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana, likewise showed his disapproval of the pending proposals by introducing amendments which would increase the present 4 per cent normal tax to 8 per cent—thus hitting all income taxpayers—and increasing the surtax schedules up to a maximum of 82 per cent on incomes in excess of $1,000,000, with correspondingly sharp increases in corporation, inheritance, estate and gift taxes.

Resentment in House.

Anger over the arrangements for handling the tax proposals made at the White House Monday night were exhibited in the House as soon as that body met. Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, usually a staunch Administration supporter, was quickly on his feet with expressions of amazement that it was proposed to pass the tax program in five days. He angrily demanded to know who were the leaders who were seeking to jam through the tax proposals.

Chairman of the House Rules Committee John J. O'Connor sought to pacify the Virginian by telling him "that is just newspaper headlines." Woodrum retorted that such might be the case, but that he knew many members of the House "who will stand against any such asinine and ridiculous proposals if it comes from anywhere." He said he was willing to stay here all summer to enact a tax bill, but that "if anyone undertakes to ram a tax bill down my throat in five days, I believe I know a few tricks and it will not be done that quickly."

Acting Democratic Leader Edward T. Taylor said he agreed with the Virginian and professed ignorance of such a plan. He thought there was "no truth behind statements" in the morning newspapers and that such stories were "maliciously inspired."

Harirson Beleaguered.

Even as the Democratic leader of the House was professing ignorance of the plan, Harrison was on his feet in the Senate, subjected to a barrage of questions. He confirmed all that was said in the morning newspapers. After a sleepless night spent in his committee room with L. H. Parker, his tax expert, preparing amendments to carry out the President's proposals, Harrison arose to explain he would not call up the nuisance tax resolution yesyesterday, but "would do so at the first opportunity—possibly tomorrow."

He said the Finance Committee would meet later in the day to consider the President's proposals. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, asked if and when the House Ways and Means Committee would consider the President's program:

"My understanding is that the House will not consider the matter until the Senate acts," Harrison replied.

McNary joined in the debate to observe that the Senate was confronted with a spectacle of "unseemly haste on a tax program of this kind. In reply to McNary's questions, Harrison said the matter of holding hearings had not been finally determined, but that the measure could not be passed by Saturday if hearings were held.

"Is the Senator seriously considering such a course?" asked McNary.

"Oh, yes," replied the Finance chairman and, prodded further by the Republican leader, Harrison went on to outline the plan for attaching the President's proposals to the nuisance tax resolution.

Holds Request Unfair.

McNary observed that the nuisance tax resolution was "a mere shadow" to whcih it was proposed to attach "substantial legislation." He said he implied from the President's message last week that action was not desired at this session and that he thought it "unfair to ask this Congress, which has worked diligently for six months, to undertake this new task of this magnitude at this late date."

"Wouldn't it be better to study the subject patiently and carefully through the summer and defer action until the next session," McNary asked.

"That viewpoint has been advanced by some, but vetoed by others," Harrison smilingly replied, apparently alluding to his own opposition to acting at this time until the President directed otherwise.

Clark joined in the discussion to assert that while he was one of those who had signed the round robin demanding action at this session, he would not be a party to rushing the proposals to enactment by Saturday and that if such action were attempted he believed "it will be very late Saturday night before we do anything like that."

Harrison curtly broke in to remark that the petition signed by Clark had contributed to creating the situation which confronted the Senate. Clark retorted he favored "deliberate consideration" of the President's plan and did not wish to depend on the "snap judgment of some expert."

"Are we to understand that the Finance Committee is now about to proceed on a course which it rejected by a vote only last week?" asked Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

"There have been some very important developments since then," replied Harrison.

"In other words," retorted Vandenberg, "you are asking us to take Senator Long's program when he is the only one who has had time to inquire into it."

"The Senator will have to follow the dictates of his own conscience," asserted Harrison.

Throughout the day sentiments much like those came from both Democrats and Republicans off the floor. House members were particularly sharp in their comment. Republican Leader Bertram Snell contending that if more evidence were needed that "the President believes himself a dictator his order to a bewildered Congress to take what he says, as he says it, about new taxes and do it quickly furnished it."

Representative James Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, in a statement issued through the American Liberty League, asserted that "Mr. Roosevelt's amazing proposal that the Congress enact his fantastic "share the wealth" tax program within a five-day period is a convincing demonstration of the complete irresponsibility of the present Administration."

Board Names Carl Prison Farm's Head

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—The State board of welfare today appointed E. B. Carl, of Hagerstown, superintendent of the State penal farm at Roxbury. At the same time it accepted the resignation of Hal T. Kearns, present holder of the office. The appointment becomes effective July 17.

No action was taken at the meeting on the appointment of Mayor Walter Quenstedt, of Annapolis, as warden of the House of Correction. While this fact occasioned some surprise, inquiries of Gov. Nice brought from his this statement:

"The board is considering further regarding Mayor Quenstedt's appointment, but he will be appointed warden of the House of Correction."

County Pledged To Start Work On Roads Soon

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Asking immediate road improvement, members of the Chamber of Commerce at a conference yesterday with County Manager Roy S. Braden were assured that work soon will be started on all roads where sewer work is not being done.

Braden said it is the plan to grade and treat the surfaces of all roads on which sewer installation is not under way and that within the next three weeks work will have been started on roads where sewers have been installed. He added, however, that condition of ditches will govern just how far the work can be carried.

Another matter discussed was the zoning ordinance. It was pointed out by the Chamber of Commerce group that special care must be given to rezoning of certain sections of the county where erection of apartment houses may be proposed. There are sections in the county that are suitable for such construction, it was argued, and when a request is made for a change in zoning adequate means should be devised to advise owners of property in that section.

At suggestion of Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, the Chamber of Commerce was asked to propose a change in zoning regulations to provide for notification to homeowners within 500 feet of any site where a change may be sought rather than advertise it in a county newspaper, as now provided.

George M. Yeatman, president of the chamber, again brought up the question of adequate street lights for the county. He asserted the manner in which approaches to the county are now lighted, as well as all the business sections, is a disgrace.

County Manager Braden assured his co-operation for a better lighting system and said he will have a survey made.

Braden told the group he will meet with the building code commission tomorrow night to study the draft of a code which has been prepared prior to its presentation to the county board.

The forty-first annual State convention of the Christian Eendeavor Society will start at Clarendon Baptist Church tomorrow night with more than 600 delegates in attendance. Meetings will continue through Sunday.

The opening session will begin at 5:30 p. m. with a get-acquainted dinner preceded by a short prayer service conducted by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell pastor of the Clarendon church. Members of the District of Columbia Union will be guests of honor at the dinner. Friday the morning service will open at 8:45 o'clock with the Rev. George Edwin McDorman, pastor of Mount Olivet Methodist Church, presiding. The session will be devoted to reports of officers and group meetings. In the afternoon a motor trip will be made through Washington and vicinity. Saturday night there will be a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, at which time State officers will be elected.

The guest speaker will be Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, vice president of the World Union. The convention will conclude with an all-day program Sunday, when plans for 1935-1936 will be discussed. New officers will be installed and the convention will close with a buffet supper at 6:30 o'clock at the Clarendon Church.

Candidates for the offices of Commonwealth's attorney and sheriff will present their platforms at a joint meeting of the Jefferson and Arlington Ridge Civic Associations tonight in the Community Hall at Virginia Highlands.

Speakers will be Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Emery N. Hosmer and John Paul Jones, all candidates for Commonwealth's attorney, and Sheriff Howard B. Fields and H. J. Odenthal, candidates for sheriff.

Other meetings are to be arranged for candidates for treasurer and the county board, according to Clyde M. Mills, president of the Jefferson Civic League.

C. W. Clever, secretary of the Alexandria-Arlington County Real Estate Board, returned yesterday from the State Convention of Insurance Agents at Virginia Beach.

Clever said that with co-operation of other local agents, plans will be made to seek a reduction in fire insurance rates for Arlington County.

The first of a series of meetings at which candidates entering the Democratic primary August 6, will present their platforms to the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, will be held Tuesday. The meeting will be at 12:30 o'clock in the firemen's hall at Virginia Highlands, according to announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Jesse Roberts, president of the women's group.

Presentation of a three-act play entitled, "Here Comes Charlie," by a cast from the Virginia Avenue Christian Church at Lyon Park, scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights in the Lyon Park Community House, has been postponed, it was announced last night.

Groups Named to Study Projects in Riverdale

Committees to consider immediate remodeling of the Riverdale (Md.) town hall and firehouse and repaving of West Madison avenue have been named by Mayor William A. Carson.

Carson made the appointments after calling a special meeting of the town council Monday night to consider the technicalities in the $100,000 PWA appropriation approved for the town.

L. J. Poelma, town engineer, conferred with PWA officials in Washington and reported the town was prepared to accept the long-term loan, as well as the grant.

Rivals in 1933 Will Bid Again For Mayoralty

Bromley, Incumbent, and Torvestad Only Aspirants in Colmar Manor.

Citizens of Colmar Manor, Md., again will be called upon to choose as their mayor either Bert M. Bromley, seeking re-election, or John N. Torvestad, it was announced yesterday.

The two men, who fought it out at the polls in 1933, were the only persons to file their candidacies before the election supervisors closed their books at midnight Monday. Elections will be held Tuesday, July 9.

Only one candidate, Carl Nagel, noted his intention to run for councilman for the First Ward. Joseph Terenyi, incumbent, has announced he will not seek re-election.

In the Third Ward, George Cox, incumbent, will be opposed by William U. Wiles. Robert V. Yost, of the Second Ward, and Lewis Carter, of the Fourth Ward, have another term to serve.

Citizens of the town also will be asked to vote on two referendums. One will be the proposed 10 cents tax to be levied for the support of a voluteer fire department. This was authorized by the recent Legislature.

The other will authorize the town to sell bonds for street improvements. The bonds are not to exceed 8 per cent of the town's assessed valuation. The issue will be for construction of a sidewalk along the Baltimore boulevard.

Patience Urged By Dr. Edwin Mims

Vanderbilt Man Counsels 'Middle of Road.'

By the Associated Press.

University, Va., June 25.—Dr. Edwin Mims, of Vanderbilt University, counseled "middle of the road" methods for the problems of today, and academic freedom from threatening influences, in a convocation address tonight to more than 1,000 University of Virginia summer school students.

Speaking on "real fundamentals and objectives in education," Dr. Mims said one of the vices of the average man is hasty generalization instead of patient and wise discrimination. "Men tend to fall into extremes instead of following the golden mean or walking in the middle of the road," he asserted.

The noted Southern educator was presented by President John Lloyd Newcomb, who made a brief address of welcome.

Advisers Begin Report On Virginia Paroles

Richmond, Va., June 25 (AP).—A report which probably will exert a major influence in determining what kind of future probation and parole system Virginia will have was begun today by a subcommittee of the Governor's Advisory Council.

Although recommendations were not divulged, committeemen said they had studied the report of the Spratley Commission, which advocated indeterminate sentences and a probation system under supervision of the public welfare department. The sub-committee is made up of Senator Hunter Miller, of Bedford; Judge L. F. Smith, of Charlottesville; Dave Satterfield, of Richmond, and Arthur W. James, commissioner of public welfare.

32 in Contest for Title Of "Miss New Market"

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Market, Va., June 25.—Thirty-two women will compete for the title "Miss New Market" here tomorrow night in the annual contest sponsored by the local firemen. The winner will represent New Market in the Valley-wide contest here next summer in which Miss Shenandoah is named.

Judges will be L. J. Gourley, Washington; L. M. Lawler, Luray, and Russell L. Stultz, Harrisonburg. Miss Mary Rupp will be mistress of ceremonies.

Cat Kills Rabbit, Scolded, Adopts 3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 25.—Mrs. Norman Hose is convinced there is remorse even among animals.

Her pet cat had gone out foraging for food for her kittens and brought back a rabbit which she had killed. Mrs. Hose reprimanded the cat.

The next day the cat brought three small live rabbits in and she installed them alongside her two kittens. Two of the rabbits died, but the third apparently is thriving under the care of its adopted mother.

Prince Georges Board to Meet State Aid Chief

Session at Baltimore Will Outline Commission's Part in Program.

Members of the Prince Georges County board of commissioners will meet tomorrow in Baltimore with Harry Greenstein, Maryland relief administrator, to consider the new county welfare board.

Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, of Laurel, Md., a member of the board, who has been suggested as chairman of the welfare organization, said the meeting will be an attempt to learn what is expected of the county officials.

According to the new setup, authorized by the recent Legislature, 12 names will be submitted the commissioners. From this number six will be selected to compose the welfare board. One of the commissioners also is supposed to be on the board.

The commissioners, holding their regular weekly meeting at Upper Marlboro yesterday, approved rezoning from residential A to commercial D of lots 20 through 29 at Hollywood, near Berwyn, Md.

Application for the rezoning stated that the lots would be used for a veterinary establishment and would be occupied by Dr. John F. McClure.

A letter was read from John R. Riggles, of Seabrook, asking that the commission push installation of electric floodlights at grade crossings along the Pennsylvania Railroad line. These already have been installed at the Landover crossing.

Distribution Near For Liquor Profit

'Substantial' Amount for Local Governments Seen.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 25.—Gov. Peery said today he would make an announcement "soon" on the distribution of profits of the ABC board for the fiscal year drawing to a close.

Reliable estimates put the profit at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, at about $3,600,000. Of this amount $1,675,000 has been earmarked for the general fund, and the Governor may at his discretion set up a revolving fund for the board not to exceed $1,000,000. The remainder is to be divided one-third to the State and two-thirds to the municipalities.

It is not known what size revolving fund the Governor has in mind, but he said the amount to be distributed among the local governments would be "substantial."

40 Children Examined At Orthopedic Clinic

More than 40 children were examined yesterday at the orthopedic clinic held at the University of Maryland by the Southern Maryland American Legion. Dr. George E. Bennett presided over the examination.

More than 75 per cent of the children observed were given hope of ultimate cure or improvement. Dr. A. B. Hooton, Prince Georges County health officer, was among the local physicians who were present at the clinic.

Aud Hits Back At His Critics; Cites Records

Placed More Property on Books Than Predecessor, He Asserts.

Asserting that he had placed more property on the assessment books in five months than his Democratic predecessor in two years, William L. Aud, Montgomery County assessor, struck back at criticism of his work yesterday at a stormy session of the Montgomery County Commissioners in Rockville, Md. He charged that the property of County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, Democrat, is underassessed.

Aud addressed his remarks principally to County Commissioner Hagner, who had declared at a previous meeting that Aud was inefficient and not active.

"I've been accused of being inefficient and not active in my duties," Aud declared. "If you have watched what I have done you will know that I have put more on the books in the five months I have been here than has been put on in any two years before.

"In defense of myself I have prepared a letter which Mr. Whitacre will read."

Letter Is Read.

The letter read by Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners, asserted that Mr. Aud had placed $2,082,325 on the assessment records, of which $1,109,000 should have been placed on the books prior to his taking office.

"The only criticism which I have heard relative to the conduct of my office has come from Mr. Hagner. I feel that his antagonistic attitude toward me is caused by my recommendation that something be done to equalize the present assessments in the county," the letter stated.

"All of the property in the county is supposed to be assessed at 60 per cent of its actual value. The average farm and the average home in the county is assessed at this figure. Large speculative tracts of land and property belonging to many members of the Democratic organization in the county is assessed way below the 60 per cent ratio. I will cite one case as an illustration of this condition. Mr. Hagner owns 4.144 acres of land in the Bethesda District. This land is on the corner of East-West highway and Wisconsin avenue.

Held for $100,000.

"According to Mr. Hagner's own statements, he has refused a $75,000 cash offer for this property and is holding it for $100,000 which he believes to be the true value of the property. Based on the figure of 60 per cent of the actual cash value of the property this property should be assessed at $60,000 exclusive of improvements. The property is actually assessed at $4,495. This is only one illustration of the many inequalities now existing upon the assessment records of the county. I feel that there should be a general re-assessment of the entire county so that the tax burden may be borne equally by all of the owners of the county properly without favoritism.

"I regret that my standing in regard to this matter has apparently aroused Mr. Hagner's displeasure. Irrespective of this, I shall continue to make my recommendations and to conduct my office for the benefit of the people of the county," the letter concluded.

Hagner's Defense.

Hagner declared that his property had been assessed by two other assessors and that he had not taken any part in assessing his own home. He was a county assessor at time of the assessment. He pointed out that his property was assessed on exactly the same ratio as other property on the same street, some of which is owned by anti-organization Democrats and Republicans.

He reiterated his charges that he often had seen Aud in conversation on the streets of Rockville "discussing the past election and politics" when he should have been assessing property. He denied any personal antagonism toward Aud and asserted his only interest "is to see this property assessed."

Board Names New Workers In Montgomery

3 County Factions Agree on Appointments After Stormy Session.

County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, of Montgomery County, Md., bowed to the needs of his party yesterday and backtracked on his expressed determination to oppose James P. B. Viers for the post of general manager of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board.

Coughlan had stubbornly refused to accede to the threats and cajolings of the Republican State central committee and other party leaders that he vote for Viers for several weeks. He apparently had at last given in because of the crisis which faced the party when County Commissioner Charles E. King threatened to bolt the Fusion Party and join with organization Democrats in ousting Republicans.

Even in defeat he bowed gracefully, and himself proposed the name of Viers at a turbulent session of the commissioners yesterday at Rockville. Viers was appointed at a salary of $3,000 a year, the appointment effective July 1. John C. Walker, retiring manager, was granted two weeks' vacation from that time.

The strained situation apparent for the last several meetings of the board was considerably eased yesterday by a stirring of the patronage pie. Even the organization Democrats shared in the distribution.

Coughlan proposed the reinstatement of Lieut. Dunbar Padgett, permanently injured in line of duty, and James Nichols as desk clerks at the Bethesda substation of the county police. He also proposed reinstatement of D. L. Milstead, general utility man at Silver Spring. The three were reappointed by the commissioners. They had been among the 23 dismissed last week in the heat of the three-cornered bout between Republican Fusionists, Democrat Fusionists and Organization Democrats.

John McDonald, of Rockville, was appointed county engineer at a salary of $3,300 a year to succeed Harry B. Shaw, Democrat, who was voted a two weeks' additional pay after Commissioner Coughlan had told the board Shaw had been "a perfect gentleman" who realized his dismissal was the fortunes of politics.

William C. Folsom, of Silver Spring, was appointed an assistant engineer at a salary of $2,100 and the pay of R. K. Waters, already functioning as assistant county engineer was raised from $1,800 to $2,000 a year. Raymond Stevens, who is to be replaced by Folsom, also was voted the additional two weeks "vacation" pay.

The salary of Mrs. Katherine Bradley Turner, clerk to the county building inspector at Bethesda, was raised from $60 to $80 a month.

Asbury Williams, colored, was appointed janitor of the Silver Spring dispensary building at $75 a month to replace Richard Gaither, who was transferred to the county building at Silver Spring at $80 a month to replace Harry Lee Miller, dismissed Democrat.

The appointments were moved by Commisioner Coughlan, and perfect harmony prevailed among all three factions as the pie was being served.

The harmony followed a stormy sketch between Commissioner King and Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, Democrat, in which Hagner asserted King had made "suckers" out of himself and Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale, the other Democratic commissioner. He said King had taken the initiative in urging a coalition between himself and the two Democrats to drive all of the Republicans out of the courthouse except Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners, and an elevator operator.

King declared he had not agreed to dismissing the Republicans and said he was irked by the way the Republicans were ignoring Fusion Democrats in handing out State roads patronage.

The pair didn't come to blows, but a delighted audience sat on the edge of their seats as the booming voice of Hagner and the no less determined accents of King vied for hearing.

Summer School At Maryland Due

Registration Begins Today at University.

With registration for the University of Maryland summer school scheduled to begin today, Miss Alma Princkert, registrar, yesterday announced that early figures showed a considerable increase over the same period last year.

Classes will begin tomorrow morning. Dr. Willard S. Small, dean of the college of education, will have charge of the summer session again this year.

He has announced that special emphasis will be laid on educational psychology and industrial education. Prominent lecturers from many of the country's leading universities have been engaged for the five-week school.

Relation With Old and New Germany to Be Studied at University.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 25.—America's political, economic and cultural relations with the old and the new Germany will be projected in one of the round-table conferences of international character at the Institute of Public Affairs, which opens here Sunday for its annual two week's session.

Scholars and industrialists who have had recent contacts with the Hitler regime will tell of contributions each nation has made to the other and explain changed points of view which have taken place within the last several years. The forum, to be presented during the second week of the institute program, will be presided over by Dr. Friedrich E. Auhagen, professor of German at Columbia University.

Prof. W. A. Kittle to Speak.

Contributions of the German element in the United States to American life will be outlined by Prof. Walter A. Kittle, of the College of the City of New York, at the opening meeting of the round table July 8.

In the following sessions Mildred Wertheimer, of the Foreign Policy Association, and Dr. H. F. Simon, of Northwestern University, will discuss various phases of German-American postwar relations.

Virginius Dabney, chief editorial writer for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, who recently returned from a several months' tour of central Europe, and Dr. Henry G. Hodges, of the University of Chicago, will discuss America's reaction toward the new Germany, and how the Germany of Hitler regards the United States.

Place of German Science.

The place of German science, technology, language and literature in American industry and education will be described by Dr. G. K. Frank, consulting engineer of New York City, and Dr. John A. Waltz, professor of German at Harvard University.

American contributions to German life and Americans in Germany are to be discussed by Henry A. Phillips, author and editor, of Bethel, Pa., and Ernst Schmitz, director of German tourist information in New York City.

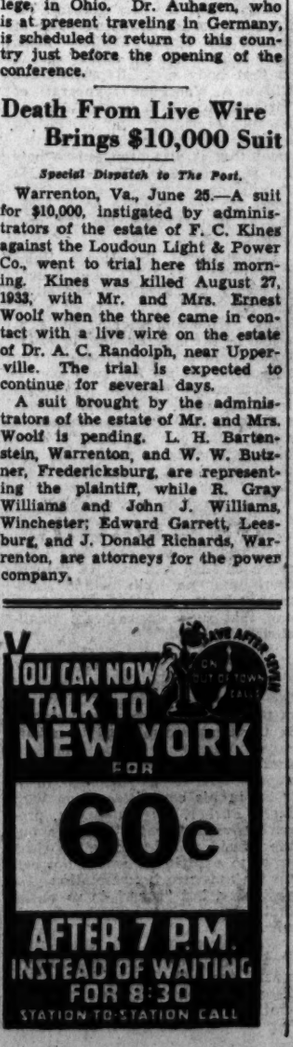
A forecast of future economic relations will be made by Dr. Frederick K. Kruger, of Wittenburg College, in Ohio. Dr. Auhagen, who is at present traveling in Germany, is scheduled to return to this country just before the opening of the conference.

Death From Live Wire Brings $10,000 Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., June 25.—A suit for $10,000, instigated by administrators of the estate of F. C. Kines against the Loudoun Light & Power Co., went to trial here this morning. Kines was killed August 27, 1933, with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woolf when the three came in contact with a live wire on the estate of Dr. A. C. Randolph, near Upperville. The trial is expected to continue for several days.

A suit brought by the administrators of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Woolf is pending. L. H. Bartenstein, Warrenton, and W. W. Butzner, Fredericksburg, are representing the plaintiff, while R. Gray Williams and John J. Williams, Winchester; Edward Garrett, Leesburg, and J. Donald Richards, Warrenton, are attorneys for the power company.



Services Held For Albemarle Fruit Grower

J. Gouley Martin Buried at Charlottesville; Rites Held for L. E. Hicks.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 25.—Funeral rites for J. Gouley Martin, 67, former members of the county's board of supervisors and retired orchardist, were held today at his residence on Park street. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. C. Johnson, pastor of the Covesville Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. Dwight Moody Chalmers, pastor of the Charlottesville Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Martin was born at Covesville and for many years was one of Albemarle's leading fruit growers. He served several terms as a member of the board of supervisors from the Samuel Miller District. He was for years a director of the Peoples Bank and a life member of Charlottesville Lodge, No. 389, B. P. O. E. He was a member of the Cove Presbyterian Church at Covesville.

St. Paul Shifts Police Force In Bribe Probe

Suspended Chief Replaced as 4 Detectives Plan Fight on Charges.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, June 25.—Taking his next step after an expose of alleged police connection with corruption and vice, Public Safety Commissioner H. E. Warren tonight named Gus H. Barfuss, deputy commissioner of public safety, to take over the duties of chief of police, and ordered several other temporary appointments.

Barfuss, candidate for Ramsey County sheriff in the last election and veteran police officer, fills the post of Chief Mike Culligan, suspended with four other officers for 30 days.

Mels Pearson will succeed James P. Crumley, inspector of detectives, who with three others, was ordered discharged by Warren. Dective Thomas J. Grave will serve as assistant to the police chief in place of Cahrles J. Tierney, suspended.

It was reported that Wallace Jamie, 27-year-old son of Alexander Jamie, former head of the Chicago sevret six, will succeed Barfuss as deputy commissioner of public safety. Young Jamie took an active part in assisting Warren with his secret probe of police department conditions.

John L. Connolly, corporation counsel, said formal removal notices were being prepared charging crumley and Detective Fred Raasch with "soliciting and accepting bribes" and failing to "detect and suppress crime."

These two, with Detective Ray D. Flanagan and Michael McGinnis, announced they would fight removal before the civil service bureau. Connolly did not outline specific charges against Flanagan and McGinnis.

Chief Culligan was out of town and could not be reached for comment on reports, emphatically denied by Warren, that he had presented his resignation four days ago.

Teachers Who Smoke or Drin Scored at Rally

Speaker at Montgomery W.C.T.U. Session Urges "Good Example."

The "drinking and smoking" school teacher in the American was condemned yesterday by D. S. Patterson, of the Washington Board of Temperance and Public Morals, at the annuel convention of the W. C. T. U. of Montgomery County in Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, Kensington, Md.

Advocating State support and direction of temperance education in every school in America, Patterson said the only way teachers could set up a moral standard was to give good example to the public. He encouraged the movement to have an ordinance for a moral standard for all teachers. The speaker assailed repeal as a "farce and failure" and quoted statistics to show the increase in auto fatalities since prohibition was revoked. He said Washington now has 1,742 places selling liquor, whereas before prohibition there were but 300 saloons. He urged the Government take over the liquor sale.

The union passed resolutions urging its members to guard against "chain letters" and to fight against beer gardens, the sale of liquors to minors, commercializing of the Sabbath and immoral motion pictures.

Officers of the union were re-elected. They are Mrs. John G. Thompson, of Beltsville, Md., president; Miss Rebecca Miller, of Ednor, Md., vice president; Mrs. John E. Hamilton, of Silver Springs, Md., corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Magruder, Sandy Spring, Md., recording secretary, and Mrs. Grace Sherman, Kensington, treasurer.

Reports from officers showed an increase in membership. Seven ulions from Colesvile, Spencerville, Rockville, Sandy Spring, Kensington, Silver Spring and Oakdale were represented. Mrs. Thompson announced $450 was the Montgomery County quota for the $500,000 national educational fund of the W. C. T. U.

The convention consisted of morning and afternoon sessions, attended b yabout 100 women.

Vocal selections were given by Mrs. F. H. Higgins, of Rockville; Mrs. W. F. Matthews and the Rev. J. P. Scruggs, of Kensington Baptist Church, and the music section of the Woman's Community Club of Kensington. The Rev. F. A. Kullmar, pastor of the Warner Memorial Church, conducted the morning devotions. Mrs. Frank Chapman opened the afternoon devotions. An original poem, "War Against War," was read by Mrs. C. E. Houghton. Randolph Turner, of Sandy Spring, Md., was awarded a gold medal for the best essay on temperance in the declamation contest. The award was made during the young people's program, which closed the cnovention.

Prince Georges Closes School With 17 Pupils

Only 7 Expected in Fall, Board Abolishes Good Luck Institution.

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday decided to close Good Luck School, near Landover, Md. The school boasted only 17 pupils last session and anticipated only 7 next fall.

The board also ordered a partial restoration of schaal janitors' fees and compensations for school bus contractors. The restoration will mean an additional outlay of approximately $1,000 in each case.

A resolution adopted authorized Nicholas Orem, superintendent of county schools, to file application to the Public Works Administration for a loan and grant to aid in financing the construction of and additions to school buildings.

The board also ordered the $185,0000 bond issue be advertised for sale at not less than par and at 4 per cent interest. The issue is to be offered not later than noon July 23.

Mines in the Wilds Fly Oxen to Work

Quebec (U.P.).—Oxen are flying to work in northern Quebec.

Almost overnight groups of mining settlements are rising along the shore of Chibougamau Lake, 125 miles northeast of here, but work has been impeded by lack of horses and oxen to transport lumber. The settlements are far from railroads and it would take days to drive the oxen by foot through the deep woods.

But an aviation company here solved the problem. Pressing a huge airplane into a freighter, pilots are flying oxen and horses to the settlements, one at a time.

Arizona to Preserve Relics.

Prescott, Ariz., (U.P.).—Treasures of "Arizona's pre-history" are stored in the new Smoke Public Museum at City Park here. The building was erected with relief labor, and is designed to preserve for future generations and for tourists relics of the past, particularly of Indians and pueblo dwellers, left in this section.

Roosters Will Crow, Must Go, Court Holds

Roosters will be roosters—judicial decisions notwithstanding.

So, yesterday, when Police Court Judge Robert Mattingly was asked to decide the status of several Mr. Chickens in a "barnyard" on Croissant place southeast, he pondered deeply. It was a weighty problem—the neighborhood had complained of loss of sleep.

George King and Edward Edwards, joint owners of the offensive fowls, stood nervously while Judge Mattingly sat buried in thought. Then he spoke:

"Roosters," he said, "always have crowed. Why, one of them even crowed as a signal that the Lord had been betrayed. You have too many roosters—even if you needed them. And the court knows you don't need them—so get rid of them."

King and Edwards smiled willingness. Before they were dismissed, however, another witness complained of cackling hens. To this the judge said:

"You can't tell me that hens cackle at night. They only cackle after they have laid eggs."

Josh Lee to Address Optimist Club Today

"Optimist" will be the subject of a speech by Josh Lee, Representative from Oklahoma, at the Optimist Club's luncheon today at the Hamilton Hotel.

The Optimists also will hear reports from their delegates who have returned from the International Optimist Convention held in St. Louis last week.

Arrangements are being made to give a reception and dance in honor of their fellow Washingtonian, Henry Schaffert, who has just completed a term of office as president of the international organization.

Wisconsin Farm Land Increases in Value

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin farm land values have taken their first rise since the World War, according to State and Federal crop reporting services.

At 82 per cent of the pre-war level, the State's farm real estate price index was 2 points above that for the two previous years, the report stated.

Shark Devours Tarpon After Half-Hour Battle

The fight began 2 miles off shore and lasted for more than half an hour. It started when a fisherman hooked a silver king weighing about 90 pounds.

Ex-Follies Girl Held in Looting Of N. Y. Home

Natalie Chadwick Colby Is Denied Bail; Says Court Role "Too Much."

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Red-haired, statuesque Natalie Chadwick Colby, whose beauty adorned a Ziegfeld Follies of a decade ago, was held without bail on a charge of burglary today with the rifling of the fashionable Sutton place apartment of Mrs. Simone Brooks.

With all the stage presence of her Broadway heyday, the one-time Follies queen stepped into the harsh spotlight of police lineup, languorously removed her long black gloves and admitted to Capt. John Stein that her role was too much for her.

Prints on Mirror.

She was arrested in her Sixteenth street apartment after detectives compared fingerprints found on a mirror in the Brooks home with those in police headquarters. They disclosed that the red-haired beauty previously had served a term in Auburn prison for theft from another show girl.

The complaint signed by Mrs. Brooks charged that the defendant, married and since divorced from Charles Colby, Los Angeles merchant, had entered her apartment March 30 by means of a key and had taken $4,400 in furs, clothing, jewelry and perfumes. Detectives reported recovering part of the loot at Mrs. Colby's apartment.

Police said the beauty was also wanted in Los Angeles for alleged forgery, which she denied.

"This woman," said Capt. Stein in line-up, "makes a practice of meeting people at the race tracks, learns where they live and then burglarizes their houses."

"Who, me?" interrupted the defendant in a surprised tone.

Protests Duplication.

Prior to her arraignment in Yorkville court, where she was held for the grand jury without bail, she protested being fingerprinted on the ground it had been done before. The complaint stated that she had entered Mrs. Brooks' house twice.

"This is for the other job," retorted a detective.

"Well," the former Follies queen said, obviously nettled, "I thought they all went in one."

Mrs. Colby said she was concerned lest her mother learn of her arrest. Asked why she had not reformed after her last experience with the law that sent her to Auburn in 1930, she answered:

"That was five years ago."

D. C. Man Flies Here to Make World Record

Benjamin King Moves U.S. to Distance Supremacy for Light Plane.

Benjamin King, the Washington sportsman pilot whose record-breaking flight a week ago pushed the United States into a tie with France for aerial supremacy, broke the deadlock yesterday and moved this country into first place when he flew his little 36-horsepower plane from Port Washington, Long Island, to a landing in the Potomac River opposite the Naval Air Station.

Officials of the National Aeronautic Association who were observing the flight stated that King had established a new distance mark for single-seater light seaplanes weighing under 1,257 pounds when he flew the 220 miles in 3 hours and 20 minutes.

The smiling pilot, who flies for the love of it, used his same little Aeronca plane equipped with floats, in which he broke two light seaplane records for multi-seated ships. To comply with the international regulations and to qualify the plane as a single-seater, King requested and was granted permission to cover one of the seats with a special gasoline tank.

Taking off from Port Washington, Long Island, yesterday at 9:35 a. m. the pilot flew the little ship here on just 12 gallons or gasoline, arriving at 12:55 p. m. He carried 18 gallons in his tanks, which he estimated would have carried him to Norfolk and a better record.

"But it is so much trouble to get an international record-making flight properly certified in Norfolk that I decided to stop off here. Besides this is my home, and it was more convenient. This will give the foreign pilots something to shoot at. If they break it, then we will try to do better. I am sure we can," he added.

A civil engineer living at the Westchester apartments, King entered the international aviation picture only last Monday, when he flew the same plane, equipped as a two-seater, to the two international records as well as two national records.

On that flight, which ended at Whitney's Landing, near Annapolis, Md., he broke records held by the French pilots Lallouette and Albert by wide margins. A head wind and a "desire to play very safe" caused him to cut the flight short of the original goal, which was the Potomac River. After refueling, however, he brought the ship here. At that time he was accompanied by Dan Brimm, of Port Washington, Long Island.

DETROIT POLICE PICK HUDSONS FOR WAR ON CRIME

Motor City Adds 9 More Hudson Eights to "Battle Fleet" ... Where Performance and Ruggedness Come First

These blue-coated men who man the "fliers" need cars that have everything! Cars with more power than the other fellow's. Cars that will outperform anything they meet on the road. Dependable cars—that can take it, and keep on taking it.

Record-Breaking Performance

In Detroit, the Motor City, choice of police cars is based on a careful study of many makes—and a thorough knowledge of all. And Detroit police have just added 9 more Hudson Eights to their "battle fleet" of special police "fliers."

For first-line duty, they chose cars with the same kind of performance that enabled a stock Hudson sedan to smash 36 official records last April in a single continuous run at Muroc Dry Lake, California.

Proved Ruggedness and Safety!

This car proved Hudson power and speed with a mark of over 93 miles an hour for five miles—electrically timed. It proved Hudson ruggedness by covering a thousand miles at an average speed of over 85 miles an hour—an all-time A. A. A. record for stock closed cars, regardless of size or price.

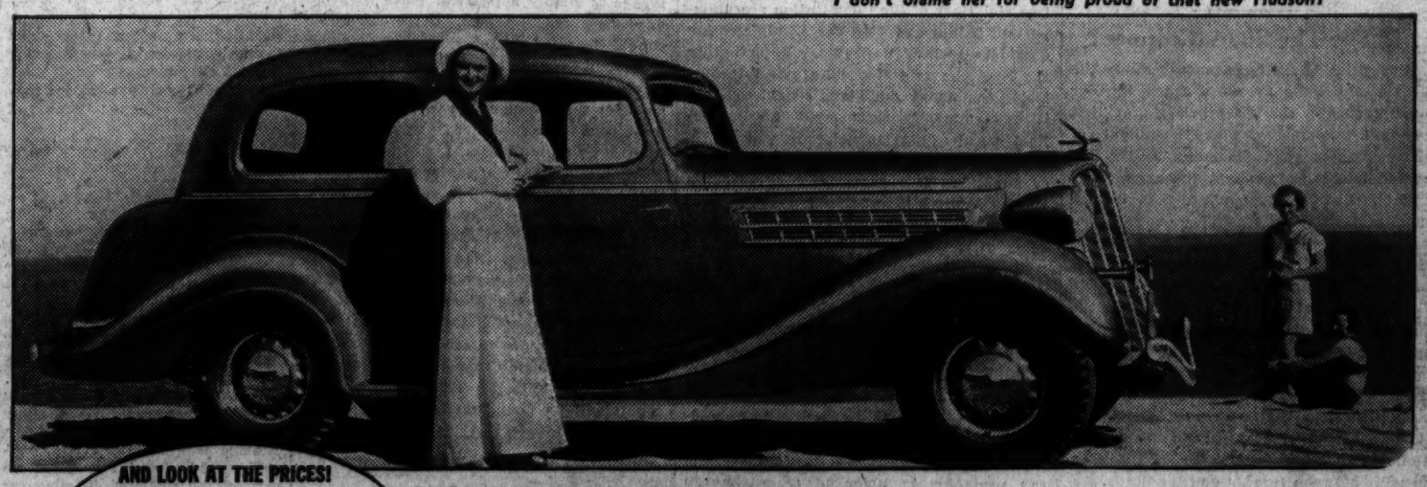
In police duty, safety is all-important. The Detroit police chose cars with America's only bodies all of steel. And cars with the quicker, smoother, straight-line stopping of Rotary-Equalized brakes—which they themselves had seen demonstrated right in Detroit.

Proved Economy, Too!

You'll never tax a Hudson Eight to its limit in ordinary driving. But a car so finely engineered—so smooth, so powerful—will give you more miles, and more enjoyable miles, at lower cost. Along with extra power, extra ruggedness and safety, it gives you amazing gasoline economy, also proved in recent nation-wide tests, averaging 20 1/10 miles per gallon.

Drive a Hudson Eight today—at any Hudson or Terraplane showroom. Discover for yourself how much more it offers, not only of performance, but of style, of comfort, of all you want in your own automobile.

"I don't blame her for being proud of that new Hudson!"



AND LOOK AT THE PRICES! $695 and up for Hudson Six . . . Hudson Eight $760 and up . . . Terraplane $585 and up. All prices f. o. b. Detroit for closed models.

The Airport Travesty.

By an overwhelming majority the House of Representatives has decided that Washington is acutely in need of a modern airport. But through its customary ineptitude when serving as a city council for the District, the House also wrote into the airport bill a provision that makes it impossible to achieve the end sought.

The House was swayed by the deceptive argument that other American cities have financed their own airports; therefore, the National Capital should do the same. That casual logic has an irresistible appeal for Congressmen who will not familiarize themselves with the fiscal relations between the Government and its Capital. The same fallacious reasoning guides the House in its consideration of virtually every local bill calling for expenditures. Washington is regarded as just another municipality where Congress chances to meet.

The District could well afford to finance its own airport if the Federal Government would pay its share of the local government's operating expenses. As matters stand, however, Congress insists on the maintenance with District funds of an elaborate park system and special institutions for the benefit of the country as a whole. Although it is steadily withdrawing land from the tax rolls and extending the need for fire and police protection as well as other municipal services, Congress has severely reduced its allowance to the District. As a result, education, public health and even police protection are neglected. In these circumstances it would be utterly unpractical, as well as unfair for the District to assume the full expense of building a model airport to serve the Nation as well as the municipality.

Congressman Blanton and some of his colleagues like to indulge in practical jokes at the expense of Washington. There is no levity, however, in this situation. Nineteen persons have just been killed in the crash of two airplanes at an airport in Colombia. Accounts of the tragedy suggest that inadequate facilities were a significant contributing cause. Experienced pilots informed the committee which investigated airport sites for Washington that they live in constant fear of a ghastly crash at the local terminus. Representative Maas is fully justified in his determination to "hold this House responsible if any deaths result from our failure to provide an adequate field." Observers outside of Congress will have no difficulty in narrowing that responsibility further.

As usual, the people of the District and the many visitors whose safety is constantly jeopardized, must now look to the Senate for rationalization of the airport bill. If the Blanton amendment can not be eliminated, the bill might just as well be allowed to die. Enactment in its present form would merely delay solution of the critical airport problem.

Aid For The Share-Cropper?

Opposition to the farm tenancy bill in the Senate was built up on a much broader basis than the specific provisions of that measure. Sympathy with the plight of share-croppers and farmers cultivating rented land was manifest throughout the debate. But 18 Democrats and 14 Republicans voted against the bill, apparently because they believed it would prove unpractical or would further confuse our already tangled farm policy.

The dominant note in the debate was the inconsistency of buying farms and equipment for tenants (many of whom have been forced to give up farming under the curtailment program) while the Government at the same time is paying farmers to reduce their crops. A number of Senators called attention to the unequal division of the AAA benefits between tenants and landlords. According to Senator Gore, 300,000 tenants have been displaced in the South. He estimated the number who have left farms in the country as a whole at 850,000. Most of these farmers are now "on relief."

These are harsh consequences of a policy designed to improve the lot of the farmer. Yet they seem to be consistent with the program of taking large areas of land out of cultivation. If fewer acres are farmed, fewer workers will be necessary to perform the work. In general this policy is still being followed by the AAA in spite of its disastrous consequences upon agricultural exports. At the same time it is proposed, however, to set up a Government corporation with $1,050,000,000 at its disposal to buy up farms and equipment for sale or lease to tenants on extremely favorable terms.

Farm tenancy has been a serious problem for a long time. From the sociological viewpoint it is highly undesirable to have a large percentage of the country's farm land cultivated by leaseholders whose chief interest lies in the immediate cash value of the crops they produce. A warm welcome should be extended to any sound and consistent effort to help good farmers acquire land of their own. But obviously any such program should be integrated with the general agricultural policy, not applied as a mere poultice upon sores created by other uneconomic measures.

The Government has had no experience in this field. Even if it is assumed that the elimination of tenancy with Government funds is practical, prudence suggests small-scale operations at first. With agriculture in a state of transition which makes market possibilities uncertain for even a short time in advance, there is grave danger of losing a large sum in a poorly-planned venture of this kind. If the House accepts the Senate measure, therefore, it would do well to put a sharp check upon the amount of capital allowed the Farmers' Home Corporation.

Irresponsible.

Two distinct issues, which must not be confused, have been raised by the President's demand that his tax program be immediately translated into law. The one is the social and economic desirability of that program. The other is the procedure to be used in making it a reality. However vital the matter of the President's proposals, the manner of their enactment remains the more important question. For while destructive taxation can threaten the welfare of the Nation, destructive government will jeopardize the very foundations on which our civilization rests.

The procedure which Mr. Roosevelt has chosen to jam this policy through is intolerable. No milder word will serve. This Congress had been in session five and one-half months, and adjournment was in sight before the message of June 19 was delivered. To almost everyone it came as a complete surprise, and Administration leaders, to say nothing of the opposition, at once realized the necessity for careful study of what the fragmentary proposals imply. "The proposed tax legislation," said Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, a week ago today, "will, of course, originate in the House."

On June 24, just five days after the message itself, came the command from the White House that legislation embodying the principles outlined shall be enacted this week. If these principles were the counsel of perfection, the embodiment of the wisdom of the ages in the field of taxation, this dictatorial procedure would still be disgraceful. A week ago Senator Harrison could not envisage the destruction of parliamentary tradition involved in treating a new tax program as a Senate amendment to the resolution continuing the excise taxes. Indeed, nobody with any real respect for the orderly processes of democratic government could have anticipated such an outcome. Yet here it is, by command of the man who on March 4, 1933, took solemn oath to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section 7 of that Constitution states clearly that "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills." The qualifying clause has been interpreted by the second chamber with great latitude. Never before, however, has a President requested that the Senate should initiate an entirely new tax program as a rider to legislation already passed by the House. If this is "preserving" the Constitution, then words have ceased to have any meaning.

Moreover, this cavalier attitude toward the organic law can no longer be regarded as exceptional governmental strategy. Mr. Roosevelt's Postmaster General, at a Democratic rally in Elmira the other day, devoted himself to the astounding thesis that executive violations of the Constitution are unimportant if they are what the Administration considers socially desirable. Referring to the NRA, he said that "the principle may have been wrong, judicially considered, but it was eminently right from the humanitarian and utilitarian points of view."

That doctrine verges upon the doctrine of anarchy. It borders on the reasoning which John Wilkes Booth employed to justify his assassination of Abraham Lincoln. It is thoroughly vicious doctrine, for it assumes that purely arbitrary power shall decide what is right and wrong. It is completely stupid doctrine, for it fails to realize that all human progress is contingent upon the supremacy of revisable law. And it is profoundly dishonest doctrine when it is voiced by those who have voluntarily sworn that they will devote themselves to upholding the organic law.

There is no doubt that the Constitution can profitably be amended from time to time, for which procedure provision is made. There is no doubt that our Federal taxation system needs sharp revision to bring it in line with current fiscal needs. But those are not the issues which the President has now raised. The question which he has defiantly flung in the face of every thinking American is whether government should be responsible or irresponsible; democratic or dictatorial; reactionary to the methods of the Caesars or progressive along the flexible lines mapped out by the founders of this republic.

Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have said that his tax program must be jammed through a la Hitler—without analysis, hearings or examination—because otherwise the sincerity of his share-the-wealth advocacy may be questioned. That may seem the issue to him. But to the Nation the issue is whether Mr. Roosevelt is the trustee or the uncontrollable master of the priceless heritage which he holds temporarily in trust. With such an issue there can be, if this democracy is to endure, no temporizing and no compromise.

Ten Thousand Years.

The world of astronomy is excited over the identification of a speck in the heavens as the third ranking member among the thousands of spiral nebulae. The nucleus had long been registered in astral catalogues. It first was noted 40 years ago as a spot of light in the great constellation, Camelopardis, that sweeps from the pole star to the northern horizon on summer evenings. But the Harvard University Observatory has now determined that the celestial body, known only as I. C. 342, is an enormous universe. A fringe of the Milky Way had hidden it from earlier notice. If seen by the naked eye it would appear larger than the full moon. Of particular interest to science, however, is the fact that it is less than a million light years away. This puts it relatively on the earth's front porch.

The new system is exceeded in size only by the great Andromeda nebula and the spiral known as Messier 33. The estimated diameter is 60,000 million million miles and its distance from the earth is 100 times that figure, or 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 miles. Astronomers first became interested in the nebula when they noticed it was not receding from the earth with the velocity of other galaxies. As the speed with which the whole cosmos is "exploding" increases with distance, this laggard characteristic suggested that I. C. 342 is very close to the earth. And a three-hour exposure of a photographic plate confirms this deduction.

The light that came through the telescope to expose the sensitized plate of the camera left I. C. 342 more than 10,000 years ago. At that time a prognathous human roved the swamps of the earth, viewing the heavens as an awesome cabal from which he took directions as to when to hunt, when to fight and when to make obeisance to his gods. The light rays now utilized at Harvard had traveled more than two-thirds of the way toward the observatory when Sargon of Akkad ordered his wise men in Babylon to study the varying aspects of the sky. A thousand years later in 2136 B. C. two Chinese priests, Hsi and Ho, were put to death for failure to perform the rites customary during an eclipse. Religion and astronomy were still closely related.

Two thousand years ago, with the interstellar journey four-fifths done, Pythagoras of Samos first advanced the theory that the earth was a sphere poised in space. Eratosthenes confirmed this a few centuries later and closely calculated the precise circumference of the globe. Hipparchus was born and died and Ptolemy took up where the former's studies had left off. Alexandria fell before Omar and years passed before Haroun al-Raschid ordered the science of the stars revived. Then the Moors swept into Europe, bringing with them their rich culture. Copernicus took up the torch in Italy. Came Kepler and after him Galileo, Newton, Laplace, Lagrange. Only 150 years more—Cassini, Halley, Bessel; now 50 years—Kapteyn, Young, Vogel. And now, today, the light arrives. Ten thousand years: to the world, the history of civilization; to the stars, a flickering instant.

A Challenge To Integrity.

As the House District Committee approaches a final decision in the renewed fight against its special committee's report on crime in the Capital City, unquestionable evidence of political pressure accumulates. Some members of the committee are being threatened with political sabotage if they stand by their convictions and uphold the report. The tactics of those who are trying to suppress the report have become so aggressive that it is no exaggeration to say the honor of the committee is on trial.

Originally the crime report was adopted by a vote of 9 to 6. Nothing has happened since that time to justify its reconsideration. The present pressure against the crime committee is simply a political move to avoid unpleasant repercussions. If the committee should surrender to these steam-roller tactics, in face of the unequivocal evidence in the crime report, it would be difficult indeed for the people of the District to retain their confidence in either its courage or its interest in their welfare.

It is possible, of course, for officials in the Government service and in the high councils of the Democratic Party to deny Congressmen patronage or to swing PWA projects from their districts. But when such threats are indulged in to prevent amelioration of shameful crime conditions in the National Capital they become a challenge to the very integrity of representatives in Congress. Fortunately it is no longer possible for the District Committee to sabotage the crime report without facing this stigma.

Is The Public Being Spoofed?

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

That slogan, "Save the Constitution!" adopted at the "grass roots" convention in Springfield, Ill., may be a little embarrassing to Republican members of Congress.

Someone may rise to inquire why, since the Republicans pledge themselves to rescue the historic document, representatives of the party in Congress voted as they did on measures since thrown out as unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

On the outstanding measure of that kind, the NIRA, a majority of the Republicans in the House voted aye. Ten Republican Senators did likewise.

Almost 60 per cent of the vote of Republican Senators was in favor of the Frazier-Lemke act, which passed the House without a record vote. This act was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous decision of the Supreme Court.

Not a single Republican Senator voted against the railway pension act, which also passed the House without a record vote. It, too, was thrown out by the Supreme Court.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

On Academic Freedom.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The issue of academic freedom is now raging as a live topic of public discussion. It seems to be assumed in some quarters that the teacher of youth should have unrestricted license to parade before his students any half-baked theory or wind of doctrine that might be blowing through the vacant spaces of his mind. In its legitimate and proper sense academic freedom means that mature and seasoned professors engaged in advanced study or research work in any field should be permitted to follow the lead of their own inquiry without being harassed or restricted by the president or the dictum of the governing board. Restraint of expression and caution of utterance will characterize the true teacher in dealing with impressionable youth, especially upon theories and hypotheses which are held in general dispute.

America was founded upon the basis of democratic institution. If there be bold thinkers who believe that our traditional principles are outmoded, let them step out in the open and file their declaration of independence; but let them not seek shelter from the consequences of this declaration under the cowardly guise of academic freedom. The overwhelming majority of the American people believe in democracy as against anarchy, nazism or communism.

Our schools and colleges were established and have been endowed or are currently supported to uphold and defend this traditional belief.

That such indulgence should be tolerated for a moment in state-supported institutions can not be tolerated for a moment. Every teacher in this type of institution is essentially a state officer and should be required to take the same oath of allegiance exacted of other Government officials, since they are entrusted with the training of our future citizens.

City Swell-Heads.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks for your editorial, "Whither," in the issue of June 20.

Those smarties who honk their horns at so many street intersections, as much as to say, "Everybody clear the track for me; I am it," ought to be "cracked down" upon till they learn a lesson in city driving

To hear their shrieking horn, you would think a traffic officer, a fire truck or an ambulance was coming. Nothing makes a law-abiding citizen so mad as such absolute disregard of the rights of all other car drivers who realize that their own rights stop precisely where the rights of the other fellow begin.

My observation during constant driving of recent years is that drivers on the highways are steadily improving and are more careful, courteous and more respectful of the rights of others. The worst offenders are these swell heads on city streets, proclaiming that all other cars must wait till they shoot by a street crossing at top speed.

News From Uncle Elby.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I was delighted to read the letters to the editor by Mr. G. R. Cooley. I sure do appreciate the opinion that Mr. Cooley formed and said of me.

He sure had a sense of humor in order to form the opinion from my tired profile that was in The Post. So, Mr. Cooley, thanks very much for saying what you did. I was very tired and did not expect any publicity on my visit to the Capital of our great country. I want to say that to me it's the most beautiful city I ever saw.

Thanks, Dr. A. A. Dunn, of Bethesda, for your apology in my behalf. You being my doctor for so many years, you knew. And it was all true of what you said of my condition, I never expected to be made known to the public, as my trip was to be only recreation. Some time I hope to visit Washington, and with the consent of my nephew, Clifford McBride, the cartoonist, bring Napoleon with me, and associate with all the kiddies and grown-ups that are interested in Napoleon and Uncle Elby. To cheer the kiddies is my greatest hope.

Money can not buy clean humor and the friendship of the kiddies and good people that are interested in our faithful friends, the doggies. Do you know that the friendship of a good dog is the greatest friendship in the world, except a mother's?

So to all the kiddies who read Napoleon and Uncle Elby in the funny strip of The Post each day I send greetings.

Drop me a line, kiddies, to Platteville, Wis.

"The Power To Maim."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to commend you on the article, "Whither," appearing in the issue of June 20, in which you excoriate the jittery autoist who turns the usually regular flow of traffic into a shambles to save a minute or two of time for which he can find no satisfactory use.

Your subject is of timely interest and the implications of your treatment of universal appeal. I only wish that we could in some manner raise up against this maudlin class who hold in their irresponsible hands the power to hurt, to maim, to tear and to rend, a universality of public antipathy that would make it patent to all that so to act would constitute a breach of common decency.

It can not be denied that it is a far cry from the present state of public indifference to such practices to the wholesome opposition which would be more normal to the best interests of all concerned. But every wisp of influence, irrespective of its origin, tends to draw us nearer to the consummation of the trend already begun; so, thanks for your excellent editorial, "Whither."

Still Older Church?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among the letters published in your issue of the 22d. I note one from Mrs. Charles S. Early, of Brandywine, Md., in which she tells most interestingly of an old Protestant Episcopal Church, at Baden, Prince Georges County, Md., built in 1692. This letter was written in reply to an article in The Post of May 8, stating that "North America's oldest Protestant church is St. Paul's, built in Halifax, Nova Scotia in 1750."

In a genealogical table I find that Capt. Thomas Graves, with his wife and two sons, came to Virginia from England with the second band of settlers in 1607-08. He settled on the James River, but later moved to the Eastern Shore. He was justice of Accomac in 1631 and at a court held September 14, 1635, was appointed vestryman of Hungar's Creek Church, which was situated on the north side of Hungar's Creek, about seven miles from Eastville. In 1690-95 another church edifice was built, and I think this is the present house of worship.

I believe Hungar's Creek Church is the oldest Protestant Episcopal Church to be established in America. The first rector of this church was the Rev. Francis Bolton. The Rev. William Cotton succeeded him and was rector until his death in 1640. The Rev. William Cotton came to the colony from England, bringing with him his wife. He was granted 350 acres of land on the main branch of Hungar's Creek, adjoining the lands of his brother-in-law, Capt. William Stone (first Protesant Governor of Maryland); 100 acres for personal adventure of himself and wife and 250 acres for the transportation of five persons to the colony—Eleanor Hill, Richard Hill and Edward Eason and two Negroes, Samson and Domingo.

After the death of the Rev. William Cotton the Rev. John Rozier was appointed to succed him. For a time he had as assistant Nathaniel Eaton, the first head of Harvard College. The other vestrymen of Hungar's Creek Church during this period were William Cotton (afterward rector), Obedience Robins, John Howe, William Stone (first Protestant Governor of Maryland), Mr. Burdett, William Andrews, John Wilkins, Edward Drew, William Beniman and Stephen Charlton. Hamilton's Patriotism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whatever may be said of Alexander Hamilton's political finesses, certainly his splendid patriotism in finally throwing his powerful support to Jefferson and against the discredited politician, Aaron Burr, of his own State of New York and of his own Federalist Party, was of the very highest.

He did it because of his hatred for the political showman and because, although he had "as much reason as any man to hate Jefferson," he felt that Jefferson would serve America better than Burr. That superb Americanism which lifted Hamilton, the arch-Federalist, above partisanship might well be emulated by some, if not most, modern Democrats, instead of by so few.

Not only might modern Democrats emulate Hamilton in patriotic action, but they might well emulate the principles enunciated by Jefferson, founder of the Democratic Party, in his first inaugural address, when he declared: "The sum of good government is a wise and frugal government" (and), one that "shall leave men free to regulate their own pursuits" with "equal and exact justice to all, honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none" and "economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our debts, and sacred preservation of the public faith"—and "should we wander from 'those principles' in moments of error and alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and regain the road which alone leads to liberty and safety." The Post Impressionist

She Was There, Too.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHEN we wrote those columns on the Mons Retreat —with certain animadversions upon wartime censorships—we hinted at a hope that the controversies regarding these matters would soon be ended. It was a pious hope, but we feared it might not be well founded. And it wasn't.

Here, for instance, comes a Virginia correspondent complaining against all discussions of the World War—but, though able, her complaint is itself a discussion. Moreover, she defends the American censorship—yet declares that the hospital-bedside letters of American Army nurses were unduly censored.

"I am," she writes, "one of those who don't like the War talked about. I saw something of the War.

"I was in France with Base Hospital 18—the Johns Hopkins unit—from the June of 1917 until my discharge as an invalid in January of 1919. And I was in England in 1915 and 1916."

Having thus qualified as a witness, she turns to the British censorship in re Mons.

She is quite rightly astonished that so much fuss should have been made over Hamilton Fyfe's contemporaneous description of the Retreat in the London Times. She can't see why his dispatch was considered an indiscretion.

For she says that, during her English visit, she saw "the Battle of Mons in an uncensored movie at a London theater." She says: "Women fainted. I cried. But one survivor of the London Scottish—a unit which had been almost wiped out in 1914—was in a rage because of my tears."

* * *

Our correspondent returned from England to her Virginia home, then "nursed on the Mexican Border" and finally went with the A. E. F. to France. She soon realized "why the American Army had to be so careful" in its censorship:

"There were in its ranks men of every national background."

One restriction indeed proved too much for her: "This was the restriction which forbade a nurse to write to the families of patients who died and to tell those little details which mean so much to a father or mother."

Nevertheless, she contends that "the English and Americans had the best censorships" among all the censorships of the World War.

A remarkable woman, this correspondent, who too modestly signs herself "Just a Pill-Slinger of the Forgotten Generation." She doesn't dread to count her years, and she gives a dig at the years of the Post-Impressionist.

"I was born," she says, "in 1880. But you, sir—

"Well, I happen to know your age and should take your youth into consideration.

"But, young man, are you like Will Rogers—do you know nothing except what you read in the papers?"

We might argue that, if we even knew all we read in the papers, we should know a lot. Rogers strikes us as a wise radio commentator—even when we disagree with him.

However, since the implications of our fair correspondent take a personal turn, we must rise to a point of personal privilege.

We are delighted to be called "young man:" it's some while since anybody so called us. We are immensely flattered by the assumption, on the part of a World War veteran, that we are too youthful to have any first-hand knowledge of the great conflict. These little attentions confirm our growing belief in the ancient theory of middle-age that a man is only as old as he feels—and we shall continue to mock the endocrinologists and the opotherapists.

But feelings and facts don't—superficially—agree. The sad facts are that the Post-Impressionist was a good deal nearer the Mons Retreat than the 1914 infants who were trailing clouds of glory around America—that he then was wearing long trousers in England—that he himself, on various fronts, subsequently saw (with his own startled, yet adequate, eyes) enough of this world fracas to make him undesirous of ever seeing another—and that, finally, he also saw more of the American censorship than the American censorship wanted to see of him.

"If"—so chuckled to us Gen. Marlborough Churchill, the excellent head of the A. E. F.'s Military Intelligence—"if I had not been at college with you, I'd get tired of keeping you out of jail."

For we had committed a military offense against the A. E. F. censorship. We received, and we still treasure, a formal statement of our crime—signed by Gen. John J. Pershing.

It is true that there was only one count in this indictment. But what a count! The document charged:

"You wrote and published an article in which you described the censorship of the American Expeditionary Force as 'one of the horrors of war.'"

Man Of Action.

As the Democratic leaders worked feverishly yesterday to extricate Mr. Roosevelt from the mess they, at least, consider he has gotten into, there was considerable tendency to compare his tax outburst with his precipitate action against the air-mail contracts. As to how many lives would be lost or how much property would be destroyed this time, figuratively speaking, no one attempted to predict. Suffice to say is that there was greater confusion on Capitol Hill than there has been at any time during his administration and this is saying a lot.

And like the air mail debacle there was the question whether the more Mr. Roosevelt moved in this instance and the more he says will not press him further into the hole.

Whereas his original proposals were generally received as nothing more than political gestures the tendency now is to consider him scarcely less sincere in pressing them. It is a paradox, but, nevertheless, that is the way the situation is shaping up.

• • • •

It seems that few, if any, of the leaders had any definite forewarning that the so-called tax proposals were coming up—that is, not until a short while before they arrived. They had known, however, of his concern for Huey Long and had tried to allay it. Huey was not worth taking seriously, they tried to convince him. But when the proposals showed up out of a clear sky they assumed their efforts had been unavailing. Some observers are of the opinion that he overlooked the fact that the nuisance tax resolution, the one extending so-called nuisance taxes another year, was pending in the Senate. Whether this is true or not can not be ascertained. It is a fact that the leaders consider the submission of the proposals with this measure pending was the most foolish thing they had seen in a long time.

It made it possible for Huey, and the Progressives, to a lesser extent, to put his sincerity to an immediate test. Then with his sincerity questioned the President called the leaders to the White House and insisted upon the most drastic action to come from a President in many years, the passage of a bill really designed to pulverize big businesses and large estates without study or discussion.

He seems, in short, to have put himself in the position of being damned if he does and damned if he doesn't.

• • • •

For example, it certainly did not help him with thinking people if his proposals were originally intended as merely a political gesture. Yet if he was really sincere and wanted them enacted in the short period which he now prescribes we have a most amazing President, indeed. How, under the circumstances then, he is to come out of the mess with the slightest political advantage is difficult to understand.

Some observers still hold to the belief that on the soak-the-rich aspect of the proposals he is making himself solid with Huey Long's followers. The Democratic leaders think he was needlessly alarmed over these followers. Aside from this, for anyone to figue that the proposals will help the President with them must take the assumption that they are utterly dumb. A degree of dumbness must admittedly be attributed to them, but it seems impossible that a people can be as dumb as they must be to become enthused about these soak-the-rich proposals.

What the proposals are more likely to do is to bring an end to the bunk that they have been served for so many years. After all these years of talking about making the great rich pay the bill a soak-the-rich scheme is finally evolved by a soak-the-rich President and its annual yield is expected to be a measly $340,000,000, or as one Senator expressed it, one-third of an authorization made in the tenant farmers' bill passed day before yesterday.

It is significant in this connection that Senator Borah took the "share-the-wealth" cloak off the proposals in a statement Sunday night. It is not a share-the-wealth proposition at all, he pointed out, but a share-the-burden one.

The followers of Huey about whom Mr. Roosevelt is so concerned had not considered the matter in this light. They thought the money was to be divided among them, not applied to overdue bills, and they certainly thought it would be more than $340,000,000. It may be that some wind will be taken from Huey's sails, but how about Mr. Roosevelt?

"Drive slow, Joe, Heinie Manush is coming up to bat!"

Law And The Executive

Supreme Court In United States And Judicial Committee In England Both Move Toward Decentralization In NRA Decision And In Refusing Appeals From Irish and Canadian Courts.

By Stephen King-Hall.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London (By Mail).

I HAVE recently had occasion in these columns to suggest that the maintenance of democratic principles and institutions in the United States of America and the British Empire is a matter of vital importance to the future of world civilization, at a time when the menace of the totalitarian state is rampant in many parts of the world. If, however, democratic principles are to retain the respect of the English-speaking peoples it is essential that they should be expressed through institutions which are sufficiently flexible to adjust themselves to the changing conditions of society. The courts of law are among the most important of such institutions, and especially when they are concerned with the interpretation of constitutional questions.

By a coincidence the two most respected and influential courts in the world, the Supreme Court of the United States and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Great Britain, have just delivered judgments of the utmost significance. The American court has upset the apple cart of NRA by an opinion which the President has interpreted as invalidating its codes. The British court has finally destroyed all suggestions that the Dominions of the Empire are not sovereign states in the fullest sense of the word. Both courts were pronouncing upon questions of sovereignty, and both courts were in effect ruling that the executive possesses only qualified sovereignty.

The American decision was a surprise to many people in Great Britain who have been studying the course of events in the U. S. A. It seemed to British observers that matters had gone so far in connection with the New Deal administrations that an attempt to wrench parts out of the structure might cause the whole edifice to topple sideways. Moreover, it was thought in Great Britain that the Supreme Court, which has in the past found itself able to interpret the Constitution in terms of contemporary conditions, would be equally adaptable on this occasion.

IT may be, of course, that in striking this body blow at the whole system of government interference in private business which the President has sponsored, the Supreme Court is not only interpreting the law, but voicing the will of the people. But so far as one can judge at a distance, if in fact the reforms of the New Deal are to be seriously impaired as a consequence of the action of the court, then Americans must be prepared for serious and prolonged industrial strife. Moreover, if as a result of that strife, or through some other means, the reforms endure and the judgment of the court becomes of no practical significance, then a danger will arise from the fact that the Supreme Court will have been brought into contempt.

The recent judgments of the judicial committee of the Privy Council have also moved in a decentralizing direction. One case covered the question as to whether the Irish Free State had the right to prohibit appeals from its court to the judicial committee of the Privy Council. In the other case the matter at issue was the right to appeal from the Canadian criminal courts to the British judicial committee.

The judgments delivered on June 6 say in effect that the statute of Westminster has swept away every trace of restrictive power over the Dominion Parliaments on the part of his majesty's government in London. Moreover, in the Irish case it has further been decided that the statute of Westminster gave to the Irish Free State power to abrogate the treaty of 1921 between the Free State and Great Britain, and that the Free State has in fact exercised that power.

• • • •

FOR over 100 years the judicial committee has been the final court of appeal of the British Empire, and there will be some who see in yesterday's decision the last act of dissolution. They will be right, insofar as the thing which has been dissolved is a conception of Empire which, though true enough 20 years ago, is now only existent in school books and the minds of die-hard Tories.

Another, and a more hopeful way of regarding these judgments is to look upon them as the end of one and the beginning of a new chapter in the history of the British Empire. From henceforward the sovereign states of the British Empire are associated as equals and on a voluntary basis. Such a partnership is the highest form of expression of the democratic principle.

The British Commonwealth of Nations and the U. S. A. are both confronted at the moment with a great political problem which is likely to be a test case for democracy. It is the problem of controlling the notion of Sovereignty. In the case of the Empire we have to discover how to coordinate the activities and aspirations (political and economic) of a multitude of units from dominions to crown colonies. The U. S. A. is faced with the same kind of problem in the question of the relations between the Federal Government and the 48 States.

On the one hand all the conditions of the modern world, our radio, our improved means of transport, our interdependence upon each other from an economic point of view if we wish to raise standards of living, make it necessary for the interests of the whole to take precedence over those of the parts. On the other hand men are still at a stage in their intellectual development when they find it difficult to extend the range of their loyalties beyond certain limits of race, creed or geographical area.

Beer Dealer Is Fined For Sale to Minor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., June 25.—In the first such case heard here since the sale of beer was made legal, Thomas F. Bryant, who operates a restaurant in this city, was fined $25 and costs and received a 30-day suspended jail sentence on a charge of selling to a minor. He appealed and posted $250 bond.

Witnesses testified that Bryant apparently has tried to comply with the law. The defendant said the beer was sold to a man who gave it to a girl whose mother made the complaint. It was testified the girl was intoxicated at the time she was served the beer.

'Miss' France

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

I SUPPOSE the custom of awards of prizes to the most beautiful girls representing various districts began in America—I mean, the crowning of girls by competent judges, who thereupon become Miss Detroit or Miss Texas or Miss Something-or-other; then the champion beauty is christened Miss America, and after contests in Europe and elsewhere the world champion of pulchritude becomes Miss Universe.

I say this custom must be of American origin, because in France, for example, the prizewinner is not called Mademoiselle France, but Miss France.

• • • •

And a curious thing has just happened here in Paris, where we arrived last week; it occupies a certain amount of space in the newspapers, though I do not think anyone is unduly excited about it. Whatever interest it may have comes this time from the unexpected and rather violent display of nationalistic sentiment, on the part of the crowd who awaited the decision.

The judges were professional painters and sculptors, journalists, directors of movies, and art photographers; their sessions are held in secret, and no photographs of the contestants are permitted, except of the winner. The prize is not only eagerly sought for its natural glory, but the winner and her mother get free tickets to the United States and probably to South America.

• • • •

Well, the prize was awarded day before yesterday to Mlle. Elizabeth Pitz, a brunette. Now it happened that she was born in the Saar, the country which recently voted for Hitler and Germany, and although this particular girl had voted for France, the crowd, as soon as the decision was announced, howled with rage, and showered such insults on the girl (who is a French citizen) that she had to be escorted from the hall by a bodyguard.

Whereupon she wrote the following letter:

"Monsieur the President of the Jury:

"I wish to express my thanks to the jury for electing me Miss France, thus recognizing in me the French type of beauty of which I am so proud!

"But since my birth in the Saar has aroused doubts in certain members of the jury, who, although they voted for me, had wished that the winner might have been born on French soil, I return my crown into your hands, asking you to transmit it to the girl who received the second largest number of votes, and who is in every way worthy of it—Mlle. Gisele Preville."

The French newspapers expressed their approbation of this letter, and at the same time their belief that Mlle. Pitz could have justly retained the prize.

No End of Books

So This Is Poetry.

ONE is not entirely surprised that Theodore Dreiser, at 64, has turned at last to poetry. And poetry of a rather distressing kind. For somehow, in all the long saga of this gaunt, gray monolithic man, of the author of "Sister Carrie" and "The Genius," and "The American Tragedy," there has been a taint of juvenility. Asked to put my finger on that, I would say that Mr. Dreiser, in hundreds upon hundreds of reportorial pages, has shown his enormous appetite for swallowing life in great gobs—and he has seldom, if ever, shown his ability to digest it.

Believe me, I mean no "digestion" in a super-mundane sense; I mean only the "digestion" which a human being reaches with comparative maturity. Mr. Dreiser, I hazard, is still as "bothered" by the world as he was at 23—the point squeaks queasily from the pages, and the very title of his latest opus, "Moods: Philosophic and Emotional: Cadenced and Declaimed by Theodore Dreiser." (Simon & Schuster, $3).

• • • •

WE have here some 250 "prose poems," snatches of subjective reactions to dozens and dozens of assorted topics which are expressed in a sort of short line, oratorically cadenced, purple phrased flow. The superficial impression, as I read them, is one of wordiness, like nothing so much as the "art poems" which coagulate on the pages of any college literary magazine. And the deeper impression is even less admirable. Let me give you one poem as illustration. This is called "Conclusion."

"In the silence of this room
In the silence of my own heart
The voice of the world excluded
Its babble
Its clatter
I return.
I return
But to whom?
To what?

Love?
It has failed me.
Hope?
For what have I to hope?
Youth?
It has gone.
Strength?
It has fled.
Dreams?
They need what I have not
To make them real.

And then the first stanza is repeated, with an effect which I can describe as kin only to the first inklings of nausea.

• • • •

I AM afraid I could be really heated in a moment. So this is literary distinction! So these quasi-pseudo lines are poetry! So this piling of banality upon banality is the rich, ripe vision of maturity, this adolescent, green-gage, sour commonplaceness and decently poetic and printable "Conclusion" of even the callowest mood! Let me warn hasty readers who are likely to say, "But that is true, that is what I feel," that there has been, by this time, some poetry in the world, even in this vein, which is true poetry and not juvenile balderdash.

Look up, if you will—and it is only the very first example, out of possible dozens, which comes to mind—Matthew Arnold's "Dover Beach." I vastly prefer even the diapason tones of a Victorian school inspector to anything printed in the above 1935 volume. There was, at very least, a respect for the fact that the music of poetry is a shade or two above the elementary pipings of a penny flute.

Fatal Fireworks Blaze To Be Investigated

Elkton, Md., June 25 (AP). — A formal investigation into the fireworks factory blaze of last week in which two persons lost their lives will be held in the near future, Coroner Stanley Jeffers said today.

The hearing can not be held, Jeffers said, until after all those injured in the blaze are able to appear. Two of them, Howard Ashe and Mrs. Edith Harvey, still are in the hospital suffering with second degree burns. Miss Catherine Mae Daniels and Mrs. Thelma Dunlap were fatally injured in the blaze.

Rifle Tourney Is Due Near Waynesboro, Pa.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 25.—Three hundred pistol and rifle marksmen will meet in the annual Eastern small-bore rifle tournament at Camp Albert C. Ritchie, six miles from here, on July 4. The event will be under the supervision of the National Rifle Association, with Maj. Benjamin Mills, director of civilian marksmanship, serving as executive officer for a program which opens July 3 and ends July 8.

Maryland Plans Survey For Planting of Oysters

Crisfield, Md., June 25 (AP).—H. Edward Collins, engineer of the State conservation commission, has been instructed by Chairman Robert F. Duer, of the commission, to survey a part of Great Rock in Tangier Sound for experimental work in oyster shell planting.

Two Convicts Escape From Jail at Leesburg

Leesburg, Va., June 25 (AP).—Two prisoners, William Summers and Robert Wright, escaped from the Loudoun County Jail here early today.

The break was discovered by Sheriff E. S. Adrian when he went to the jail to make his customary round. He found the pair had sawed their cell grating to reach an outer door, which they unlocked.

Ozark School Rises to Fame In Helping Poor

Institution Opens its 28th Year in Fall With Enrollment for 300.

By the United Press.

Point Lookout, Mo.—In a slim brochure entitled "A Story of the School of the Ozarks" is this paragraph:

"The School of the Ozarks has been established and is maintained to give an opportunity to the underprivileged boys and girls of the Ozarks to secure an education and training that will better fit them to fight their battles in life. The School of the Ozarks has never in all its history turned away a student for lack of money on the part of the aspirant."

Thus briefly summarized are the ideals and generosity and secret of success of one of the most remarkable educational institutions in the United States.

The school next September will open its twenty-eighth year. Three hundred students, poor for the most part, will be enrolled.

Minister Visioned School.

The Rev. James Forsyth, an ailing minister, tramped the Ozark hills seeking renewed health, recognized the need of educational facilities for youthful "hill billies," and appealed to the Missouri Synod of the Presbyterian Church.

In September, 1907, a small building in Taney County, Mo., housed the first School of the Ozarks. The enrollment was 35, and only elementary grade school courses were offered.

Incorporation was in 1907, and the first high school graduate was Joseph Gideon, now Taney County prosecutor. This year 57 students received diplomas.

Hunting Lodge Bought.

After the first building burned in 1915, the board of trustees bought a large hunting lodge near Hollister which had once been the State of Maine Building at the St. Louis World's Fair. The building served as a dormitory, dining hall, classrooms, teachers' quarters, kitchen and library. It was named Dobyns Hall after Dr. W. R. Dobyns, for many years president of the board of trustees.

Later, H. T. Abernathy, Kansas City financier became interested in the school from a little country girl who brought him a drink of cool water while he was on a hunting trip. When she mentioned that she had completed work at the school and would like to attend a high school, he investigated the work of the institution.

Large Donations Received.

He built two buildings for the school in 1917 and 1921 and later an addition to one of the buildings. In 1927, A. P. Green, of Mexico, Mo., gave $60,000 for construction of the Allen P. Green administration building.

The enrollment has kept pace with the physical growth. For the last several years hundreds of applications have been refused because the school can take care of only 300 students. Since 1913, 500 have been graduated.

Most of the institution's progress dates from 1921, when Dr. R. M. Good became president.

"We get a great thrill out of the realization that there are children living many miles from a railroad or educational institution taking accredited high school courses," Dr. Good said. "These young people are admitted not because of any means they might have to offer—and 80 per cent of the enrollment this year paid nothing at all.

"The ambition of the school is to develop its boys and girls into well-rounded men and women, intellectually, spiritually, socially and vocationally."

Each student works a few hours each day to pay for his vocational and academic training.

State Legion Will Heet At Martinsburg in '36

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 25.—The tenth district, American Legion of West Virginia, will hold its annual 1936 meeting here, according to a decision reached at the annual meeting Sunday in Keyser. The date will be set later by the executive group. Veterans' problems were discussed at the meeting by Claude L. Smith, St. Albans, West Virginia Department commander; State Service Officer Cunningham and State Replacement Officer Gastineau, both of Charleston.

The tenth district includes the eight Eastern Panhandle counties.

Canada Marks Rail Centennial Of 16-Mile Line

Celebrates the Birthday of Largest System in America.

By the United Press.

Montreal—Canada is celebrating a century of progress in railroading this month.

It was in June, 1835, that construction was begun on the first railway—the Champlain & St. Lawrence Railroad, a line running from Laprairie, near Montreal, to St. Johns, Quebec, near the United States border, a distance of 16 miles.

And it was from this humble beginning that the present great state-owned Canadian National Railway System, the largest on the North American continent, grew.

Development of Canadian railways has been closely linked with United States transportation from its earliest stages. The Champlain & St. Lawrence Railroad opened for traffic a year after construction began, and was a success from the beginning.

Extended in Two Directions.

It was operated for ten years. Then it was decided to lengthen the route, and the rails were extended to St. Lampert, just across the river from Montreal, in one direction, and to Rouses Point, on Lake Champlain, in the other. Much of the traffic moved to and from New York by the Richelieu River to Lake Champlain and thence via the Hudson.

In 1846-47 the Montreal & Lachine Line was begun and completed. Five years later the railway was extended and became known as the Lake St. Louis and Province Line, which ran from Caughnawaga to Mooers Junction, where it made connection with the American roads.

Several Lines Merged.

This enlarged line, later known as the Montreal & New York Railroad, did not pay, however, and was absorbed by the pioneer Champlain & St. Lawrence. In 1852 the pioneer was absorbed by the Grand Trunk Railway, which, in turn, was absorbed on January 30, 1923, by the Canadian National Railways.

Thus did Canada's venture in railroad building grow from 16 miles of track, a pigmy wood-burning engine and a few carriage-like coaches into a system that operates 24,000 miles of line, spread like a spider's web over the whole Dominion, a vast telegraph system, a chain of modern hotels, an express service covering entire Canada and a fleet of passenger and freight vessels.

Johnstown Planning Flood Memorial Park

Johnstown, Pa. (U.P.).—A 300-acre park as a memorial to the 2,209 victims of the Johnstown Flood of 1889 is planned by the city council and the citizens council of Greater Johnstown.

A site several miles from Johnstown embracing a section of the south fork of the Conemaugh River and the dam which broke, causing the disaster, has been offered by the Berwyn-White Coal Co.

Architects of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs, at the request of civil and official groups at Johnstown, are making preliminary studies of the site to determine its possibilities as a memorial park.

Squaw and War Club Fail to Halt Evicters

Syracuse, N. Y. (U.P.).—It took a band of 30 Indians, aided by deputy sheriff's, to evict Mrs. Iva B. Lyons, 26, widow of the late Chief Emmitt Lyons, from the home which she claimed was hers on the Onondaga Reservation.

White man's law and Indian custom held otherwise, however, and after a prolonged siege in which the young widow threatened the Indians with hot water, a spiked war club and a rifle, she was evicted and the owners designated by the court took possession.

No Fireworks Before July 1.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 25.—Hagerstown is not going to have a premature Fourth of July celebration if the police have anythnig to say about it. Plagued by complaints some years back that the local celebration began as much as two and three weeks before that holiday, authorities announced that an ordinance making it a violation to sell fireworks until July 1 will be strictly enforced.

Two Doors Above The Mayflower

Expert Repairing

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. Her column is found each Sunday on the Household Pages of

Cooling Tricks Are Old Story To Night Clubs

One Can't Imagine Way to Defy Summer and Not Find It.

According to the present pattern of after-dark spots in and around Washington, it is practically impossible to think of a means of keeping cool and not find it some place waiting for you.

Even the portly gentleman who dreams of solid comfort on an air-inflated cushion floating placidly among cakes of ice in a shadowed pool could make arrangements, perchance, with Maryland Club Gardens, for example, which has the pool, the coolness and the splendid dinner—if not the air cushion immediately at hand.

• • • •

To the how-I'd-like-to-get-out-on-the-green-lawn diner we can recommend a brand-new name—Griffith Farms. This old colonial mansion has been remodeled, redecorated and dressed up in its Sunday best for a gala season for those who like a cooling 30-minute drive from the city before dining. Here the how-I'd-like-the-etc. exponent will find a screened-in brick terrace, stately old trees and broad lawns sprinkled with umbrella-topped tables. Food any way you wish it served—and cocktails. Griffith Farms explains that air cooling with them means "natural" air cooling with gentle, evening breezes doing the trick. Drive out the Marlboro pike, 3 miles beyond the District line.

Speaking of those who like the outdoor environment brings to mind that the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Byrns, with Secretary and Mrs. Wallace, were dinner-dance guests at the Shoreham's Terrace the other night. Among the guests this week were the three charming daughters of Senor Manuel Trucco, the Ambassador of Chile—Marta, Graciela and Rebeca Trucco—and the equally charming Zoe and Olga Patterson, daughters of the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Guillermo Patterson. The attraction at the Terrace again this week are Eva Reyes, and her brother Paul, now in their fourth and last week at the Shoreham. Also on the Shoreham program are Rasso and Duval, international jugglers, and Louise Rozelle, modernistic toe dancer.

If your inclination for a cool spot takes you northward drop in and see Milton Barrett, host at the Dude Ranch, where you'll find all the cooling comfort of a Maryland evening in the country. And if you stick around you'll be greeted by the "Venetian Belles," a night show of the first order featuring Dolly Dare, Nickie Marrion, Billy Adams and Lupie and Connie Marlow. Headlining the show this week is Jimmy Staley, N. B. C. artist, who is wrapping the customers around his finger—pfft, just like that.

Then there's the fellow who doesn't want to drive before refreshing himself. The manufactured coolness of the Mayflower cocktail retreat is a good prescription. It is reported that direct wires to Capitol Hill are contemplated by the Mayflower management. It seems the gentlemen from New York, Ohio and points east and west are frequent visitors to the lounge and, after all, every convenience should be extended.

The outdoor influence is lent to an in-town rendezvous at the Powhatan. Hal Kemp soon found that out and has been a visitor atop the Pennsylvania avenue hotel with members of his band now playing at the Earle. Maxine Grey, featured songstress with the Kemp organization, particularly has found the summer nights delightful on the Powhatan roof, and has been a guest almost every night since she arrived in the city. Incidentally, the new Marty Rubin song hit is called "Dolores," from Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book."

Jimmy Santmyer, maestro at Childs Gingham Club, is nearly ready to observe his first anniversary at that downtown retreat. It comes off next week . . . "Colonel" Joe Wubbold, Santmyer's drummer, is vacationing (without drums) over on the Eastern Shore . . . and Dottie Rozelle, who plays those delightful piano interludes at the Gingham Club, had a visit from Mamma Rozelle, all the way from Charlotte, early this week . . . Out at Chevy Chase Lake, Lee Field's band is featuring Leigh Windham, who recently won a masked singing contest . . . They moved the Club Habana way up to the roof at the Arlington, but decided to leave the familiar round form of the Habana's major domo down at the front door as usual . . . Moe Baer's band is playing at the Arlington roof with Russ Cullen and Jimmy Bright reciting the lyrics most satisfyingly.

Dancing continues to 2 at the Madrillon with Leon Brusiloff and the much-favored Brusiloffians. And that goes for Sundays and Saturdays alike . . . The Royal Hawaiians are the same Royal Hawaiians at Ambassador's Hi-Hat. They've got new summer riggings. . . . The musical comedy team of Bourbon and Bain touches off the floor show at the Lotus with Rose Heatherby performing a difficult toe dance and Del Compo and Diane, South American dance team, showing how the continental is done down Rio way . . . Bill Strickland's orchestra is featuring the singing of Fred Koehler, Judy Ellington and Lew Davies this week . . . The Lotus is another air-cooled spot . . . And speaking of cool summer evenings, don't forget the steamer Potomac capitalizes nature's own cooling system—Ol' Man River . . . The moonlight cruise slips off at 8:45 p. m., with an abundance of scenery, cool breezes and steaks and sea food.

Agile Dancers at the Lotus

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway Looking Glass.

New York, June 25.

A great adventure has failed. Our dog ran away, chewing her way to freedom by biting through the leash that detained her in the courtyard. She made straight for the rolling acres of Central Park, her canine imagination fired by the thought that this would be a mad frolic, an exciting romp, a complete release from the obligations which even a chow must observe in our rigid civilization. All of us have experienced the same fierce yen for an impromptu escape that undoubtedly obsessed the fleeing dog, so I had complete sympathy with her slice of vagabondia. But the great adventure failed. They brought her back several hours later, the pads of her forefeet torn and scarlet from the running in which she had engaged. Even in escape, civilization reached out to snatch her back, for she had become softened by sprawling on rugs. She is out in the kitchen now, morosely licking the paws that frustrated her. The wag of her tail and the sheepish look in her eyes convey patience, but the pads of her feet will heal and some day she'll try it again. Dogs and humans find it difficult to learn a lesson.

Not since the days when women swooned at the stage door as the late Lou Tellegen emerged has New York had a matinee idol to match Leslie Howard. Day after day, and night after night, from 200 to 300 women crowd around the stage door of the Broadhurst to catch a close-up view of the slim, sandy-haired Briton. The Mackey Theater ticket office, across the street, which displays placards of the Howard show, with pictures of him for adornment, is pestered daily by women who want to buy the placards. John Dunleavy, the Mackey headman, asked one of them what she wanted with it. "Perhaps he'll autograph it," she sighed. The advent of Howard has actually turned West Forty-fourth street in the Boulevard of Sighs. Infatuated women give out "oh-h's" and "ah-h-h's" each time the star emerges. It is the most unusual sight Broadway has seen in many years.

Notes: The Bat Dancer at French Casino, Flora Duane, will marry Earle Leslie, Mistinguette's dance director . . . Bill (Sketch Book) Rey and Lila Stepp, Carroll shapely, are star-dusting . . . Saratoga assignments will include Harry Richman to Arrowhead and Helen Morgan to Piping Rock . . . Hugh Baillie, United Press prexy, keeps in shape at the New York A. C. . . . Leo Morrison and Judith Barron are seeing the town together . . . Al Shayne, who had his nose bobbed so that they could hear him in the balconies, cares for Florence Barlow . . . Eddie Lewis, company manager for Clifford Fisher, and Ellen Patti, of the Carroll choir, need ice packs . . . Nothing to the Fred Baehler-Betty Douglas marriage reports (she hasn't been divorced yet) . . . Four of the Lombardo brothers play in the band—the fifth is an interior decorator . . . Milton Charleston and Julia Mooney are cutting up touches . . . The Leo Federmans (She's Sylvia Annenberg) are Reno-bound.

A reader, commenting on the line that appeared here concerning the probable dropping of Marjorie Oelrichs from the Social Register because of her marriage to Eddy Duchin, asks whether the austere little volume is made up by people who are socially prominent, or if it is a commercial publication which is recognized as authoritative index of "Who's Who." The Social Register was originated as a business venture by Louis Keller, who founded the Baltusrol Golf Club. Since his death, it has been owned by his nephew, Charles Keller Beekman. Power behind the throne is Miss Bertha Eastmond, who lives placidly and quietly in Summit, N. J. They say that she decides probably 80 per cent of the cases that come up for decision. She was the confidential secretary of Louis Keller, and his will made it mandatory upon his heirs to employ her for life. Correspondents in key cities send her the data she requires. The publication makes about $50,000 a year, and is for sale if you have the $650,000, which is the asking price.

Short Story: Pat Drew, of the Paramount Coast staff, was one of the victims in the air liner crash at Macon, Mo. The other day they had to amputate his leg. Desperately despondent, he was visited in the hospital by Herbert Marshall, who lost a leg in the war. The confidential chat between the two men who had met the same misfortune did the trick. Drew has been on the mend ever since.

Not all of us can afford the contemplative leisure of Charlie Chaplin. His last flicker, "City Lights," was made in 1931. Almost five years will have elapsed before his next effort is delivered. If each one of us had five years in which to prepare one effort, perhaps we could all qualify as geniuses, huh? I met a specialist like Chaplin once. Asked what he did to support himself, he told me that he sold Christmas wreaths. That is an unhurried job, too.

Most unusual novelty on Broadway at the moment is the dog called Red Dust, a Manchurian dog that is as supple as a double-jointed acrobat. Bob Williams, who exhibits him in "Sketch Book," is a Californian, a former lifesaver at Santa Monica. He first had success training a seal. A friend brought him the dog as a 2-month-old pup from China. Williams trained the dog even more successfully than he had trained the seal. His dog earns him about $350 a week.

Stadium Plans Will Be Given To Park Board

Capital Recreation Project Will Come Up During 3-Day Meeting.

Plans definitely locating the 80,000-seat stadium, National Guard Armory and other fields and structures which will comprise Washington's largest recreational tract will be submitted to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in the course of its three-day meeting which opens tomorrow.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks, made the announcement yesterday. He is chairman of the advisory committee appointed by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes to study the project, which is proposed for development at the foot of East Capitol street.

Francis P. Sullivan, architect; Bremer Pond, landscape architect, and National Park Service engineers drafted the sketches and designs which will be offered for the planning commission's approval. They provide for a stadium, armory, outdoor theater, swimming pool, bathing beach on the shore of Kingman Lake, a hall for ice skating and indoor sports, and a 40-acre demonstration field.

Transportation problems which the vast project will engender also have been studied, with provisions being made for pedestrian, motor, bus and railroad traffic. The preliminary work under Finnan's direction is financed by a $15,000 PWA allotment. There has been no appropriation as yet for any construction.

Parking Limit Cut At Scenic Points

The two-hour parking limit in the Washington Monument and Smithsonion grounds has been reduced to one hour as a concession to tourists, Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, park police head, announced yesterday.

He said the new rule will be strictly enforced, which means that employes of the Agriculture, Commerce, Navy and other departments accustomed to parking in this vicinity must seek other space. Heretofore many Government parkers have circumvented the two-hour limit by leaving their offices at intervals and exchanging places.

Complaints made by tourists and visitors, some whom have had to park on the grass because Smithsonian roadways and Monument circle were filled with cars, led to the restriction, said Capt. Carroll.

Staunton Gives Definite Value To Its Students

Winner of Post Contest to Have 2 Years of Fun in Learning.

When a boy learns everything he needs to know, to enter college and to follow his chosen walk in life, and at the same time enjoys the process of absorbing learning, education approaches its ideal. That is why the boy who wins The Washington Post-Staunton scholarship contest will be fortunate in the extreme.

The intimate "discussion group" method of study employed at Staunton makes learning a pleasure. It is more effective than the older method of learning by rote, for it stimulates thought. As the boys sit about a table, in a room that looks more like a library than a schoolroom, they discuss the subject at hand eagerly, under the guidance of an instructor trained in modern methods of education.

Each boy is encouraged to feel that everything he studies has a definite value for him; that he is learning for his own good and not merely to memorize something his instructor wants to hear. Since classes are small, each boy's education develops along lines appropriate to his individual aptitudes and capacities. Yet the work is arranged and carried out so as to cover fully all requirements for admission to college.

Somewhere in Washington is a boy who is going to enjoy the benefits of two years at Staunton as the Post scholarship winner. He must be the son of a World War veteran and he must have completed his second year of high school, to be ready to enter junior year at Staunton in the fall.

The winner will be determined on the score of scholarship records, character and an essay on "Why I would like to go to Staunton." Any boy wishing to enter the contest should write for details at once. Application blanks may be obtained from Alice Fox Pitts, Staunton contest director, The Washington Post.

This Looks Like a Little Session But It's a Class

This small "discussion group" is the method of study followed at Staunton Military Academy at Staunton, Va. These boys are really in class, under the modern methods at the school. The Post is giving a scholarship to the school to some World War veteran's son who has completed his second year of high school.

Horace Erskine's Body Is Recovered

RFC Worker Died Saturday in Canoe Accident.

Harbor police yesterday recovered the body of Horace Erskine, Reconstruction Finance Corporation worker, who was drowned Saturday in a canoe accident in the rapids of Little Falls in the upper Potomac.

The body was found on the District side of the river a short distance above Chain Bridge by Joseph Fletcher, son of the boathouse proprietor who rented canoes to Erskine, France Fraze and two young women early Saturday afternoon.

Fraze, who lives at 1322 Twelfth street northwest, told police the canoe was smashed to pieces on the rocks. He said he tried to aid Erskine but became exhausted and had to swim to save himself. Erskine's body was identified by his brother-in-law, B. H. Calenan, of Mount Hope, W. Va.

Rites for Rector Of St. Joseph's Set

Father St. Laurent Will Be Buried Friday.

Funeral services for the Very Rev. Joseph A. St. Laurent, S. S. J., rector of St. Joseph's Seminary in this city, will be held in the chapel of the seminary Friday at 9 a. m.

Father St. Laurent died Sunday at Providence Hospital. He was born in Connecticut in 1886. As a boy he accompanied his family to Canada, where he received his academic education. He entered St. Joseph's Seminary in Baltimore in 1890 and was ordained to the priesthood November 1, 1892, at the Epiphany College in Baltimore, and soon afterward became its rector.

Father St. Laurent later was appointed to take charge of St. Joseph's Catechetical School at Montgomery, Ala. At the completion of his term there he returned to Epiphany College as rector. From 1910 to 1930 he was engaged in missionary work in various parts of the South, and at the opening of St. Joseph's Seminary in Brookland.

George J. Baur Dies At Home in Capital

George J. Baur, a former employe of the Washington Gas Light Co., died yesterday at his home at 1830 California street northwest. He had been in poor health for two years.

Mr. Baur, a native of Washington, was born in 1866. After attending local schools he entered the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Later he was employed by the gas company, from which he was retired after nearly 40 years' service. He was a former treasurer of the Kensworth Citizens Association.

Mr. Baur leaves his wife, two sons, Raymond H. Baur, of Bay Ridge, Md., and Arthur C. Baur, of Washington, and a daughter, Helen F. Baur, of Washington, and three grandchildren.

Owen Young's Wife Succumbs In Connecticut

Her Illness Caused G. E. Chairman to Reject Bid to Public Life.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Mrs. Owen D. Young, wife of the chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., died of a heart ailment today at her home in Riverside, Conn. She had been in ill health four years.

Mrs. Young, formerly Josephine Sheldon Edmonds, of Southbridge, Mass., attended St. Lawrence University in Canton, N. Y., and was graduated from Radcliffe. At St. Lawrence she met Young, and she married him June 30, 1898, at Southbridge.

For many years she was a trustee of Radcliffe College. She was active in philanthropy and education, and shared with her husband an interest in rare books and first editions.

She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

Leaves Four Children.

Surviving, besides her husband, are four children, Charles Jacob Young, of Ardmore, Pa.; Mrs. Edward Case, of Cambridge, Mass.; Philip Young, of Washington, and Richard, a senior at the Choate School in Wallingford, Conn.

Mrs. Young also leaves two brothers, C. H. Edmonds, of Wellesley, Mass., and Stuart Edmonds, of Winchester, Va.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1:30 p. m. at the Universalist Church in Van Hornesville, N. Y. Burial will be in the village cemetery, where seven generations of her husband's family are buried.

Outside her family, Mrs. Young's interests found her a member of the women's committee of the baby's ward at the Post-Graduate Hospital. She was active also in the Colony Club, the Women's City Club and the Radcliffe Club.

Father Optical Organizer.

Her father, the late Charles Sidney Edmonds, was one of the organizers of the American Optical Co.

For four years she struggled against the heart ailment. The shock she suffered when her son, John, was killed while trying to save a dog from an approaching train enfeebled her, and she never recovered fully.

In 1932 Young was prominently mentioned as a Democratic candidate for President but said he would not enter actively into public life because of his wife's illness.

Philip Young, a banker, who spends a large part of his time in Washington, left this morning for New York to attend the funeral of his mother. He will meet his wife in New York, according to her father, Horatio H. Adams, of 2475 Kalorama road northwest.

Adams said last night that although Mrs. Young had been in failing health for some time her death was unexpected.

Her son's Washington residence is at 2202 Wyoming avenue northwest. He married Miss Faith Adams, a Vassar graduate, in August, 1931, in the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity, New York.

Blind Pianist Wins Again.

Graduation exercises of the preparatory school of the Washington College of Music will be held tonight. The Hugh Rowland Roberts memorial scholarship will be awarded to Melvin Creamer, young blind pianist, for the second year.

Promise of Reich Spurs Britain to Seek Naval Pact.

While Pietri was speaking, the government asked the Chamber to appropriate 297,613,660 francs (about $19,600,000), over and above the 12,000,000,000 francs (about $792,000,000) already appropriated, for defense purposes.

The money would be spent, the government's bill specified, to cover expenses of lengthened army conscript service, additional crews for the 35,000-ton battleship Dunkerque and other warships being built, and ammunition reserves.

The navy committee resolved to ask the government to take all necessary measures in the Atlantic and Mediterranean to protect France.

Its resolution also recognized that the Anglo-German agreement "canceled" the naval section of the Versailles Treaty and urged Pietri to prepare for increased naval construction when the Washington treaty expires, by virtue of Japan's renunciation, at the end of 1936.

The government's naval program involves rapid completion of vessels under construction, "protective accords" with Italy and Britain and request for parliamentary permission to use credits in the naval budget sooner than was contemplated.

Post Will Revisit Siberia, Leisurely

Flight With Wife and Girl Aid to Take 6 Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Wiley Post planned a busman's holiday today as an aerial tourist to the Siberian towns which he once raced over on his around-the-globe record flight, but which he knows only as spots on the map.

He expects to take off for Russia in a couple of weeks on a leisurely plane jaunt with Mrs. Post and Faye Gillis Wells, the Minneapolis girl flier who was in charge of refueling the Winnie Mae at Novosibirsk, Siberia, when Post circled the world on a solo flight in the summer of 1933.

His plane, the Winnie Mae, veteran of two around-the-world trips, will be supplanted by a new ship recently purchased.

He anticipates his elapsed time will be in the neighborhood of six weeks, making hops of about 500 miles between hotels.

Miss Gillis, the wife of Linton Wells, flier, said they hoped to start as soon as Post receives permission to enter Siberia from the Seoviet government.

Do you tire easily?

S.S.S. Tonic brings vitality and tone to the whole body.

BODILY WEAKNESS is only one of the many symptoms of a low red-blood-cell count. Loss of appetite, underweight, nervousness and like common ills are often due to this same underlying cause.

The red-blood-cells must be up to normal and vigorous to keep the tissues pure and to help supply the body with fresh oxygen-energy in its circuit thru the entire body of over 200 times daily.

S.S.S. Tonic, in the absence of any organic disease, should help you get those vital red-blood-cells back up to normal. It will make you enjoy your food and help your digestion, too. It is a scientific medicine. 108 years of success. Just try it and you, too, may soon "feel like yourself again." Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood red cellophane wrapped package. The larger size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment—and is more economical, too. At all Drug Stores. © S.S.S. Co.

Camp Letts Cabin Will Be Dedicated

Ceremonies Tomorrow at Y's Summer Place.

With members of the Men's Club and the board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. attending, a rustic cabin recently built at the Camp Letts boys' summer camp, will be dedicated tomorrow.

Officials of the club, composed of business and professional men interested in the Young Men's Christian Association, will present the cabin to the board of managers in the presence of campers and councilors. Later the board will join club members in sharing dinner with the boys in the dining hall at 5:30 p. m.

The cabin, of log-type construction, will accommodate a dozen boys and two councilors. It contains modern conveniences belying the pioneer appearance of its exterior. These include soft bunks, planned ventilation and screens. The cabin is the eleventh of a building program begun several years ago.

2. The new Anglo-German naval accord shall be only preparatory to a future naval conference on expiration of the London Naval Treaty in 1935.

The official Italian communique on the conversations said:

"Capt. Eden this afternoon had another conversation with Premier Mussolini, lasting one hour. Various European problems were examined and it was agreed that the direction set in the London communique (with France) of February 3 and the Stresa resolution (adopted by Italy, France and Britain) may be the subject of development in the interests of European stability.

"During the conversation, the Abyssinian question also was examined."

Statement by Eden.

Capt. Eden's statement briefly said, "Premier Mussolini and I agreed on the possibility of continuing our work for European appeasement in accordance with the guiding principles set forth in the London communique of February 3 and the Stresa resolution."

This was taken to indicate that Britain and Italy remained in accord and that a situation which temporarily had threatened a breakup of the entente between them and France seemed to have been eased.

Eden planned to depart for London tomorrow noon, pausing in Paris for another conference with Premier Pierre Laval.

Crockett Owen Rites To Be Held in South

Funeral services for Crockett Owen, supervising attorney of the NRA, litigation division, who died Monday at his home at 1028 Connecticut avenue, will be held at Columbia, Tenn., his birthplace. His ashes will be removed there for services and burial.

Mr. Owen leaves his widow, two daughters, Virginia and Margaret Craige Owen, and a sister, Mrs. George E. McKennon, of Columbia.

Senate Votes $5,000 To Widows of Agents

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a bill by Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, to pay $5,000 to the widows of Federal agents killed in battles with gangsters.

The awards would go to the widows of Inspector Samuel P. Cowley and Special Agent Herman E. Hollis, killed in the "Baby Face" Nelson hunt; the widow of Special Agent W. C. Baum, killed in the Dillinger campaign; the widow of Special Agent R. M. V. Surratt, killed in an automobile accident while on duty in North Carolina, and the widow of Special Agent R. J. Caffrey, slain in the Kansas City massacre.

Pay War Debts, Americans Tell World's C. of C.

Obligations Are Blamed for Depression at Meeting of Group in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 25.—America's delegation to the International Chamber of Commerce convention today urged settlement of the war-debt issue as one of the essentials for world recovery.

A resolution submitted to the business congress, at which 35 nations are represented, by the 100 delegates from the United States linked war-debt settlement and currency stabilization as prime factors in ending the world-wide depression.

The Americans received an invitation to visit Berlin as guests of the German branch of the international chamber after the Paris meeting closes, and many of the 100 said they would accept.

Stabilization Urged.

Stabilization of currencies at approximately their present levels was advocated before the convention by Charles Rist, leading French financial authority long associated both with the Bank of France and governmental finance.

Declaring such procedure "quite possible," Rist said stabilization should be "on a fixed gold basis at a level for each country which would avoid the risk of either too sudden increase or decrease of domestic prices." Each country should choose "the level that would make its domestic debt bearable," he said.

Baron Luke, British manufacturer, who with T. E. Gregory, British economist, led the discussion at the second day's session, said British business wanted stabilization only if it were linked with destruction of excessive trade barriers.

Britain's Views.

"The British Empire shares the view that immediate improvement of trade would follow effective stabilization of currencies," he said, "but it is firmly convinced that no general stability can exist unless an agreement to stabilize is associated with an agreement * * * that international balances be settled by sales of goods and services instead of by transfer of gold and silver."

Gregory, asserting tariffs and the currency depreciation "war" resulted in continuance of the depression affecting international commerce, said:

"Reform must begin at some point. Admittedly the reintroduction of stabilized exchanges is not a simple solution of the difficulties from which the world is suffering. Admittedly also stabilized exchanges can not work satisfactorily without a cessation of the economic war at present engaging the nations of the world.

"But one must make a start, and it is certainly easier to start with currencies than with tariffs."

Bridge Is Wrecked By Train; 4 Injured

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Mo., June 25.—A 100-foot section of the west approach to the highway bridge spanning the Missouri River here collapsed, injuring four persons today when a runaway train crashed through two concrete piers supporting one end of the structure.

The train came to a halt after smashing through the entrance of a hotel.

Thomas Brown, Butte, Mont., president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and Louis Gambill, Joplin Mo., mine union official, riding across the approach, were injured when their car was caught in the mass of falling wreckage and plunged 40 feet to the main street.

Henry Rowe, St. Charles, a foot passenger on the approach, was treated for minor injuries, and Mrs. Katherine Hoh, proprietor of the hotel, was bruised and cut by flying debris. A customer at the bar escaped injury.

Mme. Boncesco Is Passing Month at 'Dude' Ranch

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"Dude" ranches seem to be attracting their quota of summer vacationists, and many Washingtonians are trekking westward. A letter from Mme. Boncesco, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, tells of the pleasures of the F-Bar Ranch at Granby, Colo., where she is spending a month.

Mme. Boncesco and her husband left several weeks ago, he to sail for Europe to pass the summer, and Mme. Boncesco by motor for the West. Her chief problem while on the ranch seems to be mastering the riding horses, and efforts to learn to saddle a horse are most amusing.

The ranch is high in the mountains amid tall pines, and still higher are the snow-capped peaks of the Rockies. A brilliant profusion of wild flowers attract the visitors, and the entire life of the ranch is out-of-doors. Riding is, of course, the principal sport.

Later in the summer, Mme. Boncesco will motor to the West Coast to visit for several weeks. She will return in the early fall.

Mayos Going to Colorado.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayo, of New York, also will spend the summer in Colorado, but not on a dude ranch. Mrs. Mayo was formerly Miss Kasa Sutherland, daughter of the former Alien Property Custodian and Mrs. Howard Sutherland, of Washington and West Virginia. She and Mr. Mayo are en route to this country after a world cruise. They will arrive next month, and will go to Rosedale, their 2,500-acre farm near the headwaters of Bear Creek. Mr. and Mrs. Mayo spend every other year in Colorado, where the former is alternating professor at the University of Denver. The years in between they spend in New York or traveling.

When in Colorado, their major interest is raising colts to be trained into hunters and polo ponies by a famous Irish horseman. Among the youngsters who will finish their schooling this year is Frock Coat, grandson of Man o'War. The altitude of the ranch develops splendid wind endurance in the horses, and Mr. Mayo looks forward hopefully to even greater honors for his stable next season.

Snow-Capped Peaks Visible.

There is grandeur in the mileage of these big ranches, in the long stretches between the master-house and the guest-house group, the quarters for the ranches, the stables and the trainer's house. The main house is an ensemble of foreign memories fortified by rugged walls of native stone. The broad gable with projecting beams suggests a Swiss chalet or a cottage in Garmisch-Partenkirchen. The cloister with its rounded arches is reminiscent of the Romanesque style of southern France. This romanticism is justified by the situation on a mountainside, with a long view to the snow-capped peaks of the continental divide, and by the fact that Mr. Mayo, formerly in the diplomatic corps, stationed in South America and Belgium, is on familiar terms with the less-tourist-infested places of the world.

Their small daughter, who was not old enough to make the world cruise with her parents, is with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland at their home in West Virginia, and will be on hand to greet them on their arrival in New York, and will go to Colorado with them later.

Festival Invites Mrs. Roosevelt As Honor Guest

Dance and Music Program to Be Held Tomorrow at Sylvan Theater.

Mrs. Franklyn D. Roosevelt has been invited by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples and Mr. C. Marshall Finnan, of the summer festival committee, to be the guest of honor at the program of dance dramas and ballets to be given at the National Sylvan Theater tomorrow night by the Lisa Gardiner Dancers and members of the Washington Composers Club. The dance program will be preceded by a half-hour concert by the United States Marine Band, conducted by Capt. Taylor Branson.

The event, the third summer festival of the season, will be attended by prominent Washingtonians and residents of nearby towns in Maryland and Virginia. Among those who will be guests of the committee are Mr. and Mrs. C. Melvin Sharpe, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Miss Sibyl Baker, Miss Edith Grosvenor, Miss Anna L. Goodwin, Mr. Arno B. Cammerer, Mr. James G. Yaden, Mr. Thomas S. Settle, Mr. Frank Gartside and Maj. Charles Demonet.

Miss Emma Ody Pohl, of the University of Virginia, who has invited the Miss Gardiner Dancers to give a program at the university early next month, will attend with a group from the summer school.

The Composers Club will be represented on the program by Mr. La Salle Spier, Mr. R. Deane Shure and Mr. Henry Gregor, who will play their own compositions, to be danced by members of the Gardiner group. Mrs. Mary Howe's music will be played by Mrs. Edith H. Hunter in the absence of Mrs. Howe.

Mrs. Cloman Off For California

Mrs. Campbell Pritchett to Occupy Her House.

Mrs. Sidney Cloman has left for California, where she will spend the remainder of the summer.

Her niece, Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, will move to Mrs. Cloman's house on Kalorama road early next week. The house has been leased during the winter by Judge and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs. Mrs. Biggs will spend the summer at her home in North Carolina, where Judge Biggs will join her later.

Mary MacArthur Is Wed To John E. Reyburn, 2d

Ceremony Is Performed at Church of Epiphany by Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, Followed by Reception at Sulgrave Club.

Escorted by her uncle, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States Army, Miss Mary Elizabeth MacArthur, daughter of Mrs. MacArthur and the late Capt. Arthur MacArthur, U. S. N., became the bride of Mr. John Edgar Reyburn 2d, late yesterday afternoon in a ceremony at the Church of the Epiphany on G street, which was solemnized by the Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, D. D. Mr. Reyburn is the son of Mrs. Erwin Albert Morse and Mr. William Stewart Reyburn.

White gladioli and lilies banked the altar and marked the family pews in the church and Australian ferns and palms were used in decorating the chancel. The bride was lovely in a gown of ivory tinted satin fashioned on princess lines with long, tight fitting sleeves, a square cut neckline and long sweeping train.

With it she wore a voluminous veil of tulle attached to a cap of rare old lace, a family heirloom. Bands of the same lace edged the long train. Marking the prayer book which the bride carried was a shower of lilies of the valley.

Bride Has Seven Attendants.

Narrow pleated ruffles edged the slightly trailing skirt of the attendants' frocks, delightful affairs of white mousseline de soie with elbow-length puffed sleeves and V necklines edged with bands of the same pleating. With the frocks they wore poke bonnets of stiffened white mousseline de soie with narrow garlands of pastel-shade flowers across the back. The attendants included Mrs. Bowman MacArthur, sister-in-law of the bride, as matron of honor; Mrs. William Arnold, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, another sister-in-law, Miss Phyllis Hight; Miss Mary Johnston, Miss Frances Mathews and Miss Jean Peeples. Beatrice MacArthur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bowman MacArthur, was the flower girl, wearing a white frock and sunbonnet and carrying a bouquet of pink and blue summer flowers in an old-fashioned lace holder.

Mr. Maury Reyburn was best man for his brother, and the following acted as ushers: Mr. Bowman MacArthur, Mr. Douglas MacArthur 2d, Mr. William Arnold, Mr. Erdar Orme, jr., Mr. Horace Peters, Mr. Thomas C. Moohead, Mr. William Osborne and Mr. Jean R. L. de Sibour.

Reception at Sulgrave Club.

Ferns and white summer flowers decorated the foyer, the drawing rooms and the dining room opening off the foyer of the Sulgrave Club, where a reception was given after the ceremony. The mother of the bride, in a handsome gown of raspberry red lace and a wide blue felt hat, and mother of the bridegroom, wearing a model of cocoa-colored lace with gunmetal accessories, assisted the young couple in receiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Reyburn will be at home at 1635 Connecticut avenue after July 15. The bride wore a smart traveling suit of navy blue sheer crepe with a blouse of striped taffeta for the wedding trip, on which they departed after the reception.

Both young people are popular members of Capital society. The bride made her debut in 1931 at a dancing party given by her mother on Thanksgiving Day. She is a member of the Junior League and a graduate of the Holton-Arms School. Her paternal grandparents were Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla and Mrs. McCalla (Miss Elizabeth Hazard Sargent, of Boston). Mr. Reyburn is the grandson of Mrs. Reyburn and the late Mr. John Edgar Reyburn, one-time Mayor of Philadelphia and a former member of Congress. He is a graduate of St. Albans School and a former student at the University of North Carolina.

Summer Course In Theater Arts Will Be Opened

Miss Constance Connor Brown has gone to her summer home at Glenora-on-Lake-Seneca, N. Y., where she will open the summer session of the Studio of Theater Arts next week. Miss Brown, who has been active in the theater in Washington and elsewhere for a number of years, established the studio home last October and during the winter produced three full-length plays at Wardman Park Theater in connection with the work of her school.

The interest shown in the winter classes of the Studio of Theater Arts led to the undertaking of a summer session, and Miss Brown's estate at Glenora provides a perfect locale. The place is an old farm which has been converted into a summer home, and there are adequate housing facilities so that the students may live on the estate. The farm still boasts two large barns which will be used for rehearsals. It is directly on the shore of Lake Seneca, and the students are looking forward to swimming and canoeing, as well as tennis on nearby courts.

A number of Washingtonians are enrolled in the summer session and will go to Genora next week. There will also be a few students from other cities.

Miss Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert D. Brown. Mrs. Brown is known to the literary world as Harriet Connor Brown, and she has a number of books and many articles to her credit. The Browns will be in Glenora this summer with their daughter.

Dorothy Perkins Leaves for Indiana

She Will Attend the First Session of Alpha Chis.

New Envoy to Canada Due Here This Week

Norman Armour, newly appointed United States Minister to Canada, and Mrs. Armour will arrive this week from Princeton, where they spent the week-end, having arrived from New York last week from an extended vacation in Europe. The minister, who formerly represented the United States in Haiti, succeeds the late Warren Delano Robbins in Ottawa.

Harmony Between Nations Is the Objective of New President of Women's Federation

Beauty Film Takes Place Of Stockings

Dame Fashion Springs New One With Liquid Leg Preparation.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

OLD DAME FASHION springs a new one on us. Liquid stockings that come in a tube! Heard of them yet? Seen them? Tried them? Just wait till you do!

Here's the low-down: A certain nationally known beauty expert returned last summer from a several months' tour of European resorts. She says she was aghast to find how careless the women of this country were about their hose, and when they wore no hose, their legs. "I could not decide which looked worse," she declared, "the wrinkled, twisted hose which some wore for sports or the bare legs in the rough."

Almost immediately this ingenuous person—she somehow has a cosmetic answer for every beauty problem—set about preparing what she terms a "beauty film." This is really make-up for the legs, a make-up which actually takes the place of hose, and for that reason is frequently referred to as "the liquid stockings that come in a tube."

You can imagine how it's going over. As the perfect supplement to the flat-heeled sandal, thousands of women are turning to it as an indispensable sports "accessory." Instead of having to bother about hose to twist, to snag, and to keep adjusted, they simply take a tube of this film, squeeze a small quantity into the palm of the hand and rub this over the legs. After it is dry they whisk on a bit of powder, and even their best friends can't tell they are hoseless.

Along comes evening, and still no hose worries. They give a bloom to the tips of their toes with some bright polish, don the beauty film, slip into their gay party dresses and it's on with the dance!

You don't have to worry about One generous tube of it—probably just enough to see you through the summer—costs only $1!

Balsam Face Freshener.

Bouquets, dozens of them, to the manufacturers of a certain balsam freshener. In this there is the fragrance of a rain-soaked forest combined with the perk-me-up of a champagne cocktail.

And what it does to your face! Just half the little lila that summer sends to our skins are whisked away in the bat of an eye by this enervating, spicy, spruey freshener. When you're hot and tired and your skin is sticky, and shiny, too, just dampen a pad of cotton with it and give your face a new lease on life.

During the summer you'll simply love giving balsam freshener an honored place on your dressing table. In the morning after you've cleansed your face, apply a little of it before you do your powder foundation. It is mildly astringent and will close your pores against the fine bits of dust and dirt that float around in the city's ether.

Your skin might be the type that has an oily sheen. Balsam freshener is for counteracting this superfluous oil and making shiny noses a thing of the past.

Oily Hair Cured.

Ladies! Gentlemen! Attention! If you have oily hair, dry hair, itchy, scaly scalp, don't wait until months later to tend to the condition. Start now! Summer is usually bad on hair anyway, and if yours, and yours—and yours—isn't all that it should be now, don't risk procrastinating.

A group of scalp specialists offers you a convenient and economical means of giving yourself home treatments. They offer a pot of oily, or dry hair tonic, with a jar of scalp pomade for the price of $1.

If your hair is oily, the oily hair tonic is a fine little regulator. It cleanses the hair and aids the scalp at the same time, keeps the color and oil glands normal and active. In a little while the hair is strengthened and regains all its fluffiness and natural beauty.

If your scalp is dry (most men have dry scalp) the Dry Hair Tonic acts as a stimulant, restoring hair to its normal strength, and giving it a well-groomed, lustrous appearance. Almost immediately it frees the scalp from tenseness.

The scalp pomade is especially good when used in conjunction with the tonics for encouraging hair growth. It is also for use on the dried-out, split ends.

Query—I have already had two permanent waves since last September, but my hair is looking quite ragged and I am thinking of having it waved again. Do you think this would be injurious to my hair? Will you recommend a good wave set? B. E. A.

Answer—Beauty experts generally agree that more than two permanent waves a year are bad for their hair. Why don't you see a good specialist and have her examine your hair and scalp? I'm sure this consultation would not cost you anything and you will certainly obtain authoritative advice.

I shall be glad to send you the name of a reliable wave set if you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Mrs. Lawson Confident Campaign Will Succeed

MRS. ROBERTA CAMPBELL LAWSON, newly elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, believes there is no goal too high for a group of organized women, bent on "linking together the hearthstones of the world."

Extensive Club Program Slanted From an Educational Point of View Is Method She Plans to Employ.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THREE DECADES of active service in club work, seven years' experience on the executive committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and a personality that at once commands respect and inspires devotion—all these are but a few of the qualifications that stack up in favor of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, newly elected president of the federation.

Mrs. Lawson already has glimpsed some goals she wants clubwomen to achieve during the next three years. She mentioned a few yesterday at the federation headquarters and also told something of the changes in women's club work since the turn of the century, when she joined her first literary society.

A tall, stately woman with dark eyes and hair, she was dressed in a frock of green silk, cut on tailored lines and trimmed with white linen collar and cuffs. As she sat at a desk with her back to the window, sunlight sifting through the curtains splashed her hair, bringing out the auburn tints, transforming the braids that crossed on top into something that looked very much like a bronze crown. But as soon as she began to talk, you forgot how she looked. You forgot even that she is one of America's foremost women students of Indian art and culture; that she is a direct descendant of Charles Journeycake, last tribal chief of the Delaware Indians; that she has one of the largest private collections of Indian relics and curios in the world. You forgot almost everything you knew about her, in fact—except that she was recently placed at the head of 2,000,000 American clubwomen.

Proponent of Harmony.

She is convinced, first of all, that "whatever women make up their minds to accomplish, they can accomplish." She feels the chief duty of clubwomen lies in promoting a closer understanding between opposing factions by "linking more closely the hearthstones of the world."

The average woman's interest will never be far from the fireside, which is, she believes, the chief reason women can be the motivating force in achieving a bond of human understanding between countries.

"This bond can be established," she said, "through an extensive club program slanted from an educational point of view. It can be carried out through the nine departments of the federation contributing to a study of citizenship, of government technique and diplomacy, not only as they apply to our country, but to others."

She admitted the program, when described, seemed "somewhat intangible." Yet she feels that since the aim—"a linking together of the firesides of the world"—is definite, it can be attained by a group of women, as well organized as they are in the federation. "What a group of women, given a common goal, can attain, is almost beyond the bounds of imagination," she said. "Their progress so far, when considered from the standpoint of their position in 1900, is almost unbelievable."

Progress Is Reviewed.

This opened a discussion of strides club women had made since the days when any woman's organization was either a literary society or a sewing circle. Mrs. Lawson pointed out that women of that era "had to spend their time studying Shakespeare and Browning because they had no recognized part in public life. When they finally began to take a hand in civic welfare," she went on, "men were amazed and openly resentful. Since women have taken forward since those days convinces me there is no task too great for us. We can bring about almost anything—even an international understanding, a feeling of sympathy rather than antagonism, between our country and others."

Discussing the "pink tea" phase of club work, Mrs. Lawson said she was aware club women had been targets for much adverse criticism in this regard. "But the truth is, the woman who formerly joined a club to make social contacts has long sincee ceased to be a dominating figure in organization activities. That type of woman generally finds her place in a bridge club or a purely social group. But don't misunderstand me," she went on. "I'm in favor of some relaxation, some 'social phases'—if you please—in club work. If we carry through the program that is being worked out now, we'll need a bridge party occasionally, or even a 'pink tea' now and then. After all, the ideal club woman is an all-around person who can play as well as work."

Here's Recipe For Delicious Berry Dessert

TODAY'S DINNER MENU.
Cold sliced veal loaf
Potatoes au gratin
Fresh asparagus tip salad, with vinaigrette dressing
Date bread and butter
Gooseberry fool
Iced tea Milk (for children)

By Dorothea Duncan.

FOR THOSE who remembers with keen delight the childhood pleasure of devouring sweet sunwarmed gooseberries picked right from the bush, we recommend this dinner dessert.

Gooseberry Fool.

1 quart barely ripe gooseberries
2 cups sugar
1 cup boiled custard
1 cup whipped cream

Moisten the sugar with 2 scant tablespoons of water, and put to cook with the gooseberries over a low fire, mashing the berries from time to time as they cook. Boil gently for 15 minutes; press juice and pulp through a sieve and allow to get very cold. Add cooked custard made by the following recipe. Pour mixture into a glass bowl, and serve very cold with sweetened whipped cream on top. The cream must not be beaten stiffy.

Cooked Custard.

3¼ cups milk
Yolks of four eggs
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla

Beat the yolks until a pale yellow; add the sugar and beat well again. Bring the milk to a boil, pour over the egg yolks and when well mixed put all in a double boiler and cook until the custard coats the spoon, stirring constantly from the bottom. Put in the refrigerator to become very cold.

Baked Veal Loaf.

4 cups corn flakes
2 pounds veal, ground
¼ pound salt pork, ground
1 egg
2 teaspoons salt
½ medium onion, finely chopped
½ teaspoon sage
1 tablespoon celery leaves, finely chopped
1 cup celery, finely diced
1 tablespoon parsley, finely chopped
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup ketchup, if desired

Crumble corn flakes. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Pack firmly into loaf pan. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 30 minutes longer. Baste frequently with a mixture of ¾-cup hot water and 4 tablespoons butter. Serves 10.

Vinaigrette Sauce.

1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
Few grains pepper
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
1 tablespoon chopped pickle
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
6 tablespoons olive oil.

Mix the ingredients in the order given.

Cold Carbonated Drinks May Explode

Exponents of safety first in the home are warning against the careless handling of carbonated beverages in the refrigerator. Any overly cold bottle of such a beverage when taken from the refrigerator with a warm hand may explode causing injury to the hand. For that reason it should be lifted from the icebox with a towel. The danger of such explosion is greatest in refrigerators which can not be regulated and which become excessively cold.

This Business of Living

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read your reply to "M. E. W." on June 19, in which you said you thought it improper for a woman of 30 to take unchaperoned vacation trips with her 42-year-old finance. Now I wonder if you will advise me.

• • • •

I am a married woman, 28 years of age, and have two children. About a year ago my husband left me, but still lives in the city, and we are not divorced. Since then I have been going out with other men to dinners, shows and on all-day motor trips.

• • • •

Some of my friends have criticized me for this and others have said it is proper. Kindly tell me if I have done wrong. Very truly yours, LONESOME.

Accepting Half a Loaf.

DEAR LONESOME: Technically you are still a married woman. And as a married woman, you are morally, legally and conventionally restrained from accepting the attentions of men.

The reason for this existing and socially protective restraint inherent in the marriage vows and enduring until they are dissolved is obvious to the analytical person. Friendship between the sexes is the expression of a mutually sensed attraction of each to the other: it may be an attraction of the body, the mind or the spirit, or a combination of the three.

• • • •

Only between unmarried persons does this friendly relationship have unhindered opportunity for exploring and finding itself; for standing declared, eventually, either as a passing fancy or as the prelude to a presumably enduring union.

• • • •

For a woman to attempt to enter upon such an experimental relationship with one or many men while legally bound to another man is to find herself struggling with serious, almost insurmountable psychic and social handicaps. Whether she chooses to realize it or not, she is the prisoner of circumstances and moves on a definitely limited tether.

• • • •

The wrong that a separated but not divorced wife does in "going out with other men" is primarily the wrong she does herself in failing to define her position; in failing to present herself as a person who can be, temporarily at least, a psychologically self-sufficing individual; in implying a pathetic willingness to accept, in emergency, half a loaf from men.

• • • •

If she is ever to restore herself to that position which equals the prettier of the whole loaf or none, she must conduct herself with even greater circumspection than that decreed for unmarried women. I should say she would need to limit her social contacts with men to those occasions when she and they are members of a group. M. H.

New Hat Called 'Tangle.'

Paris (AP).—"Tangle" is the name of a new hat which has just made its debut with the latest collections. Schiaparelli makes it — a disk of black straw with a perky feather raking forward. It is worn well forward on the right side of the head with a black band around the back of the head to hold it in place.

Chic Cotton Evening Gown Can Be Made for $2.63

Pattern No. 988.

ANY WOMAN who has ever owned a cotton evening dress needs no persuasion to own another. Cotton for summer parties is smart—in both senses of the word. The usual summer hazards wreak no expensive damage to a cotton. The washtub quickly restores the fresh, new look.

This evening gown adds two other virtues. It is a "Sew-Simple" pattern—just nine easy pieces. And it requires only 4¾ yards of 35-inch fabric for size 16 or 34. With charming "native" prints at fifty cents a yard, the finished frock, including pattern and notions, need cost only two dollars and sixty-three cents. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

IF JUNE 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 7:15 p. m.

Refrain from being headstrong or impulsive this day if you would escape trouble. Tyrannical methods in the home or during business hours will meet with justified opposition. So they should not be attempted. Be careful with whom you share any secret, if you do not wish it cast to the four winds. This may be a decidedly encouraging day for those engaged in business. Social activities will require that care be exercised not to disregard any conventional rules, as critical eyes will probably observe any breach in etiquette. Married and engaged couples, and those interested in playing Cupid's game, will show good judgment in not indulging in any braggadocio, for it may cause "a tempest in a tea pot."

If a woman, and June 26 is your birthday, if you will keep a stiff upper lip under discouraging circumstances, you will generally be able to surmount them. You have sufficient strength of character to enable you to bravely face any situation, if you will but try. Your advice may be sought regarding a love affair. It might be well to remember it is sometimes a dangerous thing to try directing the affections of others. There is a possibility of your receiving a substantial sum of money. Be careful that it does not turn out to be "easy come, easy go." You may be inclined to part with money too easily for your own good, so curb any such tendency.

You will be very fortunate in affairs involving the heart, so in the case of matrimony, you probably need feel no concern as to its terminating happily. You possibly have a great deal of dramatic ability. The stage, elocution, lecturing, and salesdemonstration employment are among the lines which should provide lucrative activity.

The child born on June 26, generally when it reaches school age, needs to be taught not to become discouraged too easily.

If a man, and June 26 is your natal day, perserverance is the all important virtue for you to develop, before success comes to you. As an artist, teacher, soldier, author, or salesman, you will very likely make the most money.

Successful people born on June 26:
Richard Dana, jurist and patriot.
Thomas Clap, president of Yale College.
George Bruce, type founder.
John H. Alexander, scientist.
George W. Flagg, artist.
Serene E. Payne, lawyer and congressman.

4 Types of Snake in U. S. Poisonous

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

SO MUCH loathing is usually attached to the presence of snakes, irrespective of their poisonous character, that they are universally shunned. The creeping, crawling things of the earth as a rule possess little beauty and their sinuous movements and sometimes venomous character lead to their general avoidance—at least in these days.

Serpents have held a curious place in religion, mythology and in the superstitions and folk lore of the people. Hypnotic and even supernatural powers have been attributed to them. "Be ye therefore wise as serpents" (Matthew 10:16). The symbol of Aesculapius, the Greek god of healing, was a staff round which a serpent was coiled.

All snakes have teeth, often many rows. The poisonous varieties, however, have two highly developed fangs in the front part of the upper jaw. These fangs are hollow, open at the tip, and connect with the poison glands located on each side of the head. It is through these fangs that poison is injected when the snake bites. A curious mechanism permits the folding back of the fangs against the roof of the mouth when the jaw is closed. Another peculiar and striking feature of all snakes is the forked or divided tongue. This organ, moving rapidly in and out of the mouth, presents anything but an alluring sight.

There are certain characteristics by which the poisonous snakes may be differentiated from the nonpoisonous. In the poisonous species there is a marked depression or pit located midway between the eye and the nostril on each side of the head; fangs are present and the eyes have elliptical pupils resembling those of a cat. In the nonpoisonous types fangs are absent, there is no pit, and the pupils are round.

How to Tell Poisonous Snakes.

There are four general groups of venomous snakes found in the United States—the rattlesnake, copperhead, water moccasin and coral snake. The latter occurs only in the southeastern part of this country and is a relative of the cobra of India. It may be identified by broad red and black bands which circle the body.

Mere cases of human poisoning occur as a result of the bites of the several varieties of rattlesnake. All types possess triangular shaped heads, and of all the forms the Texas rattler is the largest. The rattlesnake is widely distributed throughout the United States.

The copperhead is a small snake, reddish brown in color, with brownish blotches along the sides. It is particularly dangerous because of its secretive habits, hiding among leaves, under rocks or about tree trunks. The bite of the copperhead is dangerous, but less so than that of the rattlesnake, since it has shorter fangs and its venom is less virulent.

Cotton Mouth Is Menace.

The water moccasin is sometimes called the cotton mouth because of the white appearance of the inside of the mouth. This species lives in swampy regions of the Southern States from Texas to Florida, but is not infrequently found in southern Illinois and Indiana. It is the most poisonous variety occurring within the United States and its venom is three times as virulent as that of the copperhead.

Snake venom is a yellowish fluid that contains highly complex protein substances that are exceedingly toxic. The venom affects human beings in two ways—first, through the rapid destruction of blood cells and second, through its effects on the nervous system. The bite of a poisonous reptile is dangerous not only because of the venom injected, but because certain virulent bacteria may be inoculated at the same time.

Tomorrow's article will describe the treatment of snake bites.

Dr. Pearson Denies Plans To Quit Post

Maryland U. Head Cites Gains of Regime, Gives Figures.

Nice to Give Opinion if Requested by State Regents Board.

Denying he planned to resign as president of the University of Maryland, Dr. Raymond A. Pearson yesterday went forward with plans for development of the school next year.

Completing the usual routine of work in his office at the Baltimore professional schools, he paused to counter accusations that the university had "deteriorated" during his nine-year regime.

"One of the surest ways of determining the advancement of a university is by observing its graduate school," said Dr. Pearson. "Recent reports from our graduate school show that it is rapidly improving. Many students are selecting it in preference to larger institutions. The largest number of doctor of philosophy degrees to be granted in the school, was awarded last commencement.

Student Gain Cited.

"During the past year the University of Maryland did more and better work for the State of Maryland than ever before, in spite of a reduction of about 40 per cent in the State appropriation.

"In the year just closed there were enrolled at College Park about 25 per cent more students than nine years ago, and the university received from the State for the support of this work actually less than it received nine years ago."

Dr. W. W. Skinner, secretary to the board, who was ill at his home in Kensington, last night declared the regents had reached no decision and that the investigation was still under way. He said no date had been set for the next meeting.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—If the question of whether Dr. Raymond A. Pearson shall be continued as president of the University of Maryland is submitted to Gov. Nice, he plans to decide it "after consultation with the board of regents."

Saying today that he had "decided opinions on the subject based on my long and intimate contact with Dr. Pearson," Gov. Nice added:

"I know nothing official regarding the matter. The regents have not asked me to give a decision and I would be discourteous to discuss it before consulting with the board. I will give an opinion if requested to do so, but what that opinion will be I can not say now."

Regents Silent.

The Governor's comment was based on reports that the regents, after an all-day session here yesterday, were seeking to lay the matter before him later in the week. The regents have issued no statement in the matter.

It was reported, however, that a majority of the regents at yesterday's meeting opposed Dr. Pearson's continuance in office. The minority is said to have defended Dr. Pearson against the criticism that has been directed at his administration and the result is said to have been a decision to put the matter before Gov. Nice as soon as possible.

Dr. Pearson appeared before the board yesterday and today issued a short statement concerning the progress of the university under his administration.

"More Service—Less Money."

"The University of Maryland," he said, "did more work last year and furnished the State of Maryland better service than ever before. This was done in spite of the fact that our income from the State had been reduced approximately 40 per cent.

"Last year we had at College Park about 75 per cent more students than we had nine years ago and we received from the State for our educational work actually less than we received nine years earlier.

"There is no truer index of the educational standards of an institution than the enrollment in its graduate courses. There has been a large increase in such enrollment at the university."

The opposition to Dr. Pearson has described not as criticism of his accomplishments as a scholar and scientist, but rather of his administrative methods.

Official Is Short, Makes Restitution

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 25.—A report by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs today revealed that examination of the books of Richmond City Sergt. John G. Saunders had uncovered a shortage of $10,384 for the period, January 1, 1922, to May 1, 1935.

Downs announced that Saunders yesterday had paid the entire amount of the alleged shortage to the proper authorities.

The State auditor said records of the office had been destroyed or had been so inadequately kept that investigators could not definitely learn what had happened to the funds received and why the $10,384 balance could not be accounted for. Withdrawals were made from the office for loans to the sergeant, the Downs report stated.

County's Board Opposes State In Aid's Ouster

Highway Attorney Tries to Explain Dismissal of Richards.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., June 25.—John C. Gray, Assistant Attorney General assigned to the State roads commission, conferred with the Cecil County board of commissioners today in secret session regarding the dismissal by the roads commission of Joseph T. Richards, county roads engineer.

The county commissioners have filed an order of complaint regarding Richards' dismissal and Gray was to have filed an answer today with the clerk of Circuit Court. Instead of filing the answer, however, Gray conferred with the board in private and declined to issue any statement as to the nature of the answer to be filed by the roads commission.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, has refused consistently to discuss personnel changes effected recently by the commission. He also has ordered employes of the commission not to discuss them.

The Cecil County commissioners protest the dismissal of Richards. The complaint cited a Maryland law which provides that road workers recommended by county commissioners shall be the first choices of the commission in filling jobs in the counties.

The Cecil County Circuit Court will have a formal hearing in the matter here July 2. Until that time, it was said following today's board meeting, "it would not be fair to divulge" the contents of the answer to be filed by the State.

The Cecil County officials have declared that politics is responsible for Richards' dismissal.

State Acts To Re-Start Road Plans

Compromise Is Offered on Stalled Virginia Construction.

Local Officials Demand Right to Hire Men in Own Way.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 25.—A compromise proposal designed to start Virginia's stalled highway work relief program has been submitted to Federal authorities, State Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley said today.

Shirley explained that the State road authorities had offered to put to work the approximately 5,000 jobless, whom the program is intended to employ if the Federal Government will permit the State to employ the men as it sees fit.

"In other words, we will employ our full quota of men from the relief rolls, but distribute them to our best practical advantage instead of using them exclusively on Federal work-relief projects," Shirley said. "Such an arrangement would cost Virginia from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 additional, but at least we would get some useful work done."

He pointed out that by employing relief workers on maintenance and construction projects on the secondary road system, the department could save enough money to buy materials and use skilled laborers on grade-crossing elimination.

Shirley also disclosed that the plan had been indorsed by the executive committee of the National Association of Highway Executives and that a number of other States have been asked to support it.

It was expected the proposal would have to be ruled on by President Roosevelt personally.

U. S. Postal Agents To Probe Threats

Note Sent to Washington By Maryland Truckman.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., June 25.—The last of three threat notes received by William Pusey, Wicomico truck operator, were sent today to the chief inspector of the postal service in Washington for an investigation.

No additional letters have been received by Pusey since Saturday. They threatened death to Pusey, the burning of his home and destruction of his truck if he continued to ride it. The letters did not demand any money.

Pusey has not taken the matter to Sheriff Charles H. Truitt or to Salisbury police. The final letter warned Pusey against informing police, the sender saying he would shoot any policeman set on his trail.

Prince William County Reduces Relief Roles

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., June 25.—The case load of the local Prince William County Emergency Relief Office has been reduced from the recent peak load of 350 cases to 271.

A great many persons taken off relief found work for themselves in private employment. The Prince William Relief Office has placed approximately 50 men and women in permanent positions. Several young men have been sent to CCC camp and 15 more are to follow within the next few days.

Mrs. Marion Lewis has offered to use the local relief office as an employment agency.

Voting Precincts Increased.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 25.—An ordinance to increase the number of voting precincts in the six wards to eliminate congestion at municipal elections was passed yesterday by the city council. There will be 19 voting precincts, giving additional voting places in the heavy populated wards. The precincts are increased as follows: Ward No. 1, four precincts; Ward No. 2, two precincts; Ward No. 3, three precincts; Ward No. 4, two precincts; Ward No. 5, two precincts and Ward No. 6, six precincts.

Nation Eyes Hagerstown G.O.P. Picnic

Fletcher to Be Present at Rally to Be Held on Thursday.

Meeting Is One of Many Throughout Country to Boost Party.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—A Republican rally which is beginning to assume State-wide proportions—and a national aspect—is planned for Hagerstown Thursday afternoon.

The Young Men's Republican League of Washington County is holding its first summer outdoor picnic on Brewer's Farm, near Hagerstown. Among those who have said they will be present are Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee; Gov. Harry W. Nice, and others.

Attendance will be drawn from all parts of Maryland and from West Virginia. Specific invitations have gone out to Republicans of Martinsburg, Frederick, Annapolis, Westminster and other points.

Since the adverse ruling of the Supreme Court on the NIRA, the Republicans have held a series of rallies throughout the Nation. High party officials attach much significance to them, asserting "the more held the better."

J. Forney Young, president of the club, has appointed E. B. Carl, former president, as chairman of the committee on arrangements. Carl minimizes the greater significance of the gathering, but G. O. P. higher-ups are less conservative regarding it.

The meeting follows a similar rally held near Martinsburg, W. Va., last week where high party officials trained their guns on the New Deal. Gov. Nice was a principal speaker there.

Carl said an old horseshoe pitching feud between Mayor Walter Quenstedt of Annapolis, Mayor I. M. Wertz of Hagerstown, and former Mayor George Henderson of Cumberland, will be renewed at the picnic.

A baseball contest, an annual affair between teams headed by State's Attorney Martin Ingram and former State's Attorney Elsworth R. Roulette, is to be played. There will be refreshments and supper.

Works Progress Aid For Virginia Named

Adair to Handle Personnel and Labor Management.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 25.—Sidney T. Adair today was named administrative assistant of William A. Smith, works progress administrator of relief for Virginia.

Adair, who has been assistant administrator of the VERA, will continue in that position and will be responsible for personnel and labor management in the revamped organization, Smith announced.

R. B. Jordan, director of finance for the VERA, will continue that work for the works progress program and Asher W. Harman, director of the VERA works division, was placed in control of the projects division.

Miss Ella Agnew, in addition to being assistant administrator of the VERA works division, will assume the duties of consultant on women's work, and W. W. Eure was named research co-ordinator.

New Conservation Commission Meets

Frank L. Pentz, of Hagerstown, Is Chief Clerk.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—The new three-man State conservation commission met for the first time today. After organization, the board appointed Frank L. Pentz, of Hagerstown, as its chief clerk.

The commission consists of Judge Robert F. Duer, chairman; and Dr. Henry W. McComas, Garret County, a former State senator, and Dr. J. Hubert Wade, of Frederick County.

Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner, authorized the commission to appoint Pentz on a temporary basis pending his qualifying for the post under the terms of the merit system.

Horticulture Group Sets Price Conference

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 25.—West Virginia Horticulture Society has set Saturday as the date for the annual price-setting conference for early summer varities of apples. The conference will be held at the Shenandoah Hotel here, starting with a luncheon. Leading growers and apple handlers in West Virginia, nearby Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland will be invited to attend.

Several other pressing orchard topics are to be taken up at the meeting.

Sports Director Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Md., June 25.—Abner J. Kaplan has been named athletic director of the Fort Frederick CCC camp. The new program will be supervised by the Emergency Educational Relief program for Maryland. Soft ball, horse shoe pitching and other sports will be organized at the camp.

Skyline Group Banquet Ends One-Day Tour

150 Drive Through State Parks and Shenandoah Valley.

By the Associated Press.

Orange, Va., June 25.—Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the State Conservation and Development Commission, told a group representative of eight Virginia cities here tonight that Virginia's tourist trade had a potential value of $150,000,000.

He estimated the trade now means $73,000,000 to the State annually.

Mr. Hall was the principal speaker at a banquet here tonight which ended a day's tour through some of the State's parks and over the skyline drive.

The potential tourist trade value, he said, is equal to the State's entire industrial pay roll.

He urged his hearers to co-operate with the Conservation and Development Commission in its program of attracting tourists to the State, asserting that the atmosphere of Virginia is something no other State has.

Only two counties in the State, he pointed out, are more than 50 miles from a State park.

Approximately 150 persons, representing Charlottesville, Orange, Fredericksburg, Leesburg, Culpeper, Madison, Warrenton and Gordonsville participated in the tour. The group, known as the Skyline Drive-State Parks Tourists Association, left Fredericksburg early today, went to Washington, turned southward through the Shenandoah Valley and over the Skyline Drive, and returned to Orange tonight.

2 Virginia Fugitives Captured in Maryland

Point of Rocks, Md., June 25 (AP).—Sheriff E. S. Adrian, of Loudoun County, Virginia, arrested two fugitives from the Leesburg County jail on the streets of Point of Rocks late today. The sheriff and a posse had been searching for the men since their escape was discovered this morning.

Residents here said the men, William Summers a nd Robert Wright, made their way across the Potomac River and stopped at an ice cream parlor and a general store, begging. Near the ice cream parlor, conducted by Silas W. Loy, Sheriff Adrian saw them from across the street and took them into custody. They made no resistance, he said, and were returned to Leesburg to await removal to the State penitentiary at Richmond.

Man Is Charged With Shooting.

Frederick, Md., June 25.—Deputy Sheriffs Charles W. Smith and John E. Crum arrested Sterling Davis, colored, yesterday, charged with shooting Noah Reindollar, 64, a railroad workman, near Union Bridge, during a quarrel Sunday. After the shooting Reindollar was taken to a hospital in Baltimore. Officers were told that both men had been drinking. Davis is being held for assault with intent to kill pending the outcome of Reindollar's injury.

Suspect Released on Bail.

Annapolis, Md., June 25 (AP).—Police Magistrate Joseph M. Armstrong yesterday released Mariano Infussi under $500 bond to await action of the October grand jury on a charge of shooting George Mitchell, Baltimore, with intent to kill. Mitchell was shot June 16 following an argument with Infussi over several red lanterns stolen from a street barricade.

Judge Weighs Women's Plea To Save Trees

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., June 25.—Woodstock's trees remained under the protection of the law today following hearing on a temporary injunction to prevent employes of street widening contractors from cutting maples lining the main thoroughfare. Many women were present today in the crowded courtroom. The case was taken under advisement by Judge Philip Williams.

The legal right of the Highway Commission to fell trees was raised by attorneys for the contractors, but Judge Williams indicated little sympathy when he asked from the bench if there was not some practical way to save the trees.

Attorneys, engineers and other interested persons visited the streets where some trees have already been destroyed and others have been marked for the axe.

The Woodstock tree cutting case reached court after Mrs. Lorraine French Brown climbed a maple in front of her home on South Main street and defied workmen to cut down the tree.

Murder Is Verdict In Fewell Death

Inquest Decides Unknown Slew CCC Enrollee.

By the Associated Press.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 25—The mysterious death of Edward Fewell, 19-year-old enrollee at a CCC camp at Bastain, Va., was recorded today by a coroner's jury as murder "by a person or persons unknown."

The bullet-pierced body of the Round Hill, Va., enrollee was found several hundred yards from the camp yesterday by the camp water carrier. A bullet wound near the heart had caused death and a pistol lay within arm's reach of the body, but officers discounted a suicide theory.

A detachment of CCC workers accompanied the body to Round Hill, where the youth's mother, Mrs. Mary Fewell, lives and where the burial was scheduled tonight.

Virginian Sets Aged Pensions At $21,000,000

118,000 in State Over 65, Tax Official Tells Merchants.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., June 25.—Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett today told the Retail Merchants Association of Virginia, in annual convention at Ocean View, that adoption of an old-age pension plan in accordance with the measure passed by Congress might cost the State $21,000,000.

This estimate, Mr. Morrissett made clear, would be realized if the approximately 118,000 Virginians over 65 were all paid $15 by the State as well as an equal amount by the Federal Government. He said he suspected a majority of those eligible by age would apply for pensions. There probably would be a tendency, he warned, constantly to widen application of the law.

The most likely means of raising revenue that would be required by a State-Federal pension system, he said, would be enactment of a sales tax, which he said should be applied only in an emergency and repealed when the emergency passes.

Fr. O'Callaghan's Rites Conducted

By the Associated Press.

Pylesville, Md., June 25.—Funeral services were conducted here today for the Rev. Joseph P. O'Callaghan, 44, who for eight years had been pastor of St. Mary's Church here.

Father O'Callaghan died Saturday. He was a graduate of Georgetown University, class of 1913, and of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, 1918. He was ordained by Cardinal Gibbons.

The Right Rev. John McNamara, Washington, and the Rev. Henry Collins, Long Green, Md., spoke at the services. The celebrant of the mass was the Rev. Francis McGraw, assisted by J. H. Eckenrode, deacon, and Joseph McCourt, subdeacon. The body was taken to Washington for burial in Holy Rood Cemetery.

J. B. Jennings, Jr., Weds.

Lynchburg, Va., June 25.—Joel Braxton Jennings, jr., and Miss Ann Grundhoeffer, of Scotia, N. Y., were married there June 22. The bridegroom is a son of Mrs. J. Braxton Jennings, of Lynchburg. They will live at Scotia.

Lions Select New Officers As Rally Ends

Dr. Hurdle Named Head 22d District at Ocean City Session.

Cumberland Chosen as Site for Convention Next Year.

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., June 25.—With the election of officers and selection of Cumberland as the place for the 1936 meeting, the annual convention of the Twenty-second District of Lions International came to a close here today.

Dr. Seth H. Hurdle, Salisbury, was named district governor, succeeding George Danby, Bear, Del. Other new officers are: Wallace H. White, Satisbury, district secretary, and Albert W. Keight, Cumberland, vice president.

Miss Dorothy Lee, entered by the Pocomoke Club, was the winner of the beauty contest featuring the close of the convention. Second prize went to Miss Catherine Polk, "Miss Downtown Baltimore."

Judges were Dr. Charles R. Law, Berlin; Harry Cropper, Ocean City, and Norvall K. Tabler, Washington.

The new district governor is deputy State health officer at Salisbury and formerly was a member of the Newark (Del.) club. He transferred to the Salisbury club in 1930.

Dr. Hurdle was elected unanimously. John Burk, Baltimore, the only other candidate mentioned, withdrew before the balloting.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 25.—Vernon Waugh, 34, of this place, was killed in an automobile accident on the Ridge road near the corporation limits last night.

Gilbert DeHaven, owner of the automobile, who was riding with Waugh, was cut on the face and body. He was arrested by State Trooper J. N. Johnson on charges of permitting his automobile to be operated by an intoxicated person. Officers asserted Waugh was drunk at the time of the accident.

Wife Charges Desertion After 38-Year Marriage

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 25.—Mrs. Elsie A. Strine filed suit in circuit court yesterday against J. William Strine for maintenance, alleging desertion after 38 years of married life. She asked the court to restrain her husband from leaving the State pending the suit. Mrs. Strine stated that they were married in October, 1897, at Walkersville and that her husband deserted her about ten days ago.

The court signed an order requiring Strine to pay his wife $8 per week maintenance pending the outcome of the suit.

St. Marys CCC Camp Sought.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., June 25.—American Legion Post, No. 54, of St. Marys County, has applied to the Federal Government to establish a CCC camp here. The camp has the approval of United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, according to Vice Commander Bascom Broun.

Nice Weighs Pardon for Lawyer Disbarred After Murder Trial

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 25.—A full pardon for Harry B. Wolf, attorney convicted nearly 13 years ago of misdemeanor and fined $100, was considered by Gov. Harry W. Nice today.

In a prepared statement, the Governor said he would advertise a pardon, as required by law, and grant it in the absence of convincing protest.

The charge grew out of the former attorney's connection with the Norris murder case. Walter Socolow and Johnnie Keller were said to have visited Wolf at his home in the fall of 1922 while police were searching for Socolow as the murderer of William B. Norris, who was robbed of $7,000 and shot to death. Socolow was one of five charged with the crime and subsequently sentenced to life imprisonment.

The then State's attorney, Robert F. Leach, brought charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice against the lawyer. He was fined $100 on the misdemeanor, and later was disbarred.

A pardon in the case of a misdemeanor means wiping clear the record of the convicted person.

Warner Brothers-First National Acquire Services of Four Popular Filmsters

Will Introduce Star Foursome In Ace Stories

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

While one suspects that they are merely "loans," advices from the West Coast are to the effect that the Warner Brothers have signed three of the screen's best-known comedy stars for at least one picture each to be released on next season's schedule.

These players are Jack Oakie, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland, whose names these past several seasons have been identified almost exclusively with Paramount "Big Broadcast of 1935" and the Ruggles-Boland combination—and a very fine one it is, for laughing purposes—is currently visible in "People Will Talk," also a Paramount release, on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater.

Word of the addition of these three players to the roster of Warner stars follows close on the heels of the announcement that Boris Karloff would appear in at least one Warner Brothers-First National production next season and that Claudette Colbert, now making "She Married Her Boss" for Columbia Pictures, would likewise star for the company which presents Al Jolson, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Paul Muni and many other favorites.

Will Have Strong Stories.

Another player habitually identified with another lot, James Dunn, already is appearing at the Burbank Studio in "The Real McCoy," in which Claire Dodd, Patricia Ellis, Alan Dinehart and Frankie Darro also are prominently cast.

Except in the case of Jimmy Dunn, no vehicles have been selected for these newcomers to the Warner plant, but it is assumed—especially if they are to make only one picture each—that strong stories will be chosen for them from among the long catalogue of novels, plays and short stories which have been acquired by the Warner Brothers as story material for their new season's product.

It seems quite a while ago that First National's leading stars were Norma and Constance Talmadge, Richard Barthelmess, Mary Pickford, Dorothy Mackaill, Milton Sills, Pola Negri, Corinne Griffith, Charles Ray and others of the old-timers, doesn't it?

Speaking of the Warner Brothers-First National projects for the new season, as someone assuredly was, a sizzling wire direct from the seat of operations brings word that Marc Connelly, who wrote the most sensationally successful stage play of this generation, "The Green Pastures," from Roark Bradford's novel of "Ole Man Noah and His Chillun," has been engaged by the Warners to adapt the famous Negro religious drama to the screen and also to serve as its co-director. It is highly probable that Max Reinhardt will act as producer. Mr. Connelly's last handiwork disclosed upon a Washington stage was "The Farmer Takes a Wife," which opened last season at the National Theater, of which he was both coauthor and director for Max Gordon. The play is now being filmed—in fact, I believe has been previewed on the coast—by Fox, with Janet Gaynor and Henry Fonda in the principal roles. Miss Gaynor appears on the screen in the role played on the stage by June Walker and Mr. Fonda again plays the role which he created.

Le Gallienne's Triumph.

While the advent of color to the screen, as an appreciable factor in the government of future motion picture production plans, may have created this week's major hubbub, it is obligatory upon any conscientious commentator upon the stage and screen to note that Miss Eva Le Gallienne is doing the theater an admirable service by appearing for the first time on a motion picture theater stage in the balcony scene from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

While this week at Loew's Fox Theater marks the first time Miss Le Gallienne ever has essayed Shakespeare in a picture house, she has, of course, played in "Romeo and Juliet" many times before—at the National Theater a season or so ago, for example.

But what is of greater interest is that Miss Le Gallienne first attempted the role of Juliet when 14 years old, the age which Juliet is supposed to have been. This was when Miss Le Gallienne was a student in Beerbohm Tree's London Academy. She was doled out the part, a scene at a time, to do as a class exercise.

Age Negligible Factor.

This distinguished author-actress-producer is the exception to the oft-quoted rule that no actress knows how to play Juliet until she is too old to look it. Although she does "look" a beautiful, young Juliet, Miss Le Gallienne contends that it is not expected that any actress shall look Juliet's juvenile 14 years.

"The physical emotions of a Latin girl of 14 at that day," she says, "in fact, are comparable to those of a similar girl of 22 or 23 today."

Another oft-quoted opinion, perhaps more nearly true, is that "by how she plays her balcony scene, we judge the excellence of our Juliet."

If this be true, patrons of the Fox this week are reaching no ill-judged conclusion when they leave the theater convinced that Miss Le Gallienne's performance of the entire exhausting role of Juliet in the complete love tragedy must be very fine, indeed. It is—along with everything else this brilliant young woman undertakes to do.

The success of her present experiment, incidentally, is no less a tribute to the expanding tastes of "movie" audiences than it is to her own courage and sagacity.

With regard to that natural color business, "Becky Sharp," with Miriam Hopkins in the title role, continues to pack them in at RKO-Keith's and will be presented on Fifteenth street as long as present interest continues in the first feature-length picture ever made by the new, three-tone Technicolor process. That should be at least through next week and maybe longer. So elated is Manager Hardie Meakin over the unequivocal manner in which "Becky Sharp" has caught on locally, and by the assurance that his next picture will be the spectacular filmization of H. Rider Haggard's story of "She," starring Helen Gahagan, that he has declared a day off and will week-end with Mrs. Meakin at Bedford Springs, Pa. They will leave the Capital on Friday, returning either Monday or Tuesday.

Corpuscles and Hemoglobin.

Although it is not apparent in "Stranded," the picture in which she is costarring with George Brent on the screen at the Earle Theater this week, recent illness has reduced Kay Francis to a mere shadow of her former self, as the saying goes.

This was disclosed upon her return from Europe on the last westward crossing of the S. S. Normandie. Pale and evidently very tired, Miss Francis landed in New York last week and voiced an immediate desire for a vacation in the country. After that, she said, she will go West to a ranch "which is 50 miles from a telephone or railroad."

The screen star did not venture from her stateroom on the entire trip across. What she wants now more than anything else seems to be "lots of butter and eggs and plenty of sunshine."

Miss Francis became ill in Paris and was operated on for a throat infection. She is due back in Hollywood on August 1.

Tonight in Wardman Park Theater, the Ellen Waller School of Dance will hold its spring recital, featuring dances by an enrollment ranging in ages from two-and-one-half years to adults. The program will embrace ballet, interpretative, national, tap and stage dancing, the national dances including numbers characteristic of England, Ireland, France, Holland, Germany, Hungary, Spain, Italy, Poland and Russia. Vocal interludes will be contributed by Albert Nelson, assisted by Ellen Waller.

Then Came the War Jinx.

Fred Stone, veteran musical comedy star turned serious actor and aspirant for a place among the great of the cinema, has not been too lucky this past year.

"Jayhawker," the second play of the National's past season, while not a complete failure, still never got very far and seemed to resist every effort of its distinguished authors, the unrelated Lewises, to whip it into a form acceptable to the ticket-buying customers who form those lines at the right—if any.

Journeying to Hollywood, this outstanding figure in the American theater seemed on the high road to a succeessful career, but even that appears to have exploded in his face.

Supplanted by Connolly.

This conclusion is suggested by the announcement that Walter Connolly—also seen at the National last season, but in a worse flop than Mr. Stone's, "Gather Ye Rosebuds"—has succeeded Stone in the cast of "So Red the Rose," which went into production last week.

Director King Vidor decided he needed a "more mellow" actor than Stone and so chose Connolly to support Pauline Lord and Margaret Sullavan in this story of the War Between the States.

It would not be surprising if Mr. Stone henceforth should perceive in any story of the Civil War a definite and damaging personal jinx.

Getting ready to go places and see things—preferably on a boat—Mae West's vacation plans were given a bump in the nose last week when Paramount informed her that work on her next picture would begin July 22. This means that the billowy blonde will have to stay home in bed for the next month writing the script and dialogue for "Klondike Lou." Her leading man in this picture will be Victor McLaglen, for whom the Hollywood demand has been greatly quickened by the superlative quality of his work as Gypo Nolan in the title role of "The Informer"—one of the best pictures of the year that nobody went to see.

Call-the-Wagon Note.

Close scrutiny of the costume worn by Miss Verree Teasdale, in the photographic study appearing elsewhere on this page, ought to suggest something nifty about a midsummer night's dream of the picturesque beauties of the "Adder-Round-Necks!"

Easy with the nightstick, copper, I'm not resisting!

Glittering With a King's Jewels

This stunning young woman with the cathedral-window collar, Cleopatran bodice and the jewels of King Theseus sparkling upon her person, is Verree Teasdale cast in the role of an Amazon queen in Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." This is the far-famed spectacular picturization of one of the Bard's most imaginative works which marks Max Reinhardt's first adventure in celluloid drama. It will be released by the Warner Brothers as a "special."

Sylvan Theater

Gentle rain from heaven last evening interrupted the second 1935 summer festival program sponsored by the Community Center Department at the National Sylvan Theater. Nearly 3,000 people had foregathered on the slopes of the Monument grounds to hear the first public al fresco concert of the Community Center Civic Orchestra and to witness three short plays performed by the Washington Community Palyers.

Three numbers of the orchestra's program—Stephen Foster selections, arranged by Charles J. Roberts; selections of Victor Herbert melodies, and "Valse Bluette," by Drigo—were played under the direction of Sam P. Ford, associate conductor.

Rain Interrupts.

"Moon Maiden," abridged from Ernest Dowson's "Pierrot of the Minute," was presented by Howard Whitfield and Yerby Pannill, under the direction of Arthur Rhodes, before the light but persistent raindrops succeeded in decimating the audience and causing the postponement of the remainder of the program.

All three plays will be given tonight at the Sylvan Theater, "The Gods of the Mountain" and "Helena's Husband," as well as "Moon Maiden," preceded by a half-hour of music. If the Community Center Civic Orchestra can not play, efforts will be made to transfer the regular Tuesday concert by the United States Navy Band to the Sylvan Theater. The program will commence at 8 oclock.

Stubs from last night's tickets will be honored as "rain checks" for admission.

Roadside

The Roadside Theater, out the Rockville pike, 4 miles beyond Bethesda, Md., last night inaugurated the second week of the first bill of its second season, a highly diverting and picturesque revival of "After Dark," that lusty old melodrama of Dion Boucicault, in 3 acts and 14 scenes.

A fantastic story of villainous machinations and the eventual triumph of virtue over the heinous enterprises of the unregenerate is played by the Roadsiders with the deadly seriousness its many climaxes and grandiloquent speeches demand for best effect.

The principal roles are in the competent hands of Eugene Kressin, Thomas M. Cahill, Walter McIntosh, William Phillips, Ralph Fawler, Janet Coon, Cary Lucas, Milton O. Hirschfield and numerous others. An entr'acte song of an older era, "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl," is introduced by Miss Coon and Mr. Kressin.

New Civic Unit Makes Debut in Well-Acted Hit

Capacity House Applauds Fine Performance in Forest Glen Odeon.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"A MURDER HAS BEEN ARRANGED." The National Civic Theater Society presents the play in three acts by Evelyn Williams. Directed by Johns Munn; setting by Jack Hayes. In the Odeon, on the grounds of National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md.

THE CAST:

Miss Gross.....Ann Garrett
Cavendish.....Richard Midgely
Mrs. Wragg.....Margaret Hatfield
Jimmy North.....Isham Keith
Lady Beatrice Jasper...Harriet Borden
Mrs. Arthur.....Catherine McCord
Sir Charles Jasper....Robert G. Pitkin
A Woman.....Beth Thompson
Maurice Mulling.....John Mann

The National Civic Theater Society last night made its bow to Washington's summer theatergoers in The Odeon, the splendidly appointed little theater on the grounds of National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., in a performance of Emlyn Williams' "A Murder Has Been Arranged" that more closely approximated the midseason professional theater than anything the Capital has witnessed since Manager Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players folded their tents and silently stole away.

Mr. Williams' eerie melodrama of the homicidal legend that has woven an aura of mystery and death about the stage of a famous playhouse in London is a cleverly contrived play in which the threat of death plays an important part and at least one murder is planned with audacious skill.

Last night's cast played it effectively, but not quite so effectively as it will when the opening night tempo has been accelerated a little and not too much reliance has continued to be placed in the value of the dramatic pause. "A Murder Has Been Arranged" is not fast-action drama, expect in one or two isolated instances, but it is a play that would gain by a slight speeding up of its dialogue over last evening's deliberate pace.

Plot May Not Be Disclosed.

The play belongs in the category of those which may not be detailed to the reader without ruining his subsequent enjoyment of an original treatment of the murder-mystery idea, affording excellent roles for parctically the entire membership of the cast. The entire movement of the three acts takes place on the stage of the St. James Theater in London on the evening you attend at 8:40 o'clock. Not only is the stage of the theater utilized, but for legitimate purposes of plot development the auditorium also is made use of as a source of dramatic effect.

The principal roles are the sum total of those comprising the dramatis personnae. Last night's stellar performances were contributed to a well-blanced and letter-perfect ensemble by that veteran character actor and comedian, Robert G. Pitkin, long known to Washington audiences on the professional stage, both as a straight actor and as a singing comedian of the first water; Margaret Hatfield, Ann Garrett and John Mann.

Mr. Pitkin assumed the role of Sir Charles Jasper, intent on testing the St. James' murderous legend by risking his life with 2,000,000 pounds sterling as bait. Miss Hatfield did excellently well with the cockney rôle of Mrs. Wragg, as did that unusually gifted young actress, Miss Garrett.

Polished Villainy, Rampant.

Mr. Mann, who also directed the piece, bore the brunt of the drama's villainy with a sauve and quietly sinister treatment of the role that added immeasurably to its bloody implications.

All this is not to say that Richard Midgely, as the orchestra leader, who appears only on the audience side of the footlights; Isham Keith, as an unidentified young man, who happens into the evening's exciting events; Harriet Borden, Catherine McCord and Beth Thompson acquitted themselves any less ably. It is only that their parts do not serve quite such pivotal purposes in the working out of the author's idea as the others. Miss Thompson, appearing only in the final act, revealed a surprising forcefulness in a part that might easily have slipped into a minor designation less capably played.

The National Civic Theater Society made its debut auspiciously in a beautiful little playhouse that made virtually mandatory the artistic staging and costuming. "A Murder Has Been Arranged" was accorded.

Last evening's performance was big-time theater, on a small-time scale only insofar as the seating capacity of the auditorium was concerned. A fashionable capacity house gave the play a rousing reception.

Congratulations to all concerned.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, June 25.

JAMES CAGNEY has another ring battle in "The Irish in Us." He is fighting for the welterweight championship of the world, and his opponent is Harvey Perry. Cagney fought once before for this welterweight crown and won it in "Winner Takes All." His opponent then was Harvey Perry.

This looks like a rematch. This Harvey Perry is a former pugilist. He was a pretty good featherweight in his ring time and was up there, a contender for the title. He now weighs 180 pounds. His face doesn't look as if it stopped many leather gloves. Perry explains easily. "All the punches hit me here," he says, pointing to his chin.

Cagney take a film fight seriously, and goes into training for it. Cagney probably trained more strenuously for this fight than Baer did for his encounter with Braddock. Every morning he was up at 7 for a run through the Hollywood hills.

• • • •

This part of the training I know about, for one morning I allowed myself to be persuaded by Cagney to go into training with him. He told me it would do me good even if I didn't fight. It was a good thing that Cagney had his man, Ludwig, trailing us in the car. I had a nice ride.

Cagney also trained on his yacht. He would climb the ropes on his boat, toast himself in the sun, and then race the boat through the water. I liked the yacht as long as it was anchored in the harbor, but when it started sailing I demanded land. After all, I wasn't fighting. I was merely going to watch the fight. A guy doesn't have to train for that.

• • • •

The afternoon of the fight I visited Cagney in his dressing room. He was having lunch, and with his opponent, Harvey Perry. They were discussing the fight, reading it in the prepared scenario. I wonder if they have scenarios for the fights at Madison Square Garden?

Cagney and Perry were eating fruit salads. "Don't eat too much," said Cagney, "you want to feel good." Cagney was really in better fighting condition than the pugilist. They talked about the coming fight.

"You don't really have to pull the punches," said Cagney. "It should look real to be exciting. We've done it before, and you know what to give." "I know," answers Perry. "Everything but the Sunday punch and the same thing goes for you. That last fight looked the McCoy didn't it?"

The assistant director came to the door. "Bacon's ready for youse guys now." Cagney and Perry started for the sound stage on which a prize ring stands and hundreds of extras are sitting as fight fans, and Director Bacon is ready to stage a fight exactly as he desires it.

• • • •

Director Bacon has rehearsed the extras. They have signals when to cheer, when to boo, when to wave their hands. "I want you to cheer, but without making any noise, when they enter the ring," says Director Bacon. Cheering silently is quite a trick. The actors go through all the gestures, open their mouths loudly, but do not give out a sound.

Fight scenes are filmed in this manner so the dialogue of the principals in the ring can be heard. The fight noises necessary are dubbed in later.

THE usual preliminary announcements take place. The gong rings, Cagney and Perry come out fighting. Perry jabs his left to Cagney's face. Another left. Cagney lands a left to the mid-section. He probably remembers the fruit salad. Perry peppers him with left and rights to the body. They are near the ropes. Cagney backs away and lets go with a terrific right. "No! No!" shouts Director Bacon. "Jimmy, you land on your face near the ropes. He knocks you down. Don't you remember?" A fighter in a movie must lose the early rounds in order to win the fight. Perhaps this was the trouble with Max Baer? He probably thought he was in "The Prizefighter and the Lady," and the last reel.

• • • •

"Okay," shouts Director Bacon. The fight is stopped for about 15 minutes until the camera and lights are moved. There is to be a close-up of Cagney falling and on the floor. This is a movie prize fight, and battling has to stop for the camera and lights. The ordinary three-minute round takes practically an hour to film. About the fifth round I was tired, hot and exhausted. I tell Cagney that I'm going to leave. "So you can't take it," he yells. "I told you to get into condition." It's tougher watching a movie prize fight than being in it.

Lucky Catches Upset Staid Angling Club

Traverse City, Mich. (U.P.)—The self-anointed "most exclusive" fishing club in Michigan admits unexpected difficulties in maintaining its reputation.

The Che-Ge-Gon (Ottawa Indian for "big fish") club was to be a select organization for those who had landed big fish. The minimum entrance requirement was set at 20 inches for brown trout, 24 inches for rainbow trout, 15 inches for brook trout, and other lengths and generous weights for other species.

These limits, old-timers assured, certainly would make the club exclusive.

But in one month 14 fishermen qualified for entrance with brown trout—and one was a woman. Three others qualified with brook and rainbow trout.

Already the club has more members than were expected in the first year.

College Links Laurels Annexed by Michigan

Kocsis and Malloy Tie Johnson for Medal; Team Is Victor.

By Dave Herman.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN lived up to its reputation as an outstanding golfing school yesterday when two of its players, Charlie (Chuck) Kocsis and Woody Malloy, tied for the medal with Lewis Johnson, of the College of Charleston, S. C., as Michigan piled up an impressive total of 606 to win the team championship in the national intercollegiate golf tournament at Congressional Country Club.

Kocsis, Malloy and Johnson, the "dark horse," finished the two-day qualifying round with 148 each, to show the way to a field of more than 110 golfers from 31 colleges.

It was no surprise for Kocsis, the three-time Michigan State amateur champion, and one of five golfing brothers, to become the co-sharer of the medal prize. Last year, at Cleveland, in the intercollegiate event, he set a burning pace to win the honor, and yesterday he matched his opening round of 39-35—74.

Malloy Smallest Player.

Little Malloy, who doesn't weigh more than 125 pounds soaking wet, smallest entry in the tournament, fired the shot of his life on the 300-yard eighteenth hole, reaching the green in one prodigous blow and putting safely for his birdie 3 and a 76 to tie his teammate, Kocsis, and the tall, angular Johnson for the medal.

Tied with another Malloy—Jack, of Princeton—at the end of Monday's 18-hole round, with a par 72, Woody Malloy had a struggle, particularly on the back nine, to score his 76.

Johnson also duplicated his opening day round of 74, but in so doing was forced to shoot the incoming nine in a spectacular 34, one under par, which was overshadowed only by a glistening 33 manufactured by Harry Gandy, the auburn-haired star from Oklahoma. The most dramatic feature of the day came when Malloy stood on the eighteenth tee needing a birdie to tie and an eagle to win. Little did spectators dream that the Michigan midget would reach the green in one blow.

Carls 38 on First Nine.

His first nine score was 38, one over. He started back 4—4—3, even par, but ran into trouble on the 500-yard thirteenth, where he dubbed his second into a trap, played out safely, hit the green in 5, and then missed a short putt for a 7. A trap cost him a 4 on the short fourteenth, and three putts a 5 on the sixteenth.

Pat on the home tee stood the lit-tleman with the mighty driver. An eagle—that would win the medal. He blasted out this terrific shot and the ball dropped like a flake 12 feet to the left of the pin.

He stroked the ball meticulously, and it lacked 8 inches of going into the cup for a 2.

Erwin Laxton, North Carolina star, clinched fourth place by virtue of his 74—75—149. Laxton, whose father was the amateur champion of the Tarheel State a decade or so ago, three-putted the seventeenth green for a 5, and finished with a 4 where a birdie would have put him in a qudruple tie for the medal.

Blairton Nine Wins At Martinsburg, W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 25.—Blairton strengthened her hold on the top spot of the Bi-County Industrial League when she defeated Martinsburg Standard at the League Park by a score of 8-1.

Barker hurled a splendid game for the winners, holding the losers to one hit until the final frame, when Martinsburg batters collected three and scored their only run.

North Mountain Downs Jones Spring Nine, 3-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 25.—North Mountain Ball Club won its fifth game of the season over Jones Spring at North Mountain, 3-0.

The game developed into a pitching duel between Hull of North Mountain and Sarff of Jones Spring, resulting in the former getting the better of the bargain, allowing only four hits.

Illinois Open Won By Harry Cooper

By the Associated Press.

Rockford, Ill., June 25.—Harry Cooper, Glen Oak Country Club, Chicago, staged one of his famous finishes here today and won the Illinois Open golf championship for the third straight year.

Playing a brand of golf that had only been seen twice before on the Rockford Country Club course, Cooper breezed through with a 66 to give him a 138 total for the 36 holes. That was four strokes better than Harry Hampton, Beverly Country Club, Chicago, who took second place. Horton Smith, Oak Park Country Club, Chicago, went around in 72 to land in third place with 144.

The 66 marked up by Cooper is equal to the course record. He never was in any serious trouble and he always was able to make marvelous recoveries whenever he landed in the rough.

Bryan Grant Will Play In Blue Ridge Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 25.—Plans are being made for the Blue Ridge Mountain tennis tournament at the Catoctin Country Club starting July 4, by a committee of which Alvin M. Bopst is chairman. Ladies and junior singles and mixed doubles will be played next month with men's singles and doubles starting later.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Atlanta, Ga., star, winner of the national clay courts title in Chicago Sunday, will take part in the men's tournament. The Jacobs boys, Baltimore, and Barney Welsh, Rockville, will also compete. Mrs. Sarah Moore, Washington, winner of the recent Rock Creek tournament, will play.

British Open Paced by Cotton

Qualifiers Are Led by Titlist's Dazzling Total of 141.

But Richard Burton Gets Tie in 36 Holes Medal Play.

By the Associated Press.

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, June 25. Suave Henry Cotton, whose dazzling victory at Sandwich a year ago persuaded his countrymen that the American golfing menace had become frayed around the cuffs, again demonstrated his dominance today in the British Open golf championship.

He tied a young British compatriot, Richard Burton, for the medal honor in the 36-hole qualifying competition at 141.

Shooting a 2-under-par 70 over the Gullane course to add to yesterday's 71 scored at Muirfield, where the championship proper starts tomorrow, England's champion justified 4-to-1 odds placed against him by wary bookmakers. The 27-year-old Burton's successive rounds of 70, 71, the former made at Muirfield yesterday for a new course record, permitted him to share the cheers with Cotton temporarily, but few experts considered him a serious contender.

All Americans In.

The six-man delegation from the United States qualified intact. The veteran Macdonald Smith, born in Carnoustie 45 years ago, finished in a tie for third place with Jack Busson, a young British Ryder Cup team hopeful. They were a stroke off the pace at 142. Smith, whose record-equaling 66 over Gullane yesterday set the pace, announced he intended to relax. He did, with a comfortable 76. Busson had two rounds of 71.

William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, the husky world amateur champion, had a narrow squeak. His 78-74 for an aggregate of 152 was only one stroke under the qualifying limit. Little is more highly regarded as a match player and not figured among the heavy favorites in the open.

The 36-hole total of 151 turned in by tall Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., from rounds of 77 and 74 left him little breathing room. Joe Ezar, of Waco, Tex.; Joe Kirkwood, of Chicago, and Frank Ball, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., made the passage with plenty to spare. Kirkwood produced a 74 to go with his first round par 72 for a total of 146. Ball was lodged safely at 147 after rounds of 72 and 75, while Ezar was a stroke higher with 73-75—148.

Sweeney Makes Comeback.

Robert Sweeney, former New Yorker now living with the London branch of his banking family, made one of the most gallant comebacks of the day. He fired a second round 71 to qualify after an opening 80. The amateur honors, however, were carried off by young Hector Thomson, the 1934 Irish amateur champion, who actually comes from the town of Machrihanish. He produced a fine 70 over Gullane for a total of 144. Jock McLean, the Scottish amateur titleholder, got under the wire with 74-76—150.

The field was cut from 250 to 109 for the championship route of 72 holes. Single rounds will be played tomorrow and Thursday, with 36 holes Friday.

Roman Soldier Out.

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Phil Reuter, trainer of Roman Soldier, informed Detroit track officials today that his little black colt, which recently won the $25,000 Detroit Derby, will not start Saturday in the $25,000 Detroit Challenge Cup.

Billy Dettweiler Shares Prep Golf Lead

By a Special Correspondent.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 25.—Displaying championship form after getting off to a bad start, Billy Dettweiler, tall young Georgetown Prep School golfer, turned in a card of 75 to tie with Bobby Jacobson of Frankling School, New York, in the first day of the Prep School golf tournament which opened here today.

Dettweiler shot 37-38 to lead with Jacobson the field of 27 schools which is the fastest array of interscholastic talent to compete in recent years. Fourteen of the 75 contestants broke 80.

Despite Dettweiler's fine showing, however, his team could do no better than eighth in team scoring for the day with a total of 383. The Little Hoyas, however, were without their two stars, Hughes Spalding and Bobby Troutman, who are not entered.

Peddie School, of Heightstown, N. J., led the teams with a score of 324. Lawrenceville and Hill Schools, with 326 each, were deadlocked for runner-up honors.

Dettweiler was trapped on the first hole and took a five, and followed up on the second with a bad case of jitters and three putts for a 4. Thereafter he played his usually steady game until the final, when he again three-putted for his 75.

Jacobson, a protege of Craig Wood, reached the first turn in 36 strokes, lowest score in the field, but he faltered on the last three holes, after playing par golf up to that point, and had to be content with 75.

Walter Hagen, jr., representing Manlius School, blew up completely and turned in a card of 45-44—89.

Sale of Braves Is Reported Imminent

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 25.—Louis J. O'Malley, son of Charles J. O'Malley, president of O'Malley Associates, Boston advertising concern, tonight said members of the firm would meet Thursday with Ford Frick, president of the National League, to discuss the purchase of the Boston Braves.

Asked if Babe Ruth would return to the Braves, if O'Malley Associates purchased the National League team, O'Malley was noncommital. He said he didn't know the terms of the Babe's old contract.

O'Malley said that his father and another brother, Charles D., and himself had been investigating the Braves situation recently, but no member of the firm had discussed the purchase with Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves. All negotiations so far, he said, had been conducted with Judge Fuchs' representatives, Carleton, Keddy & Co., Boston investment bankers.

Sale of the Braves has been rumored frequently this spring. Joe E. Brown, film comedian, recently was reported a possible purchaser.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

DETROIT, June 25.—Schoolboy Rowe, out to register his fourth straight win of the season, was doomed to disappointment this afternoon, as Washington hit his offerings all over and outside the lot to win in a canter, 7-4.

The Nationals gathered 11 hits and all their runs in the five innings Rowe worked, four being doubles, one a triple and another a homer. The latter was made by Schulte in the big fifth inning and it came with a runner on base. Auker relieved Rowe and after two innings gave way to Hogsett.

Leon Pettit started the game for Washington and was found for 11 hits, but few of them came opportunely, however. In fact, it was only in the fourth and eighth that Detroit managed to cluster three hits. As a result of the three hits made off Pettit in the eighth inning, Manager Harris sent in Russell to pitch the ninth inning. He gave but one hit.

Goose Goslin featured the day's hitting by getting four safe ones in four times at bat to make it 13 straight games in which he has hit. Incidentally he raised his batting average to .299. It was .243 when he started his consecutive game hitting.

Stone Leads Attack.

Aside from Pettit, Travis was the only National unable to contact with the ball safely. Stone was the outstanding Washington batsman with his three blows in five times up. Manush, Schulte, Bolton and Bluege each had two hits.

The Nationals broke the scoring ice in a gay manner in the third inning, which Bleuge opened with a trick two-bagger. He lifted to short left field and Rogell just managed to get under the ball. It bounced from his hands and the official scorer dubbed it a double.

Pettit drew a walk, with but one strike against him and Kuhel laid down a neat bunt that advanced the lads a base while he was being tosed out by Clifton. Stone rode a single to right scoring both Bluege and Pettit, the latter being forced to show some keen leg work to beat the throw by Fox to the plate.

Myer was cheated out of a possible two-bagger when Goose Goslin raced almost to midfield and dragged in his liner on the dead run. Manush pushed in the final run of the frame by bouncing the ball off the scoreboard in left field for two bags. Travis fanned and was thrown out at first by Hayworth, who dropped the third strike, his throw barely beating Travis to the bag.

Tigers Stage Rally.

The Tigers tried to catch up with the Nationals in their half of the third inning, but were halted at one run. After Clifton fouled to Travis, Rowe walked and Fox lifted a soft fly to Manush. G. Walker then drove a liner over Manush's head that Heinie barely managed to touch with his glove hand. It went for two bases and Rowe scored. Schulte put a stopper on the Tiger rally when he went back to gather in Gehringer's liner.

Not content with a 2-run lead,

60,000 See Detroiter Triumph Decisively

Round-by-Round Details of Fight

By the Associated Press.

ROUND ONE.

Carnera came bounding out to midring where Louis, dwarfed by the Italian's size, hooked a left to the body before he was smothered in Primo's arms. Louis shot three stiff rights to the head. He drove the Italian to the ropes and smashed his jaw with another right. Rights and lefts thudded off Carnera's head and the former champion was dazed and wobbly. The crowd screamed as the effortless Negro stalked the giant. Carnera held him off with a long left, but another right started blood dripping from Carnera's lips. Louis drove Carnera into a corner and hammered both hands to the body. Carnera mustered all his huge bulk and hurled his small tormentor into the ropes, where he bludgeoned him about the head with both hands. Louis ducked away and shot a hard left to the head at the bell. Louis' round.

ROUND TWO.

Carnera tore across the ring, the instructions of his seconds to "stay in close" ringing in his ears. As he reached to smother Louis in his big arms, the Negro smashed a left and right to Carnera's jaw. Another left hook knocked Carnera into the ropes, but he wrestled Joe about and flung the little fellow into a corner. Carnera prodded Joe's head with a long left, but the Negro wove low and ripped both hands with terrific force into Carnera's body. Primo backed into the ropes, his mouth dripping blood again, as Joe ripped a long left hook to his head. Primo tried desperately to nail the Negro with a right-hand smash, but Joe whipped three successive left hooks to Carnera's head. Carnera was flinging his hand wildly at the expressionless Negro, taking both hands to the body, as the bell rang. Louis' round.

ROUND THREE.

ROUND FOUR.

Carnera ripped a right to Joe's body and blocked a half dozen swings to the head as they wrestled along the ropes. Primo kept his arms higher, and Joe's short swings started bouncing off his elbows. Louis stuck a long left into Primo's body and shook the giant again with a left hook to the chin. Louis missed a long right and Primo roughed him up a little as he shook him around from side to side in close. A long right bounced off Carnera's chin and the giant wobbled again. Joe drilled a left and right to Carnera's bleeding lips, but Primo shook his head and jabbed right back at him as the gong sounded. Round even.

ROUND FIVE.

Referee Donovan Halts Uneven Duel After 3d Knockdown.

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Under the pitiless glare of the ring lights at the Yankee Stadium tonight a cruel, destructive fighting machine trade-marked Joe Louis battered a bewildered, helpless giant of a man christened Primo Carnera into complete submission.

The heavyweight prize fight that was to have gone 15 rounds came to an abrupt, but not unexpected end after 32 seconds of the sixth round as the battered hulk that had been Carnera rose from its third knockdown absolutely helpless, forcing Referee Arthur Donovan to award the bout to Louis on a technical knockout.

The frozen-faced, sloe-eyed Negro's defeat of Carnera was enacted before nearly 60,000 pairs of eyes red with blood lust. It was perhaps the most decisive and humiliating public beating ever administered by one man to another in the name of boxing.

Crowd Acts as Usual.

The epic two-man race riot in the ring was the only one in the arena. The crowd, about 75 per cent white and the rest dark-skinned, behaved just as at any other fight—cheering, jeering and yelling for the kill in a spirit of good, clean sadism.

Louis had won every round up to the knockout, some by wide shades—and others by narrow margins as he waited for Carnera to open a chink in his massive armor through which he might drop one of the hand grenades laughingly called left and right hands.

Even during the periods when he was away watching for an opening like a cat waiting outside a rat hole, Louis was completely the master. Outweighing his 196-pound opponent by 64½ pounds, Carnera had a tremendous advantage in reach and height. He lacked only one thing—natural fighting ability, of which the black Beowulf had more than an abundance.

Attacks Primo's Body.

"Finis" was written to the contest in a manner just as dramatic, maybe more so, than it was inscribed in the Carnera-Baer bout last year. It was a very similar ending. The imperturable brown bear, who changed expressions no more than a lady in a beauty parlor clay pack, had whanged away under Carnera's guard with both fists to the body until the jittery giant had become very weary indeed.

Answering the bell for the fatal sixth, the sensational Senegambian was pinned in a corner, where Carnera roughed him around, cuffing him with both hands and attempting to spin him off balance. Joe came out of the clinch with another vicious left to the mid-section—his last body punch. He whipped over a left hook to the head, then a right with snake-like precision and Carnera wobbled precariously.

Louis tore in as coolly as though he had circulating ice water in his veins instead of good, red fighting blood. Bang! went his right to the head and Carnera toppled like a pile of debris to the floor. "One—two—three—four," tolled the referee as Carnera groveled in the resin dust and finally stumbled to his feet.

Carnera Again Floored.

Without even lifting a eyelash, the lad with the petrified puss was upon Carnera as he rose as wobbly as a punch-drunk fighter on stilts, which he very much resembled. Crash! went another right to the head and Carnera again went reeling to the canvas. He rolled over at

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 25.—An all-Washington combination came through with flying colors today in the feature race here in the mountains. The most important member of the firm was Star Queen, a 4-year-old daughter of Queen's Guild and Little Star, a game filly which fought it out on down to the wire in what the chart makers call "resolute fashion."

Star Queen was ably assisted by Jockey Eddie Smith, the Capital boy, who kept his mount out of trouble and then rode heel and elbow in the stretch to get up inside the final sixteenth. It was Trainer Tim Donohue, of Washington, who sent Star Queen to the post a mighty fit horse, but it will be Mrs. "Tim" Donohue, of Washington, who will collect the purse, for she is the owner of the filly.

The victory was a popular one. Star Queen's chances were well known and the 4,000 present turned the betting into a rout, keeping the filly's odds close to even throughout the wagering. The pay-off of $4.20 was all that could be expected.

Aella and Dutiful were the early leaders in the field of eight competing over the seven-furlong course. Star Queen was held a snug fourth until the back stretch was reached. There Smith began his splendid drive which was to bring victory.

The start was delayed 10 minutes while Dutiful, Hosain and Canteret bolted and wrestled with assistant starters. Canteret finally was ordered to the outside and when the break came the man who was holding the horse forgot to let go. Canteret wheeled all the way around before galloping off far in back of the field.

Star Queen, spotting weight to her rivals, led Dutiful home by two lengths, with Bright Spirits third another half length away.

Red Ensign Takes Narragansett Race

20-to-1 Shot Is Leader in Springfield Purse.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., June 25.—The 3-year-old gelding, Red Ensign, running under the colors of Percy M. Pike, today accounted for the mile and a sixteenth of the Springfield, feature race on the card here.

He won by half a length from Col. W. A. Jones' Boston Brook. Last time out, when still the property of Jack Howard, Red Ensign won a six-furlong race when favored at the mutuels. Today he was a 20-to-1 shot and paid $43.40 for a $2 straight ticket.

Fielding Yost Is Now A Proud Farm Owner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., June 25.—Fielding H. "Hurry Up" Yost, famous coach and athletic director at Michigan University, is the fond owner of a fine farm at the scene of his childhood near Fairview, Marion County, mixing sentiment with business when he acquired it at a recent court sale here.

It is known as the Haught farm and contains 182 acres. He paid $3,500 for it.

Located in the center of an oil and gas field, the oil and gas rights sold for $2,500. A company has it under lease at a rental of $600 a year.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOLLY FAYE, $11.20, $6.70, $4.20; KTWO, $5.90, $4.00; BE JUST, $4.20.

JOLLY FAYE, away fast but seeking speed to keep pace early, moved up gamely on the inside at the stretch turn, wore down the leaders and was going away at the end. KTWO, under urging all the way, closed with good speed on the outside through the stretch. BE JUST, hard ridden following the pacemaker, was unable to keep pace when challenged in the last three-sixteenths. REGISTERITE came willingly in the drive. SMALL DEVIL, hustled to the front, was unable to shake off BE JUST and tired in the last furlong.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:10. Winner, Jack Howard's b. f. (2), by Bulldog—Luscinid. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:00 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE NYMPH, $3.80, $3.30, $2.80; CHESSIE, $35.00, $11.90; NIGHT COURT, $4.20.

LITTLE NYMPH went to the front at once, drew clear in the first furlong and dominated the running all the way, and won with speed in reserve. CHESSIE, hard hustled from the start, raced in closest pursuit of the winner, though unable to seriously threaten. NIGHT COURT worked his way up steadily and closed with a rush through the stretch. LADY CAMELOT, well placed from the start, was unable to improve her position in the closing drive.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:40½. Winner, Mrs. J. Smith's br. g. (3), by High Time—Cinewid. Trained by J. Burks. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT LOVER, $28.30, $8.10, $4.80; IMA GREENOCK, $2.90, $2.60; LEANA G., $5.10.

GREAT LOVER forced the early pace, wore down JESSIE D. M. for the command when reaching the stretch, and drew out slowly through the closing furlong. IMA GREENOCK, under slight restraint while following the pace, responded gamely to urging, but was unable to reach the winner. LEANA G., unable to keep pace during the opening three furlongs, moved up on the inside thereafter and finished with a rush. JESSIE D. M. displayed good speed in pursuit of the leaders but faltered.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:06½. Winner, Jack Howard's ch. g. (3), by Monk Way—Pleasure. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5.

WAYWARD SON	113	8	6	7²	7²	7²	8	Wholey	52.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBUQUERQUE, $4.40, $3.30, $2.80; SABLIN, $31.20, $8.30; PARADUN, $2.80.

ALBUQUERQUE, quickest to begin, drew away into a good lead and, steadied along in front, was never seriously threatened. SABLIN, well placed from the start, came stoutly on the outside through the stretch, getting up in the closing stride to wear down PARADUN. The latter chased the pacemaker closest the entire way, but was placed under punishment reaching the stretch, but was unable to improve her position. TWENTY KARAT was never a serious threat.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38. Winner, P. M. Pike's ch. g. (3), by Cynic—Char Lady. Trained by T. Cronin. Value to winner, $1,125; second, $225; third, $110; fourth, $40. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:12 4-5, 1:38 2-5, 1:46 2-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
RED ENSIGN	110	3	2	3¹	3¹	3¹	1½	Fallon	$20.70
BOSTON BROOK	112	2	1	2ns	1¹	1¹	2¹½	Lynch	5.95

BLACK GIFT	110	4	3	4nk	4¹	4½	4½	Smock	7.45
LEGUME	112	5	5	3¹	5¹	5¹	6¹	Reid	2.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED ENSIGN, $43.40, $12.80, $5.10; BOSTON BROOK, $7.30, $4.00; BRANNON, $3.00.

RED ENSIGN moved to the leaders approaching the half-mile ground, fought it out courageously with BOSTON BROOK all the last three furlongs while kept under intermittent punishment and outlasted him at the end. BOSTON BROOK, prominently placed throughout, saved all possible ground and continued determinedly to the last half-mile. ALBERTA, on the outside at the first turn dropped back, straightened out in the back stretch, but was never a factor.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:08. Off at 5:08½. Winner, P. B. Codd's b. m. (5), by Transmute—Prim Lady. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 2-5.

PRIMUTE	113	2	1	1¹	1¹	1¹	1¹	1¹	Wall	$5.30
KOW TOW	107	1	6	3½	2ns	2²	2¹	2ns	Fallon	3.40

RETRIBUTION	102	4	5	6	6	6	6	6	Orlug	16.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRIMUTE, $12.60, $7.10, $4.30; KOW TOW, $10.00, $5.50; BOOCAP, $4.30.

PRIMUTE took command at once, cut out the running while racing restrained, surrendered the command to KOW TOW midway of the turn, but coming again in the stretch, took command and drew out at if much the best. KOW TOW, slow to begin, moved up steadily through the back stretch, assumed second, but was no match for the winner in the final test. BOOCAP came gamely in the stretch run after being restrained early. FLOWERY LADY, well placed from the start, was unable to reach the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:38½. Winner, H. P. Metcalf's b. g. (5), by Abbots NymphQueen Menelik. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:40, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE ABBOT, $13.90, $5.50, $3.80; REVONAH, $3.90, $2.70; POLO BAR, $3.00.

McCue Beats McElvenny In Upset

By George Considine.

WELL, the seeded stars in the District of Columbia tennis championships are finally beginning to rip off their sweaters. As a matter of fact, two of the elect came to grips yesterday even though it wasn't a quarter-final match.

Contrary to the usual procedure of seeding only eight, the committee, as you know, increased the inner circle so as to include husky Lieut. John McCue. Inasmuch as that very proficient racquet wielder yesterday pinned back the ears of fourth-seeded Ralph McElvenny the win might well be classed as an upset.

Realizing that he was in for a scrap from the Navy man, McElvenny started off with a rush. He ran after everything, bringing into play heated determination, if not classical stroking. All the while that Ralph was eking out the first set at 6—3, McCue seemed to shrewdly realize that his opponent was slowly but surely shooting his bolt.

And before the second fracas was two games old, the Navy man let go his first barrage of thrilling deep-court placements. That proved enough to shake McElvenny's fighting spirit, for at 2 games to 3, McCue launched an unbelievable ten-game sweep, which landed him in the quarter-finals. The scores were 3—6, 6—3, 6—0.

Ritzenberg Does Well.

Though all the rest of the favored group gained quarter-final berths Barney Welsh, defending champion, was given something of a scare by the District's newly crowned junior champion, Nate Ritzenberg.

Unafraid of Welsh's reputation as a killer, young Ritzenberg engineered an attack that had the gallery cheering him on. Barney was forced to speed up his game far beyond that displayed in his previous matches to win at 6—4, 6—2.

At least two outstanding matches are in prospect for this afternoon. In a quarter-final at 3 o'clock Welsh will battle it out with Frank Shore, while Big Bill Breese, smooth-stroking nephew of Hamilton Fish, locks racquets with fifth-seeded Bud Markey at 5 for a berth in the round of eight.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Singles.

Third round—N. Ritzenberg defeated Sweeney, 6—3, 9—7; Markey defeated Phillips, 6—0, 6—1.

Fourth round—Shore defeated Garnett, 6—4, 7—5; Lynch defeated Mather, 6—1, 6—2; Mitchell defeated Niemeyer, 6—0, 6—2; McCue defeated McElvenny, 3—6, 6—3, 6—0; Ellis defeated Blade, 6—2, 6—3; Welsh defeated Ritzenberg, 6—0, 6—4; Deck-Stocklinski match called at 6—6, 1—6 on account of darkness.

Doubles.

First round—Welsh and McElvenny defeated Moorehead and Breese, 6—3, and default; Glassmire and Staubly defeated Dunham and Simmons, 6—1, 6—4; McCue and Lyman defeated Channing and Fontanini, 6—3, 6—2; Mitchell and Markey defeated Scheidemann and Gross by default; Baker and Dudley defeated Rulloda and Pollock by default; Burwell and Dawson defeated Sloan and Williams by default; Lynch and McCarthy defeated Bliewer and Mintz, 6—0, 6—2; Mather and Trigg defeated Rice and Price, 6—3, 6—1; Carr and Ellis led Gould and H. Ritzenberg, 7—5 at darkness; Shore-Willis and Organ-Dole stood at 6—3, 4—6, 3—3 at darkness.

Va. Golf Group Held Even By Japanese

Nelson Long Ties Course Record; Cruikshank in Pair of Victories.

By the Associated Press.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., June 25.—A six-man Japanese golf team and five Virginia professionals and one amateur came out all even this afternoon after a day of hard play over the Cascades course here.

S. Chin and R. Asami defeated Nelson Long and Sam Snead, Hot Springs pros, 1 up, and Toichro Toda and Jack K. Yusada whipped Tom Galloway, Richmond professional, and Graham Napier by the same count in the morning matches.

Bobby Cruickshank, Country Club of Virginia pro, and Bill Howell, Richmond amateur and former Walker Cup player, beat Tommy Miyamoto and Kanekichi 3 and 2.

In the afternoon, Cruickshank won from Yusada, 5 and 4; the Richmonder shooting a 72, 1 over par. Long won from Chin, 4 and 3. Long's 68 tying the course record.

Snead's 72 Wins Match.

Snead, with a 72, defeated Asami, 7 and 6; Howell halved with Miyamoto; Napier bowed to Toda, 1 down, and Galloway lost to Nakamura, 4 and 2.

Cruickshank played beautifully, driving the 245-yard fifteenth to within 6 feet of the pin and sinking the putt for a birdie 2. Long shot two birdies on the fifteenth and eagles on the sixteenth and seventeenth.

The visitors showed remarkable recovery when in the rough and were good on the green. This was the first time they have halved a match, having won 14 and lost 9 on their American tour.

The visitors will play at the Boonsboro Country Club, Lynchburg, tomorrow, meeting the same team, except for the substitution of Ben Loving for Billy Howell.

Teams Will Replay Forfeited Contest

Strasburg Protest Brings Decision Reverse.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., June 25.—Following threats to quit the Shenandoah County League, at a meeting of the league's board of directors held last night, Strasburg was granted a postponement in a game that was ruled as a forfeit last week by the president of the loop, J. Grove Kniesley. The lifting of the forfeit came only when Manager Ray Coffman of Edinburg, whose team was moved up by virtue of the forfeit, agreed that they would give the Strasburg team a chance to play the game on Saturday at Strasburg. The Strasburg club will be forced to cancel a game scheduled with the Bentonville, W. Va., nine.

President Kniesley told reporters this morning that the lifting of the forfeit game was against his better judgment, and that he would not have done so had not the two managers of the teams in question agreed to play the game. Woodstock's representative at the meeting was indignant over the ruling, as was Mount Jackson's.

Throng Cheers Helen Wills' Victory

U. S. Star Beats Hungarian to Enter Second Round at Wimbledon.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 25.—Helen Wills Moody returned today to the scene of some of her greatest tennis triumphs — Wimbledon's center court—and drew an enthusiastic greeting from a crowd of 15,000 as she defeated Mlle. A. Baumgarten, red-haired Hungarian, 6—0, 6—1, to enter the second round of the all-England championships.

Helen Jacobs, the American champion; Dorothy Round, of England, defending titleholder here, and Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany, recent winner of the French hard court title, all opened with straight set victories, buf it was definitely Mrs. Moody's day so far as the crowd was concerned.

The huge crowd saw more tarpaulin-pulling than tennis as a result of a late-morning shower that washed out all but eight of the day's 70 matches, but it went home perfectly satisfied after watching the "big four" of the women's division in action.

From the outset of Mrs. Moody's first-round match, it was apparent her Hungarian opponent would have no chance. The 29-year-old Californian's forehand sent booming drives down the sidelines for points almost at will.

Miss Jacobs won her way into the second round with a 6—3, 6—2 victory over Nelli Adamson, Belgian champion. Mme. Sperling, conqueror of Miss Jacobs in the semi-finals of the recent French championships, had no trouble with Mrs. B. Beazley, of England, winning, 6—0, 6—2, but Miss Round found herself hard pressed to score at 8—6, 6—3, over Miss A. E. L. McOstrich.

In men's doubles, the top-seeded combination of Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn won easily from H. F. Davis and Dr. P. D. B. Spence, 6—4, 6—1, 6—3, but another American combination, Henry Culley, of California, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., bowed to the clever teamwork of Hideo Nishimura and Jiro Yamagishi, of Japan, 6—4, 6—1, 6—3.

Culpeper Downs Waynesboro, 3-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., June 25.—Culpeper Athletic Club defeated Waynesboro in their second engagement in the Valley League here today, 3 to 2. Bear for the visitors and Hash for the locals each allowed six singles. Waynesboro scored two runs in the fifth on successive singles by Huffman and Cornell, and, after Hash set down the next two batters, Bear aided his cause by singling, scoring two runners.

Bear held the locals to three hits up to the eighth inning, when with two out, singles by Douglas, a walk to Lewis, a single by Brown, scored Douglas for Culpeper's first run. With the count three and two, Lacey fouled behind third, Hulvey dropping the ball, and on the next pitch the batter singled, scoring two runners ahead for the tying and winning tally.

Culpeper goes to West Point for an exhibition game with Chesapeake Club tomorrow, with three games scheduled on the home diamond before Monday, two of which are league contests.

Crew Captain Named.

Annapolis, Md., June 25 (AP).—A. F. Fleming, of Las Cruces, N. Mex., today was elected captain of the Naval Academy varsity crew for the 1935-1936 season.

Post Mortems . . .

Frankie Pytlak, Cleveland catcher who has retired for the season because of illness, received a rough but thorough education from Willie Kamm when he broke into the big time . . . on Frank's first visit to New York Kamm told him it would cost a dime a floor for riding above the twentieth floor at their hotel . . . and Frankie tried to pay it . . . in Chicago he was told that gangsters exacted $5 from each player . . . and he paid off twice to Kamm . . . who returned it later . . . The wise ones are saying that Phil Donato allowed himself to be knocked out by Jack Doyle by a left hook to the shoulder . . . Donato, incidentally, has been fighting less than a year . . . Tom Yawkey, Boston Red Sox owner, is back in the States after an Alaskan bear hunt . . . and with the evidence . . . Primo Carnera, half of last night's attraction in New York, was discovered working in a Bordeau piano factory . . . but not lifting pianos as many suppose . . . Cleveland can't beat Vito Tamulis, the Yankees' new southpaw ace, who seems to have succeeded to the mastery old Herb Pennock wielded over the Tribe . . . Jack Johnson, the old Negro who formerly held the heavyweight title, is vending his own brand of whisky and gin in Harlem . . . it is supposed to be as potent as the dusky warrior's knockout punch . . . Three mayors saw last night's Carnera-Louis bout, LaGuardia, Hague, of Jersey City, and Ellenstein, of Newark . . . in addition to Jimmy Braddock, heavyweight champion, and four former heavyweight champs, Tunney, Dempsey, Baer and Sharkey . . . the fifth "ex" was in the ring . . . Only four-fifths of New York City is settled . . . Paul Dean gave signs of slipping in his last two games when 11 earned runs were culled from his offerings.

Michigan Team Captures Title In National College Golf Event

tion, tied with Jack Malloy at 151. Out-of-bounds shots on the fifteenth and sixteenth, and weird putting on the last two holes blasted Lynch's chances of tying for the big honor.

He shot 75-76, while Malloy, following his brilliant 72 of the opening day, encountered plenty of trouble on the outgoing side, where he took a 42 and had to do some rallying on the stretch to finish with a 79.

Virtually all of the favorites, except three from Stanford—Tommy Dwyer, captain; Don Edwards and Verne Stewart—made the qualifying grade. As a matter of fact, only Jack Hoerner, the 190-pounder, was able to win a place for Stanford among the select circle of 32. Hoerner shot 77-81—158.

Johnny Fischer, of Michigan, 1932 champion, was an easy qualifier, with his 152. Fischer hit the ball better off the tee, but was unable to nail putts at opportune moments, and his best for the second day was a 75.

Also with 152 was Freddie Haas, the Lanky Louisiana State star, whose 79, which included a 41 on the first nine, was a far cry from his great 73 of Monday. Haas was on the verge of destroying his putter, which caused him to 3-stroke six greens.

Marks, Princeton, Has 153.

Wilson Marks, of Princeton, scored 77-76—153, and Harry Gandy, Oklahoma's Big Six champion, blazed over the back stretch in 33, clipping 2 shots off par, to wipe out the memory of an almost disastrous 41 on the first nine. Gandy shot 79-74—153.

In the 154 class were G. A. Menard, jr., of Penn State, and Winfield Day, of Notre Dame; Ed White, Texas captain, with 77-78—155, tied with Bill Welch, a teammate; Bill Flynn, of Northwestern; C. N. Dannals, jr., of Georgia Tech, and H. L. Beyer, jr., of Penn State, whose 80 was 5 strokes higher than his opening day score.

Way back in the running, but well within the qualifying circle, was Charles Yates, of Georgia Tech, defending champion.

Yates, who has yet to return to putting form, couldn't do better than 78 and his total was 156.

A former champion, Walter Emery, of Oklahoma, wound up with 156. He had 79-77. Johnny Banks, Notre Dame, captain; Bobby Riegel, of Richmond; John Boyd, of Bowdoin; Arch St. John, of Oklahoma; Bob Cochran, of St. Louis, and Claude McKee, of Pittsburgh, had similar scores.

Riegel Only Man With Par.

Riegel was the big talk of the day with his 72—the only man able to level par yesterday. It took nothing short of a stout heart and brilliant shotmaking to wipe out his terrible 84 of the first day with that fine 38-34—72 round yesterday. Riegel, the slim Richmonder, who Saturday won the Southern amateur championship, was equal to the occasion.

Undaunted by an outgoing nine of 38, one over, Riegel burned up the incoming side, reeling off four consecutive pars, holing out a 25-foot chipshot for a deuce on the fourteenth. After 3-putting the sixteenth, Bobby parred the seventeenth, arched his approach to within 4 feet of the eighteenth pin and sank his putt for a birdie 3.

There wasn't a golfer in the field yesterday who stroked the ball any better than Riegel as he poked out tremendous tee shots and regained his vaunted approaching and putting game.

Johnny Wasko, with 79-78—157, was in the 157 class, and John Ridley, of Georgia Tech, who scored a 76 after his 82 of the first day; Dan A. Seely, of Michigan, with a brace of 79's; Tom Draper, jr., of Washington University, St. Louis, slumping to an 83 following his fine 75 of Monday, and Stanford's Hoener, 77-81, tied at 158.

Thirty finished with scores of 158 or better. Seven others, tied at 160, played off for two qualifying places late in the evening. Those who tied were Jim Lee, of Georgetown; Bobb McLaughlin, of Buffalo; T. E. Marsnall, of Penn State; William Ward, of Syracuse; R. B. Parker, of Princeton; H. E. Shelman, of Yale, and Berrien Moore, of Georgia Tech.

McLaughlin nailed a 40-footer for a birdie 4 to clinch his place on the first hole, while Parker, with a par 3, qualified on the third hole.

Champions Matched.

Golfing dynamite is expected to explode all over the 7,050-yard Congressional course in the two rounds of match play today.

The luck of the draw brings together two of the three champions—Yates, defending titleholder, and Emery, 1933 winner—in the opening match, starting at 9 o'clock. Fischer, the third champion, has a real battle on his hands, for he meets Stanford's Jack Hoerner at 9:50. Joe Lynch's opponent is Bob Cochran, of St. Louis, who the Georgetown entry outscored by 5 shots in the qualifying round.

Nineteen colleges qualified their golfing sons, four of the players being from Michigan's crack four-man team which made a successful defense of its championship. Kocsis, Fischer, Malloy and Dana Seely were the successful Wolverine qualifiers.

Oklahoma, which placed second in the team competition with 827, had three qualifiers. Georgia Tech, with 629, was third; Princeton, fourth with 631, and Georgetown fifth with 634.

That Congressional's course, which has seen par broken in competition only once, is as tough as it is cracked up to be was conclusively proven when only three out of a field of 120 were able to equal par. Before the championship, 144 or 145 had been set as a possible medal-winning score. That didn't come true. They predicted 158 would play off; instead, it was 160.

Pars Rare.

Kocsis had only 12 pars and two birdies to show. Bunkers cost him a 5 on the second and a 4 on the third, and he missed a 5-footer for a bird by inches on the sixth.

On the eleventh, the Michigan ace overshot the green with his second and flubbed his third, winding up with a 5. He became level with par for that side by arching a deadly approach to within 2 feet of the pin and sinking his putt for a birdie 4. It was regulation from then on. By inches Kocsis missed holing out of a trap for his bird. On the home hole he went too boldly for the pin with his second, and finished with a par 4.

Charleston's Johnson started shakily with 5-5. He had a 5 on the fourth and a 6 on the fifth, and got back a stroke with a birdie on the eighth, going out in 40.

He was even par for the first four holes of the back nine, but three-putted the fourteenth to take a 4. He sank a 10-footer for a birdie 3 on the fifteenth and plunked in a good-sized putt for a birdie 3 on the seventeenth. Johnson played carefully for his par 4 on the home hole and a sizzling 34.

Malloy Recovers.

Malloy really had to make some great recoveries to finish as well as he did. He recovered from a trap on the second for his par 4 and went 1 over with a 5 on the fourth. Three putts cost him a 5 on the sixth. On the eighth he trundled in a 4-footer for a birdie 4, and bagged his par 3 on the ninth.

Malloy called on his niblick to save him a par on the eleventh, where his second was on the fringe of the green, and he had to pitch over a succession of terraces on the green with lots of stop on his ball.

Trapped on the twelfth, Malloy blasted out brilliantly and sank a 3-footer for his par 3. His big mistake came on the long thirteenth, where the Michigan golfer used a spoon for his second from an uphill lie and knocked the ball into a trap 35 feet in front of him. Had he used an iron, there probably would'nt have been a three-way tie. As it was he didn't reach the green until 5, then missed a 4-footer to take a 7.

A trap on the short fourteenth caused him to take a 4, and he had the misfortune to become jittery on the sixteenth and 3-putt the green for a 5.

Out of Bounds Hurts.

Lynch went 1 over with a 38 on the first nine. His only mistake on that side was made on the second, where he pushed his drive to the rough and failed to reach the green in 2, taking a 5.

Lynch had a chance to pick up a birdie on the thirteenth, but missed a 6-footer. On the fifteenth he threw away 2 shots by hitting his drive out of bounds, and tossed away another stroke on the sixteenth with an out-of-bounds. He missed an 8-inch putt for a bird on the seventeenth, and on the home hole, he blew a 6-footer for a bird.

Fischer lost a stroke to par on the first by clouting his second out of bounds, and was the victim of a bad kick with his approach on the second, where he took a 5. A great recovery netted him his par 3 on the ninth, and he missed numerous putts for birds on the homeward journey, going over par only on the fifteenth.

Round-by-Round Details of Fight

left. Joe dug two lefts into Carnera's body and stabbed the giant's chin with a jab. As the action slowed, the crowd started booing. Carnera roughed Louis in a clinch and the Negro drove him furiously into a corner. He smashed Carnera's head with lefts and right-hand swings, and the blood from the giant's mouth trickled down his chin. Relentlessly, Louis forced the struggling man mountain back and another left hook rocked Carnera. Joe missed a long right, sank a hard left in Carnera's body, then crossed a crunching right to the jaw. Primo backed away, arms high, fending off Louis's furious volley, and then best Joe could do was rap him with a left to the body as the bell rang. It was Louis' round.

ROUND SIX.

Louis' expression still hadn't changed as he trotted out and circled his big foe. They swapped left hooks to the head and Carnera looked querulous as Louis sank a left hook into his stomach just above the belt line. Carnera picked Louis up and moved him to the ropes, where he slugged him hard with a right to the body. Carnera drove two hard rights to the body, but took a terific right to the chin that floored him for a count of four.

He came up reeling, his face spouting blood and Louis sank him again for another count of four with another right to the head. Helpless and reeling, Carnera went down again for the third and last time under a crushing left hook to the chin. Carnera staggered helplessly to his feet at the count of three and stood there, his hands down, dazed, as Referee Donovan stopped the fight and awarded Louis the victory on a technical knockout, 2 minutes 32 seconds after the start of the sixth.

'Babe' Marches To Victory in Rain

Holds Spotlight With Helen Hicks in Western Women's Open.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 25.—Miss Helen Hicks and Mildred "Babe" Didrikson, golf's foremost business women professionals, gave some lessons on how to play the ancient game in a rainstorm today as they marched from opposite brackets into the second of the women's Western Open golf championships at Sunset Ridge Country Club.

The two professional stars advanced in the only championship in which they can play with consummate ease, Miss Hicks defeating Mrs. Harold Foreman, Chicago, 4 and 3, and the Texas Babe crushing Mrs. Robert Bullard, Springfield, Ill., 6 and 5.

Accompanying them in their advance were 14 others, among them Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, thrice Western champion, who defeated Shirley Ann Johnson, Chicago, 7 and 6, and Mis Lucille Robinson, Des Moines, six times Iowa champion, who conquered Miss Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, 4 and 3.

The big attraction of the day was Miss Didrikson, who was 3 over par for thirteen holes. Babe made her best shot of the day on the twelfth, where, after driving into the rough, she nearly holed out an iron shot, leaving her a sure birdie and the hole.

Frederick Loses To Chambersburg

Hard Hitting Marks Second Loss in Row.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 25.—The Frederick Hustlers went down before the Chambersburg (Pa.) Maroons in a hard-hitting 11-inning game today at McCurdy Field, 12 to 8. It was the second straight game Frederick has lost after winning eight in a row.

The Hustlers scored five runs in the first inning, three of which resulted from Hartman's home run with two on bases. Two more were scored in the fourth when Hartman hit another homer with one aboard. Chambersburg scored four in the fifth inning and evened matters in the seventh. Neither side then scored until the elevent

Indians, Outhit, Defeat Yankees, 5 to 4

Winning Run Is Walked In by Malone

Berger's Homer, Triple by Trosky Aid Tribe to Cut Lead.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, June 25.—Although outhit two to one, the Cleveland Indians staged a two-run rally in the ninth to defeat the New York Yankees, 5 to 4, today and again reduce the league leaders' margin to three games.

The Yankees got to Mel Harder for 12 hits while Johnny Allen was yielding only six, but Cleveland's veteran right-hander kept the blows well spaced except in the first, when the New Yorkers bunched four hits to score three of their runs. The victory was Harder's twelfth of the season as compared to only three setbacks, while the defeat was Allen's third as against six triumphs.

The McCarthymen, who wound up their Western invasion with the encounter, went into the last half of the ninth with a 4-to-3 lead. Bruce Campbell opened up with a single, however, and when Hal Trosky shot a triple to left the Indians' right fielder raced home with the tying run. Hale and Berger were purposely passed to fill the bases and Pat Malone was called in from the bull pen to replace Allen. The former National League pitcher gave three straight balls to Eddie Phillips, put over a strike, and then tossed the fourth ball, walking Phillips and forcing in the deciding tally.

Previously Berger had put the Tribe back in the running when he drove out a homer in the seventh with Hale on the base paths.

Phillies Take Measure Of Reds to Shift Luck

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—Syl Johnson limited the Reds to eight hits while his Phillies' team mates bumped a trio of Cincinnati hurlers for 14 hits and a 10-to-1 triumph today.

It was Johnson's sixth triumph of the year against two defeats, and broke a five-game losing streak for the Phils. Dolph Camilli hit his thirteenth home run of the season in the fifth.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., June 25.—Brunswick about clinched the first half pennant in the Tri-County League, embracing Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery Counties, by defeating Wakefield, 11 to 2, today. Walkersville defeated Church Hill, 12 to 4; Point of Rocks defeated Damascus in 10 innings, 6 to 5; New Market defeated Middletown, 14 to 13; Cedar Grove defeated Frederick in 12 hard-fought innings, 4 to 3, and Mount Airy won from Jefferson, 14 to 10.

The Cedar Grove-Frederick game was one of the best of the season, each team using two hurlers. With the count even in the twelfth, Cedar Grove loaded the bases and a single by Wilbur LaGore settled the issue.

Singles by A. Brown and Robertson, base on balls and a long fly to center field by Sterling in the tenth gave Point of Rocks the decision over Damascus. Carey held Wakefield to five scattered hits, while Brunswick rapped Barnes for 12 to give the Railroaders an easy victory.

Winner Follows Orders.

The winner functioned beautifully throughout the exciting, though one-sided, shambles. He played both hands to the body for three rounds, exactly as he had been instructed. Occosionally during his assaults on the mid-section, he tossed over a left or right to the head, but they were only by way of good measure. One of those blows to the body made the blood spurt from Carnera's mouth in the first round, and pitiful Primo continued to spurt claret through his ugly snaggle teeth until the end.

Even in the early rounds before he had softened Carnera for the two-fisted attack which ended in the knockout, Louis was able to open up holes in the jittery giant's defense time and time again by feinting. He feinted with his knees and Carnera waved his fists indecisively. He feinted with his body and Carnera looked bewildered. He feinted with his hands and the vast Venetian threw up his hands widely as his wits scattered.

Carnera, in perhaps the finest fettle of the incongruous career which led him from a circus side show to the heavyweight championship and may lead him back to the tan bark, still was the same old Carnera. On occasion he boxed beautifully, sticking out a bulldgeoning left which seldom found the dark destroyer's slippery, weaving head.

Carnera Shows Flash.

On occasion, Carnera blocked Louis' leads nicely, sometimes countering with both hands to the head. Once, in the third round, he showed a flash of fighting spirit in which he pumped both his enormous fists to the black boy's head, driving him across the ring to the ropes. These things happened only on occasion, however, and on the important occasions.

When it counted, Carnera was the same old flabbergasted mass of flesh who flew to pieces when his opponent deviated in the slightest from the ordinary routine of boxing. He feinted off balance with ridiculous ease, got tangled up in his own monsterous feet when Louis set a fast and furious pace and bounced up too quickly from knockdown punches.

Louis, who ruled a 5-3 favorite this afternoon, entered the ring on the long end of 3-to-2 wagering—and plenty of it. It was the twenty-third professional fight for the meteoric brown bomber from Detroit, and his nineteenth knockout since deserting the amateur ranks.

Explanations Offered.

Dejected and forlorn after the fight, Carnera had no "broken ankles" to offer as an alibi this time. He merely grunted that he had not followed his instructions on how to fight Louis and had suffered accordingly. Louis Soresi, the wreck's co-manager, agreed that such was the case. Louis said the bout had ended exactly according to plan.

"Ah wuz tole to play foh his body until dey gimme de word to switch to his face," Joe informed the world as nonchalantly as he had battered Carnera. "Ah did, an' it worked."

The crowd was the largest for a non-title fight since Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey met here in 1927. The gross gate receipts, of which Carnera will receive 35 per cent and the winner 18 per cent, were estimated at about $350,000. Official figures will be released tomorrow.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

THE number of hardhead now being caught around the bay is almost unbelievable. Every party going out seems to be catching all they wish of these excellent-flavored fish.

Weakfish, the so-called trout, are now generously distributed around the Chesapeake, but like the temperamental blues they are not biting to any extent. Huge schools of them have been reported in the neighborhood of the Middles and infrequent specimens of medium size have been landed at various places in the upper bay.

The river has been a poor producer the last few days. It has been muddy and high. We haven't heard of a decent catch of rocks in several days. Black bass fishing also seems to be at a standstill. The bass are still spawning and unless one uses a deep lure or bait he is doomed to disappointment.

Fishing conditions along the ocean seems to be quiet these days. Oregon Inlet reports a few channel bass being taken. Wachapreague is still producing weaks, croakers and channel bass, but there is a lull there as there is at Ocean City.

Trout seasons in Virginia and Maryland have only a few days more to go and many District anglers are planning a last week-end on them.

Nongame Fish Plentiful.

We get amazing reports of huge shark, sting-rays and porpoise from both ocean and bay localities. Sting-rays are causing no end of damage to oyster and clam beds along the Chincoteague and Wachapreague waterways. Freshly seeded beds have been damaged to the extent of thousands of dollars and dynamite has been resorted to in an effort to drive them off.

This may be tough on oysetermen but it augers well for sport anglers. When nongame fish are plentiful it also means that game fish are even more so.

It may be of interest to local oystermen and clam diggers that out on the West Coast growers are obliged to protect their beds from voracious rays by use of picket fences! Long stakes are driven down into the water and close enough together to keep the rays from entering.

Had Tough Luck!

Here is a hard luck story for you that we heard yesterday and are passing along: A police officer in one of the outlying precincts spent months buying a decent saltwater outfit. Out of every pay check he would slip a certain dealer a dollar or two.

Last Saturday the outfit was all paid for and he took it home. Sunday he went out on the bay for a long-anticipated fishing trip. He made one cast with a shrimp-baited hook. Something hit his bait like a tornado. The line shot out like chain lightning and ere the startled officer could collect himself the end was reached and the rod was ripped from his hand to disappear into many feet of water.

Nobody knows what took his bait. All the officer knew was his day was spoiled and weeks of sacrifice gone in a single moment.

Louis Batters Carnera Into Submission

Crack, crack! went the right and left of this calmly savage Ethiopian to the head of the battered derelict and Carnera again was on the floor. He staggered to his feet, his hands down at his sides, his face distored with pain and bewilderment. He reeled along the ring ropes, obviously begging that someone stop this brown mechanism that was so surely destroying him.

If one of the men in the ring with the badly battered giant had none of the milk of human kindness in his breast, Referee Donovan was not without human feelings and he sped across the ring on an errand of mercy, waving Louis to his corner and leading the bewildered giant to his. It was the second time within a year that Donovan, who refereed the Carnera-Baer bout last June, had been forced to pry a natural fighter off the manufactured boxer who is Carnera.

Griffs Hammer Rowe to Beat Tigers, 7-4

Washington went out and knocked Rowe's offerings all over and out of the lot in the fifth inning. Four runs were chalked before Rowe was able to make 'em call it quits. Kuhel opened the campaign with a two-bagger off Goslin's shoe strings. The Goose made a grand run for the ball but could not quite gobble it up.

Stone then slapped a triple over Gerald Walker's head and Kuhel scored. Myer banged a two-bagger down the third base line scoring Stone. Buddy streaked it for third base and made it after Manush field deep to Fox. Travis bounced one to Rogell, who was playing in, and Myer, who had a good lead off third, tried to make the plate but was run down. Schulte then laid the ball outside the orchard, scoring Travis ahead of him. Bolton singled and Bluege, who had hit safely in both appearances at the plate, popped to Rogell.

Detroit clicked for a marker in the fifth which Shelley, a recruit, started with a single, while batting for Rowe. He was forced at second by Fox and Walker singled, putting Fox on third. Gehringer's long fly to Stone let Fox home.

In the eighth inning the Tigers put on a rally that was nipped after two men had scored. With one out, Greenberg tripled off the score board. Goslin, making his fourth hit in as many times at bat, scored Greenberg. Rogell singled, sending Goslin home. Hayworth and Clifton were disposed of on infield plays. This ended the scoring for the day.

Specter of Tax Shakes Stocks To Lower Level

Gilt-Edge Equities Give Ground Readily; Rails Are Resistant.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Uncertainties today over the Washington tax developments combined with profit-taking after the recent rise in stocks to shake the market down smartly.

"Blue chip" equities, particularly some of the higher placed members of the "Century Club," gave ground readily, with losses of fractions to 2 or more points rather common. Rails held a little better on the whole than other groups while the bears made most progress against the industrials.

Carrier issues likewise were able to come back best in the bond market toward the finish. Moderate losses were the rule in most other sections of the loans list, even though the day's lows were generally improved on at the finish.

The volume of transactions was about on a par with Monday's session, with turnover most rapid in the first half hour, while stocks sold off sharply, and again toward the finish when a slight recovery was under way. Transactions aggregated 1,144,330 shares. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined .6 of a point at 44.3.

Wall Street banking and brokerage circles appeared to be somewhat taken aback at the announced intention of the administration to push rapidly ahead with the President's wealth distribution tax.

Corn Is Steady, Wheat Lower

Harvesting Conditions for Wheat Are Better; Corn Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 25.—In another listless session wheat prices sagged moderately today, losing less than a cent a bushel, while corn futures held about steady.

Continued improvement in harvesting conditions in the Southwestern winter wheat belt and early easiness in stocks and in Liverpool wheat gave the Chicago wheat market a bearish tone. On the other hand, reports of further weather delays to corn in important producing areas tended to strengthen the December corn future, which represents the new crop.

Wheat lost ½ to ⅞ cent during the dull session, September closing at 79⅜-½, and corn was unchanged to ½ off; September, 75¼-⅜. Oats were ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher; rye, ⅜-¾ down, and barley, 1 cent up to 1 cent off.

May Silver Output Up to 2,693,000 Ozs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Silver production in the United States in May was 2,693,000 fine ounces compared with 2,579,000 in April, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics. For the five months ended May 31 the output in this country was 14,355,000 ounces. The world production in May was 16,870,000 ounces against 15,646,000 in April.

French Expert Urges Stable Currencies Now

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 25.—International stabilization of currencies at approximately their present levels was urged today by Charles Rist, one of France's leading financial authorities and long associated with both the Bank of France and governmental finance.

Speaking before the International Chamber of Commerce Convention, he said stabilization of the franc, dollar and pound "at new levels and quite close to the present sums is possible."

In the second day session, devoted to stabilization, Dr. T. E. Gregory, English financial expert, said world-wide depression still engulfed international commerce due to tariffs and the currency depreciation "war."

"So-called 'recovery' has affected the manufacturers for the domestic market, but the shipping, importing and exporting interests of all countries are still suffering," Gregory said. "There therefore remains an important body of opinion to which appeal can be made and ought to be made.

"Reform must begin at some point. Admittedly the reintroduction of stabilized exchanges is not a simple solution of the difficulties from which the world is suffering. Admittedly also stabilized exchanges can not work satisfactorily without a cessation of the economic war at present engaging the nations of the world.

"But one must make a start and it is certainly easier to start with currencies than with tariffs."

Growing Tendency of Large Corporations to Borrow for Capital Purposes at Banks Brings Warning From I. B. A. Industrial Securities Committee.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 26.—A steadily growing number of corporations have borrowed large sums from commercial banks to meet their capital requirements in recent months. Attracted by the extremely low interest rates charged strong borrowers on such loans by the banks as well as by the willingness of banks to make advances for periods of several years, corporations which had planned public financing in a number of instances have resorted to bank loans instead.

The banks have been led to make these large capital loans to individual borrowers in strong financial condition by the absence of other desirable commitments. The demand for conventional short-term self-liquidating commercial loans continues at low ebb in most parts of the country. Yields on high-grade bonds have dwindled steadily. Accordingly, when such enterprises as the Chrysler Corporation or the Consolidated Oil Corporation wish to borrow, banks have stood ready to advance needed funds at very low cost and for a period of several years.

Thus, in order to pay off $48,000,000 of high coupon bonds, Consolidated Oil has borrowed $40,000,000 from a group of banks. Notes covering this loan are payable in from two to five years, and the interest rate will be 2 per cent for the first two years, and then rise to a high of 3 per cent for the unpaid balance for the fifth year.

Change in Money Market May Raise Cost Sharply.

Just now, with money market conditions extremely easy, there is a strong temptation for corporations to borrow from banks at these very low rates rather than to resort to public financing with bond or stock issues. But past experience has shown that there may be no little peril in such a course. Money market conditions change. When these bank loans come due, they may have to be renewed at much higher interest rates. In fact, if a period of credit contraction should intervene, or if earnings of the borrower should suffer a material turn for the worse. It may not be feasible to renew such bank loans when they mature. In that event, these advances may be the cause of serious financial embarrassment to the borrowing corporation.

In certain specific instances a resort to bank borrowings is more justifiable than in others. Where a corporation is now in a very satisfactory cash position, or where large current earnings give strong assurance that installments of bank loans can be paid off as rapidly as they mature, the risk involved in such short-term financing may seem negligible. But in many instances these conditions are not present, so that even a moderate change for the worse in money markket or business conditions may create a problem.

Virtually all the large enterprises that have been able to finance their capital requirements at the banks have been in position also to sell long-term bonds in the capital market if they had wished. However, this latter course usually involves higher interest cost, flotation expenses and resort to the registration procedure required under the Federal securities act. The desire to avoid these, as well as a wish to have the loan in more flexible form to permit periodic repayments when convenient, explains the preference shown to bank loans in many cases. In other instances it is planned to repay the bank loans with a bond issue when interest rates are still lower.

Hold Risk Is Too Great.

Conservative bankers emphasize the fact that the management of a large enterprise should take a long view of financial and business prospects in financing capital requirements. Hence, it is contended that the advantages that lie in resorting to bank loans for long-term money are more than outweighed by the possibility of embarrassment with an untoward change in conditions. Particularly, they say, is the conversion of long-term bonds into short-term debts inexcusable, as the saving is obtained at too high a risk.

Investment bankers, in addition to being governed by these broad considerations, dislike the loss of issue business to them that results from bank borrowing for capital purposes. The interim report of the Industrial Securities Committee of the Investment Bankers Association of America, just made public, contains a warning against bank loans of this type. "Now is a good time," says this report, "for industry to borrow in the long-term market. To contract short-term loans to meet capital requirements is, however, patently a very doubtful policy."

There are about 25 large corporate refunding operations now under active negotiation with investment bankers and nearing the offering stage. Many more in an earlier stage of the negotiation process.

Thirty Million Pacific Gas 4s Offered Today

SEC Registry Date Moved Up Fifteen Days

Local Firms Are Affected by Reprieve to July 15.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has extended the effective date for permanent registration of securities until July 15, it was announced last night.

The 15-day period of grace was granted for permanent filing of securities now on a temporary status. It was said to have been due to the commission's wish that all uncertainty and confusion that might have followed expiration of the temporary registrations on June 30 be avoided.

Registration statements from 1,836 companies who have filed on forms 10 and 12 have already been received. Among them are 17 from local companies, 3 of which were saved from a temporary lapse by the last-minute reprieve.

2,200 Firms Affected.

Commission officials estimated that about 2,200 companies would come within the rules of the securities act registration requirements. Locally there are only seven companies left from which statements may be forthcoming. It was asserted in official quarters last night, however, that only two of the remaining eligible firms would register.

Banks and insurance firms have not as yet been required to file, as their registration blanks have not been ready. It is expected that these classifications will come in during August and September.

Practically all of the companies with securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange have already filed for registration, most of the delinquents apparently having been concerns with issues on the smaller exchanges.

4,872 Temporary Statements.

Temporary registration statements filed with the SEC total 4,872. Of these 2,933 cover stocks and 1,939 cover bonds.

Under a special ruling the time for filing securities of foreign governments—except nationals of North America and Cuba—has been extended to December 31.

Before July 15 there will be published by the SEC a list setting forth the status, as to registration or exemption, of the various securities, the announcement said, so that at that time brokers and others interested will know what securities can no longer be bought and sold on the respective exchanges. In the meantime, it was added, all securities listed will continue to have the same loan value and the prohibitions against manipulation will be applicable.

The SEC is also receiving application from over-the-counter dealers—that is, operators not usually associated with any stock exchange—who must have their paper in the hands of the commission by July 2 if they are to continue in business after August 1. There are some 10,000 such dealers in the United States.

Too Much Money In Kansas Banks

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 23.—Banks in Topeka and elsewhere in Kansas have more money than they know what to do with. In an effort to divert funds to other investments, the Topeka Clearing House has adopted a rule, effective July 1, under which banks will pay only 1½ per cent interest on time deposits and savings accounts. A year ago the rate was 3 per cent.

Jobless Army 5½% Greater Than Year Ago

Total in May, According to Industrial Survey, Was 9,711,000.

New York, June 25.—The total number of unemployed workers in May, 1935, was 9,711,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board made public today. This is an increase of 90,000, or 0.9 per cent, from the preceding month, and an increase of 510,000, or 5.5 per cent over May, 1934.

From April to May, 1935, the increases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: Trade, 64,000; manufacturing and mechanical industries, 42,000; domestic and personal service, 7,000; miscellaneous industries, 2,000. Unemployment in transportation showed a decrease of 47,000, and in mining, 4,000.

Compared with May, 1934, unemployment in May, 1935, increased 4.7 per cent in domestic and personal service; 3.6 per cent in transportaiton, 3.2 per cent in trade, 2.7 per cent in mining, 1.5 per cent in manufacturing and 1.7 per cent in miscellaneous industries. The conference board's allowance of 320,000 for the net annual increase of gainful workers available for employment brought the estimate of total unemployment above the figure for May, 1934.

The following table prepared by the conference board shows the number of unemployed workers in the various industrial groups in May, 1934, and May, 1935.

Number of Unemployed.	May, 1934.	May, 1935.
Industrial group:
Mining	442,000	434,000
Manufacturing and mechanics	3,494,000	3,494,000
Transportation	1,270,000	1,318,000
Trade	944,000	1,008,000
Domestic and personal service	921,000	934,000

Other industries (1)	298,000	301,000
All industries (2)	7,771,000	7,963,000
Allowance for new workers since 1930 census	1,430,000	1,748,000
Total unemployed	9,201,000	9,711,000

(1) This group includes agriculture, forestry and fishing, public service and professional service. The numbers given are the unemployed workers in 1930, satisfactory data being unavailable from which later changes in unemployment can be computed.

(2) Industrial classification includes 3,188,000 listed as unemployed in census of April, 1930.

Bonds Recede Slightly But Closing Is Firm

Prime Rail and Utility Issues Are Strong in Final Hour.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—The corporate bond market was slightly upset today by the series of rapid developments in the Government's new taxation program, but losses were small and a steadier tone prevailed in late trading. U. S. Governments also were unsettled.

In contrast to the extreme nervousness displayed by all types of corporate securities last week when the President first made known his tax objectives, today's decline was orderly, and at no time was there any great pressure.

High-priced rail and utility bonds were sufficiently resistent during the final hour of trading to create a better all-round tone, and the main body of bonds ended well up from the lows of the day. A handful of favorites jumped into the plus column just before the close with small gains over Tuesday's finals.

The Associated Press averages were .2 of a point lower to .1 of a point higher. Transfers aggregated $12,300,000, par value, compared with $12,564,000 the day before.

Trades Center In July Cotton

Fluctuations Narrow With Closing 1 Point Down to 1 Up.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 25.—Interest in cotton trade centered on the near month situation again today. A large part of the business was connected with the liquidation of July contracts. Fluctuations were narrow with the market closing 1 point lower to 1 higher.

While no delivery notices were issued against July there was considerable liquidation of that position. This was absorbed by shorts or the trade. After showing net advances of about 2 to 4 points during the morning, prices eased later.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Although business slowed down, a good tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were maintained despite the flotation of many new issues, and German bonds, Argentine rails and gold mining shares improved. Industrials were quiet and the market closed steady.

Paris—Rentes and industrial shares declined in a very quiet session on the bourse today. International issues were irregular. The market closed weak.

Berlin—With trading inactive, quotations on the boerse slipped slightly under yesterday's level. The closing was calm.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading foreign currencies lost some of their recent firmness against the dollar in principal exchange centers yesterday. In London the dollar gained slightly at 4.95 to the pound sterling, while in New York trading the dollar was unchanged at 14.95¼.

The American unit was firm in Paris at the equivalent of 6.629 cents to the French franc, while in New York the franc lost .00¼ of a cent at 6.63½ cents.

Guilders declined .04 of a cent at 68.25 cents. Swiss francs were .02 of a cent lower at 32.80 cents, and Belgas were down .01½ of a cent at 16.90½ cents.

Reichsbank Statement.

Berlin, June 25 (AP).—The Reichsbank statement as of June 22, shows the following changes in Reichsmarks: Gold and bullion increased 706,000; reserve in foreign currencies increased 21,000; bills of exchange and cheques decreased 153,963,-000; silver and other coins increased 41,814,000; notes on other banks increased 64,000; advances decreased 2,971,000; investments decreased 337,000; other assets increased 6,770,000; notes in circulation decreased 92,289,000; other maturing obligations decreased 17,632,000; other liabilities increased 2,024,000.

Total gold holdings 84,741,000. Note coverage, 2.53 per cent. Rate of discount, 4 per cent.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

In the case of Zerah Colburn's childhood mathematical wizardry, scientists were particularly interested, thinking that perhaps some heretofore undiscovered law of numbers was being used by the child in performing his amazing mental feats. He worked problems so fast that it seemed impossible he was using ordinary methods—and in some of the problems he solved no known rule could be followed.

Zerah Colburn was self-taught, and if he did follow some mysterious system in his calculations he was unable as a child to explain it. He quickly multiplied and divided, raised numbers to various powers, extracted square and cube roots, and gave factors of numbers almost as quickly as they were stated. Perhaps the most amazing thing that Zerah Colburn was able to do was determine in a few seconds whether a number was prime or not—that is, whether it could be divided by any other number except unity.

On one occasion, while he was being questioned by French mathematicians, they tried to catch him in an error by asking him to give the factors of a 9-digit number—a number which they thought was a prime number having no factors. Young Colburn quickly gave the answer, proving that the learned mathematicians were wrong. No way is known, except by trial and error, to determine when a number is prime.

Strange as it seems, the older Colburn became, the less agile his mind became—and by the time he reached manhood he was unable to perform any of his childhood feats.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

If Sock-the-Rich Idea Continues.

Washington, D. C., June 26, 1945: The ragged and careworn stranger who has been hanging around the White House all week was identified today. He is Henry Ford, who founded and built up a great automobile business. Hank came to Washington to turn over what's left of his business to the Government.

"You win," he said simply.

"Just what happened?" asked a reporter.

"I can't think of anything that didn't," was his answer. "But it's nice to know that I can now drop everything and go some place where I won't see another tax blank.'

Andy Mellon is expected in soon. He is just waiting to scrape together the car fare from Pittsburgh to Washington. The Government has everything that ever belonged to Mr. Mellon, but insists that he come down and submit to a personal search of his wearing apparel.

"What wearing apparel?" gasped Mr. Mellon in surprise when told of this. He was in his bare feet, but had on an undershirt and a pair of old trousers, which the administration had consented to let him retain as keepsakes.

"How does it seem to be broke?" the former millionaire was asked.

"In a way it's a wonderful relief," he sighed, leaping at a cigar butt dropped by a passing workman. "You have no idea of the terrible strain it was trying to retain money."

"How about the broader life?" he was asked.

"I guess I've got it now all right," was the reply.

John D. Rockefeller arrived at the White House today. "It was good fun," he said. "I hitch-hiked, but everybody was pretty nice to me."

Mr. Rockefeller wore a tattered bathrobe and a pair of old shoes loaned by the Treasury Department. He chuckled merrily as he entered the White House, waved a bright new dime, and said, "Here's one thing you boys forgot!"

It was taken from him at once.

"See?" said a well-known Senator. "What did I tell you? You can't trust these rich men at all!"

"Mr. Rockefeller, what are our reactions to being dry-cleaned like this?" he was asked.

"Well, it seems pretty soothing to know that I can have some of this social security at last."

No Set-Up.

Recovery may come to America, but if it does it will know it has been through a terrible battle.

Elmer Twitchell, after looking over all those pictures of prominent Americans in cap and gown, expresses the opinion that they'd look a heap sight better in shorts.

Add similes: as ignored as a great transatlantic liner on its second trip.

Harmon Waley, the kidnaper sentenced to 45 years, becomes eligible for parole after 15, but it doesn't seem right to keep the parole board waiting all that time.

Can you remember away back when they didn't call 'em swim suits?

APPLE MARY By Martha Orr

DO YOU THINK POOR MR. WEARY GOT THE JOB YOU TOLD HIM ABOUT, GRAN'MA?
THINK HE GOT IT? WHY DENNIE, I KNOW HE DID. I TOLD MR. SPROCKETT TO GIVE IT TO HIM.
MR. SPROCKETT WAS PRETTY UPSET ABOUT IT, TOO. HE THINKS I'M FOOLISH TO SPEND MY MONEY ON ALL THESE POOR PEOPLE.
MAYBE MR. SPROCKETT WAS NEVER POOR LIKE WE WERE, GRAN'MA. SO HE WOULDN'T UNDERSTAND.
I TOLD HIM TO PAY MR. WEARY A WEEK IN ADVANCE, SO HE'D HAVE ENOUGH TO LIVE ON UNTIL HE REALLY GETS STARTED WORKING.
MR. WEARY DIDN'T ACT VERY PLEASED OVER GETTING A JOB WHEN YOU TOLD HIM TO GO SEE ABOUT IT.
HE'D JUST HAD SO MUCH BAD LUCK, IT DIDN'T SEEM TO HIM LIKE ANYTHING GOOD COULD HAPPEN ANYMORE. BUT HE DOESN'T KNOW ABOUT OLD APPLE MARY'S LUCKY APPLES. HE'LL BE ALL RIGHT FROM NOW ON.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Worry By Harry J. Tuthill

Such crust! This dizzy Count fanning me with those trick whiskers while hinting Hartford Oakdale helped Ollie and Gus get my gray suit and...
George Bungle, don't bellow so loudly.
Also, I don't like his whiskers. All the time I was explaining about Gus and Ollie taking his papers, I felt as if I was talking to somebody hiding in a haystack.
Oh why worry about such drivel?
Listen Jo, kindly let us not forget that the law... get that... the law says, Punish the guilty, but protect the innocent.
What good will all the laws in the world do after Ollie... a perfect 44... gets into my gowns once and takes a good deep breath?
Don't fret! I'll find Gus. I'll also have Hartford toddle up here so I can see our Mr. Whiskers' offer to frisk him for "the papers."

Camp Will Care For 60 Victims Of Tuberculosis

Children to Be Lodged in Allison School and Tents Nearby.

A summer tuberculosis camp to care for 60 children will be opened July 1 by the District Tuberculosis Association, with Miss Margaret H. Craig, a teacher in the Allison Health School, as superintendent, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, the association's managing director.

Part of the children, all of whom have been diagnosed as having the childhood type of tuberculosis, will be housed in the Allison School Building at Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. The rest will be cared for in tents on grounds adjacent to the school.

Miss Craig, a graduate of George Washington University, was for four years health councilor of Camp Matoaka for Girls on Chesapeake Bay. Formerly she had charge of child health activities of the Tuberculosis Association, including nutrition clinics and health surveys in the city public schools.

Miss Eleanor Crowley, graduate of Wilson Teachers College and George Washington University, with three years' experience at Camp Matoaka; Miss Isabel Conway, graduate of Wilson Teachers College with experience at Camp Matoaka and Camp Good Will; Miss Lillie James, graduate of Wilson Teachers College; Miss Sara Shriner, R. N., with nursing experience three years at Walter Reed Hospital besides teaching and public health work; Miss Geneva Bryan, R. N., an experienced nurse who was with the camp last season; Miss Mabel E. Johnson, R. N., a registered nurse studying at Howard University and two years a volunteer at the Tuberculosis Clinic. Camp dietitian will be Miss Nellie B. Berry, who has had experience in 4-H Camps.

Better Business Bureau Officers Are Selected

Lanier P. McLachlen, president of the McLachlen Banking Corporation, was elected chairman of the board of the Better Business Bureau at its luncheon meeting yesterday.

Other officers named were: Vice chairman, B. B. Burgunder, of S. Kann Sons Co.; treasurer, Y. E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker & Co., and counsel, R. B. Lyon, of Lyon & Lyon.

On the Air Today

Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle and Budd on July 2 will begin a new series of attempts to revolutionize radio, paired with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians.

The Colonel and Budd will serve as masters of ceremony, aided by the frog-voiced Poley McClintock and scat-singing Johnny Davis from the Waring band. It should be noted also they plan to revive their interviews with Little Known Men of Industry.

If the Colonel and Budd dip into the well of imagery and pull out better characters than Meticulous G. Hush, who puts tissue paper between calling cards but never calling cards between tissue paper; Mr. Has, who invented blowing on spectacles before wiping them, and Gregory Longcotton, the man who stuffs cotton in pill bottles—the well, in truth, is without bottom.

Dr. Philip James' prize-winning composition in the N.B.C. Orchestral Composition contest, 1932, entitled "Station WGZBX" will be featured in NBC's Symphonic Hour tonight, WMAL, 9:15 p. m. The program is entirely of compositions by organists . . . Claudia and Capt. Lacy are to be married tonight. The preparations have been going on for weeks in One Man's Family, WRC, 7 p. m. . . . You want to catch Fred Allen tonight when the Town Hall opens at 8 o'clock, WRC, because this is Allen's last airing for several weeks. Even a radio comedian has to take a vacation. Beginning next week Jim Harkins pinch-hits for Fred, stepping into a role to be known as "Mayor of Bedlamville."

Many folks undoubtedly have wondered how to spell that euphonic combination of syllables which literally means someone is having a mess of trouble. Now steps forth the press agent for Gracie Allen and George Burns and states that Gracie continues tonight with more of the family "defugelties." There it is. And a swell word it is. Gracie and George will air their superabundance of relatives at 9 p. m., WJSV.

Batting for Morgan Baker.

PERSONNEL in several Government emergency agencies will undergo some shifting and in a few cases additional help will be taken on July 1.

Slight reduction in personnel will result from combining the Land Policy Section, AAA, and the Rural Rehabilitation Section, FERA, under the Resettlement Administration, John F. Carter, director of information, Resettlement Administration, announced yesterday. This is part of a move to co-ordinate and unify emergency agencies. Just what reduction in employes will be necessary is not definitely known yet, Carter said.

Kenneth Clark, former newspaperman, has assumed the duties of chief, Press Section, Resettlement Administration, Carter announced.

W. W. Richardson, personnel director, General Accounting Office, stated yesterday no additional applications for jobs would be given out until the merit of those already received has been checked. There are several hundred applications already on file for each job that will be open on July 1, Richardson explained.

Executing a program of collaboration among departments, a number of clerks are being transferred from the Treasury Department to the FERA, according to Morton Milford, director of press relations, FERA. The majority of these transferred employes will write FERA checks, he said.

According to officials at Rural Electrification Administration, no immediate change in personnel is planned. However, the field personnel probably will be extended in the near future, it was indicated.

Government employes will anxiously await the fate of the leave bills today. Since they have been placed on the House union calendar, it is possible they will be brought before the House today, but no prediction from Capitol Hill as to their destiny was forthcoming. If the bills fail to go before the House today, they will have another chance on the consent calendar Monday.

Committee Report.

A report from the rent and housing committee will be a feature of the monthly meeting of the Agriculture Branch, N. F. F. E., at 8 p. m. today, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, A. C. Edwards, (C), president, announces.

John J. Colliton (C), Compliance Division, NRA, was a guest of the Philadelphia Club on an outing at Marshall Hall yesterday.

$1,620 to $4,600 Jobs.

Open competitive editor and illustrator examinations have been announced by the Civil Service Commission as follows:

Technical editor, and senior and associate technical editors, $3,200 to $4,600 a year, Forest Service, Department of Agriculture. The closing date is July 15.

Commercial illustrator, $1,800 a year, and assistant commercial illustrator, $1,620 a year, Farm Credit Administration. The closing date is July 15.

Additional information may be obtained at the office of the Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Delegates of the Adjutant General's Office Lodge, No. 2, A. F. G. E., to the national convention in Cincinnati in September are Harry J. Keller, G. Carroll Dimond and Samuel C. Sacco. The lodge has adopted eight resolutions to present at the convention.

Agriculture Postettes.

Members of the Guild, A. and R. Association, as well as other Department of Agriculture employes, have been invited to attend the dance on the patio of the third and fourth wings, Agriculture Building, Friday at 8:30 p. m. Music will be furnished by the department Jazz Symphonette, Charles Guion directing.

Miss Cecil Stigall, AHD, has as her guest this week Miss Margaret Stigall, of Richmond, Va.

Dr. C. D. Lowe, AHD, has returned to his office after visiting points in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, in connection with the regular livestock extension work.

D. A. Spencer, AHD, has gone to Miles City, Mont., and Dubois, Idaho, on official business.

Courses in Game Management.

The Bureau of Biological Survey will actively support courses in game management to be set up in several State universities, according to an announcement from the Department of Agriculture. The Survey will supply instructors and cooperate with the universities and with State game commissions in financing this new development. The staffs of the new courses will do research work in wild life subjects as well as in teaching the application of modern game management methods.

Mrs. Gertrude Mills (C), Public Roads, has returned from a vacation at the Virginia seacoast, where she went deep-sea fishing.

Appointment of Charles E. Hull, a consulting engineer at the Federal Housing Administration, to a colonelcy on the staff of Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky was in recognition of his work and capabilities, his friends pointed out yesterday. Mr. Hull already holds the rank of captain in the Engineering Corps of the National Guard. Since joining FHA he has been one of the hardest-working members of that organization.

Policeman Held Guilty Of Intoxication Charge

The Police Trial Board yesterday upheld intoxication charges against Policeman Chester A. Dodson, a driver attached to headquarters. It was recommended that he be fined $100 and transferred to the Second Precinct.

Penalty Doubles.

It is often a question whether a player should make a Penalty Double or be satisfied with an undoubled set. Frequently, the double enables declarer to fulfill an otherwise unmakable contract. It clearly shows where the strength lies and this information becomes invaluable to declarer in making a "close" contract.

Squeeze for Six.

On the hand below South made six notrump by successfully playing for a squeeze rather than a simple finesse because an unwise double by West marked him with certain high cards.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 7 ♡ 7 5 ◇ 10 4 ♣ A K Q 9 7 4
♠ 8 6 5 ♡ K J 8 4 ◇ K Q J 3 ♣ J 3	W N E S	♠ 10 4 3 2 ♡ 9 6 3 2 ◇ 7 6 5 2 ♣ 10
	♠ K J 9 ♡ A Q 10 ◇ A 9 8 ♣ 8 6 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	2NT	Pass
4NT	Pass	5NT	Pass
6NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

The Play.

West opened the diamond King. South saw he had 11 tricks, with a possible heart finesse for the twelfth, but because of the double he felt sure West must hold the heart King.

He won the trick with the Ace of diamonds in his own hand and ran off three spade tricks and six club tricks. West was squeezed and could not keep both high diamonds and a guard for the heart King, so he bared down to the diamond Queen and was immediately thrown in with it. This forced him to lead up to South's heart tenace, giving South the last two tricks and fulfilling the contract.

Comment.

Had West kept two high diamonds and the lone King of hearts, South would have played his Ace of hearts, dropping the blank King and thus making the heart Queen good for the twelfth trick.

Had West not doubled, it is possible declarer would have played the hand in the same way, but after the diamond King is opened it seems more logical to play East for the heart King, rather than assume West holds all the strength.
